

Intramural Swimming Winners Will Be Picked Tonight

Nearly Fifty Representatives Enter Campus Tournament

Every Student May Witness Competition, Officials Report; Races Will Be Held in Women's Pool Five Different Events To Feature

Nearly fifty men will compete in the annual intramural swimming meet tonight. The tournament, which is open to all students, will be held in the women's pool, and the first event will start at 7 o'clock.

The meet is held for the purpose of encouraging swimming, supplying a little competition for those who don't care to go out for the varsity, and with the possibility in the background that some hidden material will be uncovered that might help out the varsity.

The meet will have five different racing events, and one diving event. There will be three 40-yard races, one free style, one back stroke, and one breast stroke. In addition, there will be a 100-yard free style race, a diving event consisting of five different kinds of dives, and at the end there will be a 160-yard relay. The relay will be swum by four man teams representing different houses. There will be no water polo games, for a water polo tournament will be held next term.

Veterans Officiate
Officials of the meet, which include many of Oregon's swimming veterans as well as physical education instructors, expect the meet to rival in interest the one held last year, which was a thriller.

PROFESSOR TUTTLE TO CONDUCT TALK

Professor Harold S. Tuttle, of the education department, will conduct the second of his series of talks at the Y. W. discussion group at 4 o'clock today in the Y. W. bungalow. Professor Tuttle's subject is "Outgrowing Our Childhood Religion," and at this meeting he will further his discussion showing that the college student has not lost his religion, but has merely changed his ethical standards.

Anyone interested is invited to attend, even if he has not signed up for the group, according to Dorothy Thomas, head of the Y. W. C. A.

ELEVEN STUDENTS ARE IN INFIRMARY

Eleven students at the present time are inmates at the infirmary. Tom Johns, Margaret Litscher, Dorothy Busenbark, Kenneth C. Owens, Margaret Looney, Lawrence Mitchelmore, Frank Robinson, Robert Everts, James Italey, and Velma Powell are all afflicted with colds.

Marian Musgrove is still there while her leg, broken while she was riding a bob sled, is knitting.

It is expected for instance that the powers of the judiciary, newly to be created, will be subjected to more than comment. And so of each of the six. How paternalistic will the student government be to the classes? How much authority to the executive council? Will inter-sectional game participation along bring awards?

Frosh Team Gets Decisive Games From OSC Rooks

Quintets Appearance Good In Several Tilts; James Star Man

The frosh basketball team successfully proved its merit last week with two decisive victories over the Oregon State Rooks. This week-end the yearling outfit will have a chance to duplicate the feat, as games are scheduled for Friday night at Corvallis and Saturday night here as a curtain-raiser for the big varsity show.

With a 31 to 21 margin last Friday night and a 35 to 28 win on Saturday, the frosh demonstrated superiority in all departments of play. It will take a lot of improvement for Coach Roy Lamb's quintet to gain revenge over the frosh, as overconfidence hasn't much chance of claiming the Oregon babes with Prink Callison in command, nor is the season far enough advanced for the team to go stale.

Although Callison has five first-line players which have been starting regularly, there are six or seven others ready to jump into the melee at any time. As Callison does not hesitate to replace his regulars, the team is continually hopped up in order to hold their jobs.

The work of Clarence James at forward has been the main topic of the fans' talk. James starred in the first Rook tilt and was the spark plug of the frosh during the first half of Saturday night's affair when he sank four field goals in a row. Besides being the best basket-shooter on the team, he handles the ball well and tears down the floor like a scared rabbit.

Don Siegmund at the other forward berth is a slippery man to handle and is reliable on defense. He was constantly covering Ed Lewis, lanky Rook center, during the series. At Corvallis Siegmund aroused long vocal displays, both hostile and friendly, from the spectators. The other three forwards who have been seeing action in every game are Bill Bowman, Hughie Evans, and Homer Stahl.

At center Cap Roberts has been using his long arms to good advantage, piling up 10 points Saturday. Roberts is good at eluding the defense and pulling the ball out of the fire. However, George Beecher ranks about a half-length behind, making Roberts' position none too secure.

Two ex-Medford boys, Bill Morgan and Cliff Garnett, have been holding down the guard positions, with Roy Shaneman, George Robertson, and Bob Near ready to act as reinforcements.

WRITERS PLAN NEW CAMPUS MAGAZINE

Plans for the founding of a campus literary magazine will be discussed tonight by members of Ye Tabard Inn and Pot and Quill, writing honoraries for men and women respectively, at their first joint meeting of the year.

The two groups will gather in the men's lounge of Gerlinger hall, under the direction of Joe Brown and Serena Madsen Scheffer, their presidents. Ye Tabard Inn is a chapter of Sigma Upsilon, national writers' honorary.

Free Lance Handball Matches Begin Today

Matches in the men's free lance handball tournament will get under way today. The draws have been posted in the gym office. Twelve doubles teams have been entered and 33 men will try their luck in singles. The physical education department expressed the hope that fellows will arrange to play their matches as quickly as possible.

Spears Has Reputation as Witty Coach

SEEMS as though "Doc" Spears, Oregon's new football coach, has had numerous and sundry experiences since he entered the football coaching profession, and he always seems to have a choice wise-crack for every emergency. We have had no experience with the rotund gentleman as yet, but we are taking Ralph Cannon's word for it. The said Mr. Cannon writes a sports feature column in the Chicago Daily News and he relates the following instances in the News of January 22.

During Spears' first year as coach at West Virginia, where he directed football before going to Minnesota, his eleven got off to a good start in one of its biggest games when it returned the kick-off about twenty-five yards. On the first play, however, something untoward happened and the referee penalized West Virginia 15 yards. On the next play a penalty of half the distance to the goal was inflicted, and then a third penalty, for only an offside put the ball within a foot of the goal.

That was too much for Spears. He rushed out onto the field and without hesitation acquainted the official with his opinion of him. "Get off the field or I'll penalize your team again!" barked the referee. And "Doc" came back: "Where to, brother? Where to?"

Speaking of proselyting, he once said, "It's like polygamy in this country; many people hold up their hands in horror of it, yet quite a few practice it."

Girls Hockey, Donut Swim on Tap

OREGON will make another bid for fame in the athletic world today, but in an entirely different line from any sport tried before. This time it will be hockey—not regular ice hockey, although that would be very appropriate in this weather, but field hockey. Great Webfoot stalwarts will not take the field—the Oregon women will get their chance to really break into the sports spotlight today as it will be an all-star Oregon women's hockey team that will meet the touring All-American women's stick wielders.

Another big event on the sport calendar for today is the annual intramural swimming meet which will be held in the pool at Gerlinger hall tonight. The meet this year will be open to the campus, and spectators are sure of seeing some real water battles. In preceding years several men of varsity calibre have been uncovered in the annual donut meet, and this year should be no exception. The intramural water splashers have been hard at work lately and promise some real events.

The local gals have been working hard to be in shape for this game as it is their crowning athletic achievement of the year. They have been practicing daily and will be out to conquer the visitors. The game is really a part of a good will affair, as the visiting players will be royally feted while on the campus. The All-American team is composed of the pick of women intercollegiate players of the country and they should give a fine exhibition of this popular women's game.

You see, I have about 40 brands in the fire and each one of them progresses a little each day. It's a bad habit, but I can't help it. Guess it's my temperament. You see, I think of something and start right away to work it out, but before I finish I think of something else and just have to start on that.

Erring Freshmen To Be Chastised On Library Steps

Old System Is Reinstated By Oregon Knights And O Men

Slackened Punishment Is Cause of Violations

"Freshmen have become too lax in observing Oregon traditions, possibly as a result of the slackening of punishment of violators. Beginning with this week a different system of bringing offenders to justice will be inaugurated. It was tried in the past and found to be successful."

The above statement was issued jointly yesterday by Bradshaw Harrison, president of the Order of the O, and Karl Greve, duke of the Oregon Knights, whose organizations are in charge of the enforcement of campus traditions.

The system to be used is as follows: The offending person will be told that he is to appear on Thursday at 12:45 on the main library steps; his name and offense will be handed in to Harrison and Greve, who will print the total list of violators for the week in the Thursday Emerald, along with other summons to the library steps. At the appointed time punishment will be meted out by members of the Order of the O, in proportion to the gravity of the offense.

"This system was in vogue on the campus for several years before the present time and worked very successfully. There seems to be no reason why it should fail now," Greve said. "We are abandoning the system of giving cards to the violators of traditions in the belief that they are a hindrance rather than a help in punishing offenders. Bradshaw Harrison and myself have the solid support of the Order of the O and the Oregon Knights in this move."

the people take the coach affair? McEwan did well this year, didn't he? A game with St. Mary's and one with Florida? Say, that's news to me. Well, Doctor Spears is a very capable man; I don't think Oregon could have done better.

This week's schedule:
Tuesday—Washington vs. Oregon State at Corvallis.
Friday—Washington State vs. Washington at Seattle.
Saturday—Oregon vs. Oregon State at Eugene. Washington State vs. Washington at Seattle.

From a tie for second place with Washington, to undisputed possession of the cellar position was the fate of the Oregon basketball team, by virtue of a double loss to the Washington Huskies and Oregon State's last minute victory over the same team, last night.

Until last night when in the closing minutes of play the Beavers came back to score a 32 to 30 win, Washington was leading the race and the two Oregon teams were tied in last place. Both first and last places have changed hands, however, with disastrous results to Oregon's title hopes.

Tonight the Purple and Gold team takes the floor again at Corvallis and after that game things may look even worse for the Lemon and Green as a game is scheduled for Saturday with the Beavers and it begins to look as if they were climbing out of the cellar in earnest.

This week should be an interesting one as it will mark the approximate halfway point in the race for the championship of the Oregon seems to have developed a second half complex which just does fall short of producing victories. They had a great chance to even the Husky series last Saturday night but fell one point shy. If the second half style of play could be introduced into the first period, Oregon should regain her standing in the race. All chance of a conference title is by no means gone, however, and with a few breaks Oregon should soon be back in the running.

Cougars Lead

At the end of this week the two Washington teams will fight it out for first place. Washington State held it until the Huskies had the good fortune to shut out the Webfoots—something which the Cougars were unable to do, and after last night's game again hold it.

Idaho is still a contender to be reckoned with, by virtue of a brilliant second half rally in their last game with the Cougars, which gave them a one-point margin victory. They showed their class to Oregon, although that particular series was evened up and will certainly be heard from later. They have no games scheduled for this week and a period of rest for them should do their opponents more harm than good.

Prospects for the first of the annual Oregon, Oregon State series are better from this end as the Corvallis team will be forced to play three games this week while the Webfoots' only game should find the time between now and then very beneficial to his team.

While in the Northern section things are getting interesting in the conference race, in California it is even more interesting. California at Berkeley, long a title winner, has fallen into third place with two victories and an equal number of losses, while its sister school at Los Angeles is leading the league. It has become a habit with the Golden Bears and the Trojans to hold the title and it would indeed be interesting to
