Webfoot Team Crippled . . .
Varsity Squad Without Manager
Robinson Has Experience . . .
By Harry Van Dine

COACH JOHN McEWAN was assured of very good backing for his Webfoot football team in their two remaining games, with a great pep rally staged yesterday at Villard crossing. The members of the team were in high spirits when they left the campus, due to the cheering of the great crowd of students assembled at the rally. Coach McEwan spoke for the team when he said they would do their very best to win both remaining games, but it will be a great feat if the Oregon squad is able to do that thing. The team will be badly enough crippled when they meet St. Mary's with Stadleman and Kitzmiller out of the lineup, but it will be a very patched up Oregon eleven that will take the field against Florida.

SOME fans say that a team should be able to win games without individual stars — but no team is at its best with five veterans missing, to say nothing of a couple of reserves. The Oregon team that will stack up against the 'Gators down in Miami will be just that way. The long list of those missing will include Kitzmiller, Stadleman, Robinson, Colbert, and Williams, all veterans. Then, to make things worse, Schulz, who is Colbert's understudy, will not participate, nor will Spear. There you have Coach McEwan's problem. It is no easy one and McEwan will have to be a miracle man to overcome those odds.

A COUPLE of other funny things were brought to light yesterday, with the departure of the team. There will be no assistant coach to help McEwan at the St. Mary's battle, imagine that—only one coach at one of the biggest games on Oregon's schedule. Then, Oregon will leave San Francisco without a student manager to take care of the team affairs. Mike Gray was declared ineligible to make the Florida trip and no other manager was named to take his place. So, in addition to having to worry about his team on the field, Coach McEwan will have to care for the minor affairs off the field, such as taxicabs, newspapers, running errands, handling baggage, packing equipment, etc. This is probably the first trip made by a university athletic team of this size without a student manager.

BOBBY ROBINSON, who will play his last game under the Oregon colors against St. Mary's, received some sort of warning yesterday before leaving San Francisco. One of the prominent Portland undertakers establishments sent Bobby an advertisement, telling of their high class funeral service, and it was entitled—"The same kindly care afterward that you gave before." We wonder how Bobby's name ever came to be placed on the prospect list as he seems very much alive and will probably prove this fact to the St. Mary's players Thursday. Bob laughed the situation off and declared that he would send the advertiser his very best regards, but that he would offer him no business for some time to come.

MEMBERS of the varsity squad were proudly wearing their new "O" sweaters when they appeared at the rally Tuesday. The sweaters were distributed just before the team left the Southern Pacific depot yesterday, and the men immediately tried them on. There have been some improvements made in the sweaters this year, and the yellow letters have been changed. The change has greatly improved the appearance of the sweaters and the squad members were much pleased with them.

New Year Tilt Big Possibility For Webfoots

Win Over St. Mary's Team May Result in Listing Of Big Game

Outlook for Florida Scrap Not so Worse

After all the arguing and official handshakes and flip-flops necessary to get 31 players and their coach on the train for California yesterday morning, the fact remains that the games with St. Mary's and Florida are to be played on gridirons.

Although the Oregon supporters have a lot to wait about when they try to anticipate what might happen when the varsity plays St. Mary's Thursday without Kitzmiller or Stadleman, and when the varsity plays Florida under the additional handicap of being without Colbert, Schulz, Spear, Robinson or Williams, there is great possibility that Oregon might not be so bad off after all.

Robinson to Play

Against St. Mary's Oregon still has Bobby Robinson. Famous men are sometimes not recognized until they are dead or have graduated. Robinson is one of the cleverest backs ever in school, and is rated by coaches and players as having more positive potential scoring punch than perhaps any back on the coast.

Colbert, Christensen and Shields will be in the fierce drive against the Gaels. So will Erdley, Archer and Forsta, and Jerrie Lillie.

Williams Receives Praise

Chuck Williams seems to have been overlooked by fans so far this season. He is always overlooked, because of the kind of game he plays as an inconspicuous interference runner. Last Saturday against Hawaii, the plays through the right side of the line, which is Chuck's territory when he plays, clicked as they never have before, according to coaches.

Chuck has been slow in rounding into shape this season, but now he is running better interference than any back on the squad.

A win over St. Mary's may result in Jack Benefield's scheduling the Tournament of Roses game for Oregon this year for the first time since 1920 when the Webfoots lost to Harvard, 6 to 7.

Varsity Weak

When the varsity finally limps out of San Francisco, bereft of stars of all descriptions and colors, it will be so weak on paper that Monmouth Normal could be given a margin of a dozen points by more than one dope peddler, if thoughts keep turning to the men Oregon will lose instead of the men still on the team.

So far this season, there have been so many Webfoots of potential ability that they have not all been put on the field at once. How would both Ed Moeller and Hal Hatton look in the lineup, with Moeller playing his old high school position of tackle?

Steve Fletcher has been fooling around at end all season, yet he is a dandy backfield man. Johnny Londahl, Al Browne, Captain Dave Mason, and John Donahue will still be available in Miami for backfield work. A Londahl-Fletcher pass was one of the most effective scoring weapons the fresh had last year.

When the Oregon reserve team is put on its own responsibility with no veterans sitting on the bench ready to pull it out of difficulties, it is likely to bust loose and make the Florida Alligators gallop for the swamps. It would not be the first reserve team that has ever come through in a pinch.

Portland Dance Well Under Way Says Committee

Colorful Features Will Add To Good Music and Decorations

Plans are rapidly nearing completion for the "Intercollegiate" dance scheduled to be held in Portland at the Masonic Temple Friday night of this week, according to Crosby Owens, chairman of the general committee in charge.

A good orchestra has been secured for the dance, according to the committeemen, and a number of features have been arranged to add to the entertainment for the evening.

The Masonic Temple, which will be decorated for the event with the colors of the three schools, Oregon, Oregon State, and Washington, is one of the largest in the Northwest, and can easily accommodate a large crowd, according to Desendorf.

An extensive campaign is being waged on the three camps to advertise the dance, and it is hoped that a large crowd will attend. During the dance those present will be divided into groups according to their school affiliations, in order to determine the number from each school.

Both the Oregonian and the Journal ran stories and pictures in preparation for the event Sunday, and the dailies of Oregon, Oregon State, and Washington, are devoting a good deal of space to the dance.

The Intercollegiate Aeronautical association, meeting at Columbus, Ohio, recently asked the government to make flying instruction a regular part of the courses of instruction at institutions of higher learning where military training is taught.

Names of Frosh Gridders Worthy Of Awards Listed

25 Men in List of Those Eligible To Receive Numerals

Rushlow Leads Team in High Scoring

Although how they will be rewarded is a question that the freshman class is trying to answer and as yet has reached no definite conclusions the following list of 25 men will be recommended for an award by Prink Callison as those freshman football players whose work during the recently closed season merits some consideration.

The list given out at the office of Virgil D. Earl, director of athletics, includes the following men who played in the two games with the Oregon State Rooks.

Sherwood Billings, Bill Bowerman, Fred Cliff, Alvin Crockett, George Currie, Myron K. Decker, Steve Detmer, Cliff Garnett, Johnny Hare, Forrest Howerton, Bernie Hughes, Jack Hughes, Huston Johnson, Lester King, Wally Laurance, Carson Mathews, Cliff Moore, Bill Morgan, Len Rands, George Robertson, Jack Rushlow, Dan Sheehy, Al Stoehr, and Don Watts.

In their five scheduled games the Frosh were quite successful, winning four of the games easily and losing one by a slim one point margin to the Rooks. They scored a total of 125 points against their opponents 39. Jack Rushlow at the No. 3 backfield position scored 42 of these points, scoring 7 touchdowns to lead his team in the race for high point honors.

chisms," said Elder Brewster. "Yes, certainly," retorted John Alden, "but nevertheless it isn't anything to get thankful about." "Anyway," said the elder, "we've obtained an unusually large amount of booty this season, which helps out the colony treasury wonderfully."

"That's just another thing I don't like," retorted John Alden. "All they think of around here any more is just booty, booty, booty. Good lord, they didn't stage but one good fight around here this fall just because they thought it'd pay better some place else. Thanksgiving—bah! Name one thing to be thankful for—I ask you."

"Well—er—a—" stammered Elder Brewster. "Well, there's—a—By Jove, there's the women. We still have them."

"The women! Bravo, I'd forgotten all about them," cried John Alden. "And that reminds me, I've got a date with Priscilla in just five minutes by the hour glass. See you later, Elder."

BOOK BALCONY HAS CHRISTMAS NOVELS

"Drawn From the Wood," a humorous book illustrated by John Held Jr., is one of the many interesting books recently received for Christmas trade by the Co-op Book Balcony. Several drinking songs and poems, which the general public doesn't know are in print, are included in the collection of light literature. Seventy-five recipes for cocktails are also in the work, making it indispensable to all good fraternity houses.

A collection of Christmas gift books for children has been loaned to the Co-op by the J. K. Gill Co., providing students with a convenient choice of gifts for young brothers and sisters.

A special price on all rent books in the High Hat library has been arranged to enable students to take home several books for the Thanksgiving vacation.

Fijis Stage Rally To Beat Hall Men In Handball Tilt

Phi Sig's Duo Smothers Sig Ep Pair To Get Into Finals

The Fijis clipped off a win over Sherry Ross yesterday in their handball doubles match, with the victory gaining the right to meet the winner of the Delta Epsilon-A. T. O. match on Wednesday, December 4. The score was 15-21, 21-19, 21-15, and the tilt was as close as the count indicates.

The Phi Sigma Kappa pair, L. "Oscar" Wagner and William Kuykendall, became finalists when they smothered Sigma Phi Epsilon 21-8, 21-3. The championship of the donut tournament will be decided Friday, December 6.

The next match, completing the fourth round, will be played on Monday after Thanksgiving vacation with Harry Benson and Bill Whitely of A. T. O. lining up against the Delta Epsilon team, composed of Harry Polcar and Sol Director.

Too late there, but still a chance at Villard, the men sat patiently in the rear car during the blare of the rally which was being held near the front of the train. Still no picture because the photographer was left standing at the depot, and the whistle blew again. As the din of the rally began to die while the train was passing through the retiring mob, into sight hove Shields, Archer, Forsta, Erdley, Mason and Lillie calmly sitting on the platform tightly grasping the books, and patiently awaiting the snap of the camera which never came.

CHICAGO INVITES CONKLIN TO TEACH

Dr. Edmund S. Conklin, head of the psychology department, has received an invitation from Shailer Mathews, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago, to teach during the first six weeks of the university's 1930 summer session. Dr. Conklin will give special work in the psychology of religion and the relationship of abnormal psychology or mental hygiene to religion.

Dr. Conklin's two books "Principles of Abnormal Psychology," and "The Psychology of Religious Institutions," have brought him recognition in the east. Two years ago he taught at the summer session at the University of Illinois, lecturing on general and abnormal psychology.

Picture Taking For Oregon Too Slow, Says Editor

Students Not Going Home Are Asked To Report At Studios

Unless many of the houses on the campus, especially men's houses, get all their members down to Kennel-Ellis sometime in the near future, there will be many sections that are lacking full representation in the 1930 Oregon, is the statement made last night by Lester McDonald, editor of the yearbook.

"The situation is slowing us up considerably," McDonald said, "and unless the houses get on the boat right away, we'll just have to leave blank spaces."
