Hagen To Play Moe Today . . .
First Night Game Played . . .
Wilderman Leaves for Medford

By Harry Van Dine

OREGON golf followers will be given a chance to see one of the world's greatest exponents of the game in action today, when Walter Hagen plays Don Moe over the Eugene Golf and Country club course. Hagen recently competed in the Oregon Open at the Columbia Country club, in Portland, and will play only one other match aside from today's while in Oregon. It should be a great match, with Moe, considered one of the nation's best young golfers pitted against Hagen, who is a master at the game. Moe won the Pacific Coast intercollegiate championship this year and is a former Oregon state title holder. The match will give nation wide publicity to the university and a large following of students should be on hand to witness the affair.

THIS new idea of night football games was given a trial last week, when the University of Washington Huskies and the College of Puget Sound met under the arc lights in the Tacoma stadium. From a financial viewpoint the game was a success as over 25,000 spectators thronged through the turnstiles to see the tilt. It was the first time a game had been played at night in the northwest, and it drew well considering the standings of the teams participating. The Huskies perked up and had little trouble with the Loggers, running up a 72 to 0 score.

It is reported that spectators have been squawking over the affair, though, as a heavy mist all but blotted out the playing field during the evening. Only once during the last three minutes did the mist lift enough to enable the fans to see the whole field. Washington sports writers kindly blamed it all on the "Oregon mist" which hung over the field. During the greater part of the evening the fans sat in the stands and tried vainly to figure out just who was who, and whether or not the referee had gone home. It will be interesting to watch the new rooting tactics if night battles continue, however, as the sky will be full of fireworks of all sorts and lighted stunts in rooting sections should be more spectacular. Old fashioned Fourth of July sparklers could be used to advantage, in place of card stunts, and colored light effects would be an added attraction to the game. It is doubtful in our minds if the evening games will ever attain great popularity in the northwest due to the weather conditions, as it is hard to tell a couple of months ahead of time on which night there will be a nice big full moon and clear sky.

SAMMY WILDERMAN will leave today for Medford to handle the publicity for the Oregon State Rook-Oregon Fresh game Saturday. When Sammy goes into a town seeking publicity for an Oregon team he usually gets it and we are sure the game will be a big success. It will be the first time in history that the people of the Pearl capital have been hosts to a college game and much interest has been stirred up over the outcome. Another big point that is of interest to the southern metropolis is that Prink Callison and six of his yearling gridders are former Medford residents. The Oregon freshmen are determined to keep their winning record intact and drub the Rooks.

ONLY three conference football games are on tap for this week-end, and none are expected to affect the race for the title. California, the team that is boss of the league at present, meets the Montana Grizzlies at Berkeley, and should have little trouble winning. The Grizzlies have yet to break into the win column, although they tied Washington earlier in the season. Stanford journeys to Seattle to meet the Huskies and Pop Warner should have little trouble taking home the bacon. The Huskies are a much better team than when Southern California trounced them, but they are not in the class of the Cards. Washington State will be hosts to Leo Calland's fighting Idaho eleven, at Pullman. The Cougars should come out on top, although the Vandals have had two weeks in which to prepare for Washington State. Both Oregon and Oregon State will rest in preparation for their annual clash for supremacy, to be held at Eugene November 16. Southern California tangles with Nevada at Los Angeles.

STUDENTS TO BE CHOSEN FOR JOBS

Two representatives of the Pacific Telegraph and Telephone company, L. W. Ross, employment and educational supervisor, and John Gamble were on the campus yesterday to confer with Dean David E. Faville, Dr. William P. Boynton, and Professor Victor P. Morris about plans for interviewing students as prospective employees with the telephone company.

It is customary for certain students to be chosen each year from the university to work for the telephone company. Mr. Ross and Mr. Gamble will be here again in January to interview students.

Prink Callison Announces Squad for Medford Game

Trek South Slated for Friday Noon

Total of 25 Men Comprise Yearling Roster for First Rook Game

Two Players for Every Position Included

That there remains but a short time till the referee's whistle opens the first of the annual Frosh Rook football classics was emphasized last night when Prink Callison announced the names of the men who would make the trip to Medford.

The list, totaling 25 men, allows two men for every position on the team with an extra end and two extra backs thrown in for good measure. The men are: ends, Frank Crissman, Red Decker, Johnny Hare, Les King, and George Robertson; tackles, Sherwood Billings, Fred Clift, Carson Mathews, and Bill Morgan; guards, Bill Bowerman, Jack Hughes, Al Stoehr, and Homer Smith; centers, Al Crockett and Bernie Hughes; backs, George Currie, Steve Detmer, Cliff Garnett, Forrest Howerton, Wallace Lawrence, Tom Moores, Len Rands, Jack Rushlow, Dan Sheehey and Don Watts.

Ends Listed

In the end position Johnny Hare and Red Decker, who have consistently held off competition thus far, will probably get the nod when the starting lineup is announced. At tackle Sherwood Billings and Bill Morgan will no doubt be paired off. They have formed a very efficient team in the past games and have proved their worth. At guard Jack Hughes and Al Stoehr will play unless Homer Smith has been able to recover some of his old-time stuff after his enforced lay-off. However, the two Medford boys should get a chance to perform. At center it is almost a foregone conclusion that Bernie Hughes, who has seemed unremovable at the pivot post, will start, though if necessary Al Crockett can be counted upon. In the backfield there is one berth that is any man's job if Dan Sheehey is unable to play. Len Rands and Cliff Garnett have been arguing over it throughout the past week and either one has as much chance as the other to win out. The halves will probably be the two regulars who have stood the acid test of competition thus far, Don Watts and George Currie. With this pair in the game anything can happen. At fullback Jack Rushlow has been most consistent and there seems to be no reason why any change should be made here.

Formation Stressed

At practice last night the coaches reverted to the old repetition theory, running through the plays in skeleton formation until every man should know now, if he didn't before, just what is expected of him on all occasions.

The game Saturday should prove an interesting contest as well as a hard one as the Yearlings have been acquiring a set of plays throughout the past weeks that would make Pop Warner turn green with envy. How they will work against the Rooks remains to be seen.

Students to Be Chosen for Jobs

It is customary for certain students to be chosen each year from the university to work for the telephone company. Mr. Ross and Mr. Gamble will be here again in January to interview students.

Kill the Calf Here Comes the Prodigals

Coach Prink Callison and the Frosh grididers pictured with him should feel sure of a welcome at Medford as Prink turned out state champions at the southern high school last year aided by Cliff Garnett, Al Stoehr, Bernie Hughes, Jack Hughes and Bill Morgan, members of his champion team.

Don Moe To Play Exhibition Game With W. Hagen

Foursome To Start at Two Over Eugene Golf Club Links

Golfing history will be made over the Eugene Golf and Country club course this afternoon when the great Walter Hagen will play in a foursome match. The match will start at 2 o'clock and Oregon's premier golfer, Don Moe, will also play. Earl Immell and Todd Gardner, the professional at the club, will complete the foursome.

Hagen is the holder of the British open championship and has won the coveted title four different times. He has also won the American open twice, and the national professional championship five times. He is considered one of the most colorful and with Bobby Jones is one of the two best golfers in the world.

Moe is king of the coast inter-collegiate golfers and won the one of the best showmen in the country.
