Honolulu Scribe Here Already Benefiel Named on Committee What! Another Kitzmiller? ..

By Harry Van Dine

DON WATSON, who holds down the position of sports editor on the Honolulu Star Bulletin, was a very interested spectator at the recent Oregon State-Washington State game in Portland. Watson is over here on the mainland for several reasons, the most important of which is to see the Oregon-Hawaii game on November 23.

THE Honolulu scribe declared after the Aggie-Cougar game that the University of Hawaii eleven is much faster than either of those teams. He admitted that the Rainbows' line attack wasn't quite as powerful but he declared that Otto Klum's men played a much more spectacular game.

WATSON will attend the Stanford-Washington game at Seattle this week and the University of Southern California-Notre-Dame battle while here. He will take care of the Hawaii team while they are in Portland.

JACK BENEFIEL, Oregon's busy graduate manager, has been named on a committee appointed by Mayor George Baker, of Portland, to entertain the Hawaiian team and its rooters.

WHAT! Another Kitzmiller? This is the heading of an article in the University of Washington Daily of October 30. The story was written by a Husky scribe, commenting on the great playing of Don Watts, freshman back, against the Washington Babes in their recent game.

CONGRESS CLUB MEN TO DISCUSS R.O.T.C.

"Is the R. O. T. C. antagonistic to modern world diplomacy?" will be the subject for discussion at the meeting of the Congress club tonight at 7:30 at the College Side Inn.

Yearling Gridders Prepare For Rook Game At Medford

Prink's Team Will Travel South Friday

First of Two Game Series Will Be Toughest Of Schedule

Dan Sheehy, Quarterback Confined to Bed

With the preliminary portion of their schedule out of the way, Coach Prink Callison's freshman football charges have embarked on an intensive training grind for the two-game series with the Oregon State Rooks, the first game of which will be played at Medford, Saturday, November 9.

There remain but two sessions of work between now and 1 o'clock Friday, the time when the Yearlings start their trek to the southern city, and Prink and his assistants are going to have to step right along to accomplish what has been planned in the way of improvements and refinements.

Frosh Well Scouted The Frosh were well scouted in their game with Centralia and the Rooks will enter the Medford fray armed with a lot of pertinent information about their opponents.

No injuries were received in Friday's contest but there is one man whose ability to play is at present doubtful. This is Dan Sheehy, who is confined to the infirmary, being troubled with some form of intestinal trouble.

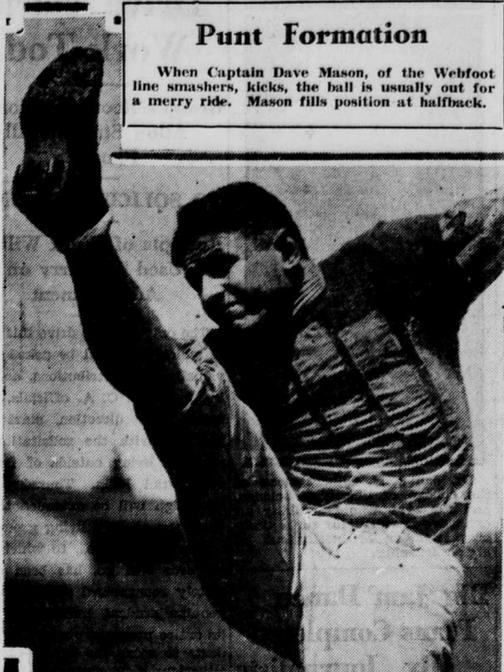

Regular Team Functions Well The regular team functioned well against Centralia but more gratifying was the showing of the substitutes who entered the fray. Len Rands, who is now alternating with Cliff Garnett in Dan Sheehy's quarterback position, displayed the most headwork calling plays against Centralia and when the occasion arose, carried the ball in good style, accounting for one of the Yearling touch-downs.

No changes, other than that of quarterback, have been made in the lineup, Johnny Hare and Red Decker remaining at end and the rest of the team lining up as follows: Bill Morgan and Sherwood Billings, tackles; Jack Hughes and Al Stoehr, guards; Bernie Hughes, center; Cliff Garnett, quarter; Don Watts and George Currie, halves; and Jack Rushlow, fullback.

A meeting of the entire day staff will be held today in room 105 at the Journalism building, 4 o'clock.

Punt Formation

When Captain Dave Mason, of the Webfoot line smashers, kicks, the ball is usually out for a merry ride. Mason fills position at halfback.

Five Oregon Grid Players Close Careers

Four Oregon football players will play their last conference football in the annual Homecoming game against Oregon State. George Stadelman, who broke his ankle in the Idaho game, will not be able to take another whack at the Aggies, and he makes the fifth man who will be lost to the team.

Sphinx Pushes Phi Delts Out of Donut Tourney

Milligan's Five Goes Down Before Independent Attack, 16-10

Reversing their former encounter with the Phi Delts, the Sphinx took another step toward the championship of League F with a well earned 16 to 10 victory over Scott Milligan's hopefuls, and this time there was no doubt of Sphinx superiority.

The winners, however, got off to a shaky start, bombarding the basket with futile attempts, while Rogers sank three long shots to give his teammates a comfortable margin at the half. The second half was an entirely different story. While Milligan vainly exhorted his charges, the smooth passing attack of the Sphinx soon placed an ever widening margin between the teams.

The Kappa Sig huskies remain as the only obstacle for the Sphinx to hurdle in their championship drive. The independent boys have already taken the measure of the Kappa Sigs, but unless their shooting is improved in Thursday's game, they are not likely to repeat their previous performance.

Let Up in Varsity Schedule Chance To Better Plays

Hatton, Moeller Showing Class in Competition For Fullback Job

The varsity coaches are taking advantage of the two-week let-up in schedule before the O. S. C. game here at Homecoming, and are using a lot of practice time reviewing fundamentals.

The pressure of playing a game each week such as Oregon has so far is telling on any team, and the coaches welcome the opportunity of slowing down to check up on a lot of stuff for which they had dared not stop before.

Statistics have shown that there have been plenty of leaks and inconsistencies in the Webfoot playing. These have been carefully analyzed by the coaches, and they are making special efforts toward criticizing individuals. Previously the main object of the practice was to organize the team into working condition.

Men are not so quickly forgiven these days for dropping passes or missing tackles as they were at the start of the season. The workouts are conducted on a much higher plane.

The hottest spot of competition at present is the fullback position. Both Hal Hatton and Ed Moeller are showing up well for the job. The natural styles of play of these two men are different, and that makes them a valuable combination for the team, since they can be used alternately with much the same effect as right and left-handed pitchers.

Moeller is heavier and a bit faster than Hatton, and perhaps has a little the edge on defensive work. He is potentially terrific on plunging once he gets his head down and plows, but so far he has not found himself altogether in that capacity.

Hatton is a little lighter than the average fullback, but he handles the ball well, and seems to have the faculty of picking his holes rather than relying too much on his weight and drive to make them for him. In McEwan's system, the fullback and quarterback are the only ones who get the ball from center, and because of that, the ability of a fullback to handle the ball is more essential than on most other teams.

Up till now Chuck Williams has had a bad leg, but he's beginning to get back into good shape. Williams has had more experience in the wing back position than any man on the squad, and can be expected to do a lot of great blocking and defensive work in the O. S. C. game.

C. C.: Nope; easy to pick up.

Tennis Opponents Urged To Visit Men's Gym Office

Tournaments in Progress; Freshman Finals Begin Tuesday Afternoon

The progress of the tennis tournament has been very slow but it will be speeded up today. Either those who are behind in their matches will play them off before tonight or their names will be whacked off the list.

It has been difficult for some men to get in touch with their opponents. Jack Hewitt, manager of the tournament, urges all men to come around to the men's gym office where it may be possible to help them get acquainted with those whom they are supposed to play.

The finals of the varsity-frosh section will be played off next Tuesday at 2 o'clock, when Bradshaw Harrison will play Stanley Lockwood. Jack Kaplan and Tom White have gone into the third round of the experienced tennis men's section. Last warning to finish the second round of this section today is given to Tom Mountain versus Bob Guile, and Verne Elliot versus Al McLaren. There are also four matches to be played in the consolation part of this section.

The inexperienced men's section has reached the third round or semi-finals. Freeman Young is matched against Alan Spalding, and Bill Ludlow against Knox. The two who win will play for the championship.

In all three sections consolation tournaments are being played and the winner of each will have a chance to beat the respective winners of the championship tournaments.

PHYSICAL TESTS WILL START SOON

Physical ability tests will be given next Saturday morning in the men's gym. They will be held in two sections, one starting at 8 o'clock and the other at 10. Each group will be limited to fifteen men. Those wishing to get out of regular gym classes by this means should sign up for the tests immediately.

On Saturday, November 23, tests will be given to a group limited to 20 men at 9 o'clock. This will be the final physical ability test this term.
