Webfoot Five Ready for Cougars . . .
Dolp Expected to Lead Attack
Grid Stars Receive Pro Offer
By Harry Van Dine

COACH BILL REINHART'S youthful Webfoot basketball team will get its first taste of conference competition at McArthur court tonight when they stack up against the Washington State Cougars. The Staters are reported to have a strong team this year and will amply test the ability of the Webfoots. Reinhart has been nursing his rather inexperienced squad along since the opening of practice, striving to build up the strongest possible combination for the conference season. The Webfoots started their pre-season schedule off in fine fashion by taking a pair of games from the DeNeffe five. This team has since scored a win over the powerful University of Washington quintet. The Webfoots also won a brace of contests from the Multnomah club five, of Portland, and defeated the strong independent Vancouver Ramblers during the holidays. Gonzaga traveled to Eugene early this month to test the mettle of the Oregon five, but the Webfoots turned them back in the first game. The Bulldogs turned the tables on the Webfoots in the second game. Gonzaga had previously defeated both Washington State and Idaho.

THE Webfoots played consistent basketball in these games and Reinhart was satisfied with the showing of his men. In their final game before the opening of the conference season the Webfoots looked more ragged than at any time this season and Williamette had little difficulty in turning them back. Reinhart has been working his men hard since then to have them in good shape for the Cougars. The two recent defeats have served to put the Oregon team on edge for the battle, and it should be a good game. It is likely that the same lineup used in the practice game will take the floor for the Webfoots tonight. This will include Vinc Dolp and Winsor Calkins, forwards; Jean Eberhart, center; and Cliff Horner and Harold Olinger, guards.

THIS quintet will give the lemon yellow and green a very fast breaking offensive and a fairly strong aggregation on the defensive. Dolp, although only a sophomore, has proven his worth in the pre-season games and he was high point man in total points scored. He is a clever man and a good defensive forward. Calkins is not far behind Dolp in ability, and he is steadily improving. He is a good shot and knows how to handle the ball. Eberhart and Horner both saw plenty of conference action last year and are the most seasoned players of the first five. Horner is the best defensive man on the team and he can be counted upon to snare his share of points. Olinger is also a good shot and a good defensive man. Merv Chastain, a two year letterman, will be ready to step into the lineup should any of the starting five falter. Chastain is a fast floor man and very good on defense. His shoulder is still bothering him from last year but it will not handicap him to a great extent.

SEEMS like a good college football player can't even complete his education nowadays before he is offered a chance to enter professional football. Three of the leading performers for the Webfoots on the gridiron last fall have received a letter from the Portsmouth professional team inquiring what their terms would be to perform under those colors next fall. The only catch to the proposition is that none of the three men have officially completed their collegiate careers yet. Johnny Kitzmiller, the "flying Dutchman," George Christensen, behemoth tackle, and Marshal Shields, star guard, were the men who received the offer. All three were selected on several all-coast teams and all received mention on one or more all-American. Kitzmiller and Christensen both have another year of varsity competition and Shields is still a junior in school. The conference eligibility committee recently ruled that Shields would not be eligible next year because he played for Southern Oregon Normal during his freshman year. None of the men have taken any action on the offer.

The man who invented the term, "gone luney," must have been anticipating the attempts of German scientists to reach the moon by rocket.

Smallpox Attacks

Alpha Hall Man, Is Quarantined

Health Service Continues Free Vaccination For Students

The first case of smallpox was discovered on the campus yesterday. Fred Elliott, Alpha hall, was placed in quarantine and James Landye of the same hall was placed under observation. As soon as smallpox was discovered, all members of Alpha hall and all students connected with the kitchen were vaccinated.

The members of the health service request that anyone in any way connected with either of these students be vaccinated immediately, for the protection of others. Both patients were moved to the Annex, Fourteenth and Onyx, where two special nurses are on duty. The infirmary will not be used for such cases.

Vaccination is not compulsory as yet, but the health service urges all students who have never been vaccinated and those not inoculated for smallpox within the last five years to visit the dispensary for vaccination, free of charge.

UNIVERSITY BUYS HOUSE ON ONYX

The old house next to the corner of 13th and Onyx streets has been purchased by the University, it was announced yesterday from the office of the executive secretary. At present plans are indefinite as to just what use the building will be put, but it may house offices for University professors or possibly laboratories. Considerable remodeling must be done on the building before it can be used.

A New Yorker was recently ejected from a night club for insulting the hostess—which goes to show that almost anything is possible in New York.

Immediately following the game, the visitors will be guests at the annual College Night entertainment, a program of student musical talent, to be given in Gerlinger hall. The entertainment will take the form of a radio broadcast over station UORE.

Isn't It Just a Lot of Good, Clean Fun

to be able to put on clean, crisp shirts in the morning? No buttons missing, no unexpected tears, everything neatly mended . . . ?
