Courtesy to Bruins

COURTESY to visitors on the campus has been one of the features of Oregon spirit which has attracted favorable comment from the hundreds from other universities and the business world at large.

A small incident occurred last Friday afternoon at Hayward field which caused comment of the other type among the members of the UCLA football squad.

When the Bruins took the field for a light workout before their game Saturday, there were a number of Oregon football men on the gridiron working out.

Contrary to all ethics of sportsmanship, these men refused or failed to let the UCLA team have the field for their practice. Courtesy of the field for a pre-game practice is one of the unwritten laws of football.

Oregon should make an apology to the visitors for this breach of athletic etiquette and take steps to see that it does not take place again. The discourteous manners of Webfoots who continue to hold their own practice after the opposing team is on the gridiron, while they are not common to Oregon teams, it is believed, can quickly give the university a black eye in the sports world.

In Defense of a Tradition

FOR years the tradition has been that of the Women's league to sell chrysanthemums for Homecoming. The league has always taken the orders for the flowers, which all co-eds wear the annual week-end, and many profits have been added to their foreign scholarship fund.

This tradition has always been theirs and is a worth-while one. This year several local florists and agents from out-of-town firms have made their appearance to sell chrysanthemums for Homecoming.

The Emerald does not feel that such agencies should be patronized. Fairness may be shown to the local florists when the contract is made by the Women's league for all flowers they sell by purchasing from a different Eugene dealer each year.

Should the executive council see fit to take action, such sales campaigns by outsiders might be curbed. One of the permanent motions of the A. S. U. O. constitution, passed February, 1922, states, "The executive council prohibited promiscuous selling of merchandise of any kind . . . or souvenirs upon the university property and this shall be construed to include sales by campus organizations."

Dormitory Needs Name

HOW much longer is the university going to leave the men's dormitory over on Onyx street unnamed? Most buildings on university camp, especially living organizations, have names, and in view of the difficulty in deciding whether to call it the "men's new dorm" or "new men's dorm," the university owes it to the student body to christen the structure. Since this naming custom seems to favor the recognition of men who have done much for Oregon, like Condon, Villard, Deady, and Gerlinger, Dean John Straub might be the next in line for such a high honor.

Indiana shows moving pictures at its student body assemblies. Maybe Oregon might have been able to get larger turnouts, too, if they resorted to the appeal to the eye instead of the ear.

Dad's Day was a great success. Even though it is only three years old it is one of the best traditions Oregon now has.

The Collegiate Pulse

WHAT'S BEING DONE?

It was cold in war-time France that October day in 1918—cold and muddy. Heavy mud, thick mud, clung to starchy boots of ex-Washington '20 as he plugged along. It's not hard to picture him—ex-Washington '20.

He dropped an L. A. course to enlist. That center room on the second floor of Denny Hall which looks toward the lake was a favorite of his.

Ex-Washington '20 never graduated—not from college. A droning machine gun saw to that eleven years ago.

His name? It's not important except that it's about half-way down the list on the little bronze tablet which hugs a grey stone at the entrance to the campus at Seventeenth.

Before many days pass by, The Daily hopes that plans will be perfected for an Armistice day celebration on November 11 which will do justice to the spirit that sent ex-Washington '20 to France. —University of Washington Daily.

Eberhart Writes Of Psych Work At Northwestern

Oregon Graduate Sends Word to Dr. Conklin Of New Duties

Carol Eberhart, who graduated last year from the psychology department, and who received a fellowship at Northwestern university, is taking an active part in the psychology work being done at the Evanston, Illinois, school, according to word received by Dr. Edmund S. Conklin, head of the psychology department.

Eberhart, who was also an Oregon letterman in basketball, is doing assistant work for three professors at Northwestern. In a comprehensive examination taken at the beginning of the year he placed just beneath two students who are working for their doctor's degrees and he placed above all others working for master's degrees. In the history and social sections he ranked first.

At Northwestern practically all the psychology text books have been written by members of the faculty, his letter states. The apparent interest in Oregon has transformed him into an information bureau on the western part of the country. In Illinois all the people drive Lincolns or Packards or Rolls-Royces with chauffeurs included, but the scenery at Oregon easily compares with that of Lake Michigan, he writes.

"Eyes" for blind flying!

Three new G-E contributions to the conquest of the air

LINDBERGH, flying blind much of the way, hit Ireland "on the nose" as he winged toward Paris. Now, as an aid to air navigation comes the magneto compass, a product of General Electric research, which gives pilots a navigating instrument of extraordinary accuracy. Meanwhile, two other General Electric contributions to aviation have been developed—the electric gasoline gauge and the radio echo altimeter. The ordinary altimeter shows only height above sea level. The radio echo altimeter warns the pilot of his actual distance above ground or water by flashing green, yellow, and red lights on the instrument board.

Every year hundreds of college-trained men and women enter the employment of General Electric. Research, similar to that which developed "eyes" for blind flying, is one of the many fields of endeavor in which they play an important part.
