Liquor and the Colleges

FOR THE second time in the past two weeks, newspapers have contained stories of fraternity houses in middle western universities being raided and students being arrested for carrying on bootlegging operations.

The latest offenders were members of the Gamma Eta Gamma fraternity at the University of Illinois. Considerable supplies of alcohol, gin and whiskey were confiscated.

While it is a deplorable thing, when looked at in an ethical light, critics who condemn colleges should remember that the college life is but a cross-section of every-day life anywhere in the country.

If there are to be violators of the law in every community which boasts of a main street, college cannot be expected to be a glistening shrine atop the hill, where no evil can originate or flourish in defiance of the laws of the nation.

There is a certain amount of drinking done in this University and every other university in the state, or in every institution of higher education in the United States.

When the United States can look into every walk of life and say "There is no longer alcoholism present," then she can turn her eyes on the college and expect to find a similar condition.

Leaks in the Dike

SINCE the avowed purpose of holding the big conference football games in Portland is to make money, the University is losing a comfortable sum through the "bootleg" sale of student tickets to alumni or other friends of students in Portland.

The student exchanges his A. S. U. O. card for a ticket and either sells this or sends it to friends in Portland. The University and associated students get no direct return from such a transaction.

At the graduate manager's office wheels are turning to devise means of curbing this sale of student tickets, but as yet no workable plan has been produced.

Chicago, due to lack of funds, will close its public schools for two months in December and January, the board of education declares.

A man in the east was burned severely when his wooden leg caught fire. Does anyone know where we can buy asbestos hats?

A poet recently said that when he could not sleep he wrote poetry. When we can not sleep we'll read it.

DEFENDS "LEMON TODDY" To the Editor: A matter that has puzzled me for some time is the attitude of some University officials toward the humor columns of the Emerald.

You know and I know that straight filth isn't humor, but a few subtle wise cracks add that racy touch to a joke which the public craves.

Such jokes are mercilessly censored from the Emerald humor column. Very often quite innocent jokes are excluded from the column because someone's narrow evil-mindedness succeeds in squeezing dirt from them.

Now the idea of censoring questionable reading matter may be all well and good, and I would find no room for criticism if the policy of excluding it were consistently pursued by the powers that be.

I like to read a joke now and then that has a racy tang, or a subtle allusion to the obscene, but it certainly disgusts even my evil mind to read page after page of unfiltered gutter slime.

"GOOD MOURNING," SAID THE UNDERTAKER, AS HE WATCHED THE WEeping WIDOW PUT AN ONION IN HER HANDKERCHIEF.

Which only goes to show how even our daily greetings may be turned around.

And now with Oscar Wilde on the campus it seems quite strange people aren't wearing sunflowers.

Who? Why, Mother Nature of course. We suggest that the coal miners buy a cake of Ivory and have some good clean fun at home.

BLACKOUT What makes you think Mary is such a nice girl? She told me she had a hope-chest.

I get a big kick out of going with Marge. Yeh? Her old man got a big kick out of me once, too.

AND I CALL HER MY MUCILAGE BECAUSE SHE'S SO STUCK ON ME.

TOMORROW'S PUTRID PUN "Asterisk" (*) in a sentence. No football player should be And I call her my Mucilage girl because she's so stuck on me.

We note that the editor of the O. S. C. Barometer has been involved in two automobile accidents in the past month.

Anyway, we are sure of one thing, when better sororities are made, the Sigma Nus won't "make" them.

Did you know Moses was a Toreodor? How come? Why, don't you remember how the Egyptian princess rescued him from the Bull Rushes?

A FRESHMAN HONOR SOCIETY. When the day comes for election of seniors to Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi, the recognition has come too late to serve one purpose of these societies—that of inspiring students to a real interest in high scholarship. For this reason Phi Beta Kappa on some campuses has sponsored the formation of a national freshman honor society, Phi Eta Sigma, to which all freshmen making grades of half A and half B are eligible. It was founded by Phi Betes, not as a competitor, but to bring the desirability of good standings more concretely before the eyes of freshmen.

Many men who go out to make the freshman organization keep up the high standard for four years, and eventually win the coveted key of Phi Beta Kappa.—Washington State Evergreen.

Boy, she sure gave you a dirty look. Who? Why, Mother Nature of course.

Sue's Parrot Found Out That it would be a topsy-turvy world indeed if there were not a new whisper fluttering around each day about what it is possible to pick up around in Eugene's stores, and so like the faithful bird he is brought his tidbits home to help Sue in writing her column, though of course she found some things out herself—and how! So it behooves the wise shopper to listen in while the Green and Yellow Parrot broadcasts.

The Light That Never Fails Now, as well as in the old colonial days, we find that candlelight for soft effects far excels, and when those candles are set in beautifully and intricately designed candelabras and candlesticks the effect is far more lovely. At the Alladin Gift Shop, 41 West Tenth, some very exquisite candlesticks may be found—and don't forget that the unusual may always be discovered there.

Sparkling Touches That glitter their way into the heart of the college girl—pretty buckles that dress up even the simplest of pumps. At Buster Brown's Shoe Store on Willamette may be found some of the loveliest styles of shoe ornaments.

Speaking of Likenesses! The Parrot whispers that he had his picture taken at Romanes over J. C. Penney's—and that it enhances even his splendid looks. So he suggests that the students would be wise to have their photos taken for Christmas gifts.

In Case Your Mind Turns to Gifts You might go to McMorrans & Washburne's and go up to the second floor to the needle department. And then the Parrot went wild, for there he found "pouchie" pets and jumbo pets in very life-like shapes. Also tapestry pictures, needle-point tapestry and rayon pillows in colorful hues.

As Friend to Friend... The Parrot suggests that you go over to that relative of his, the Green Parrot, and get some really good food—food that pleases even the most particular of eaters.
