INSANITY
What's in a name? That which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet...

Logic based on those words appearing in "Romeo and Juliet" seems the guiding light of anonymous writers, who neglect to sign their names when writing poison pen letters to movie stars or vehement letters to newspaper editors.

But Dr. Spears, Oregon's new coach, says that writing unsigned or anonymous letters is a mild form of insanity—and he should know, for he is a brain specialist when he isn't coaching football players (and possibly when he is).

This is a job of psycho-analysis for someone. Insanity is used as an excuse for many peculiarities. When a hoodlum shoots a man he pleads insanity when a man does not wear a hat he does it because he is insane, says an eastern city's mayor; and now they blame "fan mail" to lunacy tendencies.

And if they are condemned for being insane, let them say with William Blake: "I mock thee not, tho' I by thee am mocked. 'Thou call'st me Madman, but I call thee Block-head."

Classes Awaken
Melting snow on the campus brought to light patches of green grass this week. It also seemed to mark the end of the hibernation of classes. At least, the sophomores and the seniors have shaken off the death grip of idleness and have scheduled class events for the next few weeks.

For some time the Emerald has been aiming darts at the inefficiency of class officers and their lack of anything to do in the hopes that it might stir up a hornet's nest or two. In its editorials it soliloquized, Hamlet-like, on the use of electing four or five officers for each class who did little else than shake hands.

Some results are at last forthcoming. Sophomores under the leadership of Jack Stipe are planning several novel features to take the place of the deceased frosh parade. Juniors are planning a campus-talent show to replace the too-expensive and time-consuming Junior Vodvil. Seniors are working up a "kid party" this week, and the other day voted $25 for starving Bulgarians. Frosh will dance informally at Gerlinger hall Friday.

It is gratifying to see the classes come out of their hibernation under the snow drifts and do something. Class officers are elected to function as leaders of their class and to direct the activities of their group. If there is nothing on the books for them to do, then it is their cue to make work for themselves. Success never came to anyone who sat back and waited for jobs to be thrown at him.

Organized Dementia

(An Objective Story)

Her eyes, as blue as clear, deep, shaded water—faltering, then dropped before his steady, ruthless stare. Her carmine lips parted and exposed her pink, quivering tonsils. Suddenly she shrieked. A mile away a farmer consulted his watch.
"Th' Shasta is ten minutes ahead of schedule today, by heck," he said.

Man's Eyes Beady
Back by the railroad tracks the woman leaped desperately at the man, clawing futilely at his prominent, beady eyes.

"You won't," she said. "You wouldn't. You couldn't."
He observed her coldly.
"Oh, couldn't I? Wouldn't I? Won't I?"
"No," she gasped hoarsely.

He picked her up easily, deposited her in the rumble seat and closed the lid down, despite her struggles. Her voice came from within, muffled.

Woman Dissatisfied
"I won't stand it. I won't stand it."
"You don't have to," he said.
"I know it," she replied.
There was a sudden explosion. A boiler factory ten miles away had blown up. The man's weird black eyes were staring up the railroad track.

"It must take a lot of gravel to make this road-bed," he said.
He climbed into the car. The machine sped swiftly down the white dusty road. A steady, thumping, pounding noise came from the rear.
Replaces Tools
"Darn it," said the man. He stopped the car and got out. It took him 15 minutes to change the tire. When he had finished, he tossed the tools he had used back beneath the front seat. Then he raised the lid of the rumble seat. The woman raised up as though actuated by a powerful spring. Her hair was unorderly.

"Hello, there, are you cured?" asked the man.
"I'm ruined," she replied. "Look at my dress."

Woman Bawled Out
"All right, you can ride with me now," he said. "But next time you make a remark about trains, I'll put you in the rumble seat and keep you there."
"But—" she said, "doesn't the engineer blow the whistle when the fireman tells him to?"

Takes Out Hands
The man sighed and put his hands in his pockets. He took them out.
"Yeah," he said, "but the conductor doesn't like it."
There was a faint, clanking noise off to the right of the road. A chipmunk had leaped from a fence post and lit on a tin can.

FORUM

ON LIBE' STEPS

To the Editor:
It does our hearts good, in this day of demoralization of the younger generation, to know that still there are men among us who will uphold to the death the foundations of our institutions.

As Mr. Harrison said, "For No Reason At All,—freshmen have been parading around the campus without their green lids."

The wearing of green saucers by freshmen is absolutely essential to the wellbeing of, not merely the famed Oregon Spirit, and the support of the Order of the "O" when its members are exercising to Oregon's glory, but is also essential to the Social and Scholastic well-being of the institution and its individual members.

Now,—For Adequate Reason,—these freshmen will don the "green" whenever their "parading" instinct crops out.

As was also said, sincerely and truthfully, "This shows utter disregard of a Tradition that Has Been enforced On This Campus For Many Years." It is very good that this point was brought up. For it stands to reason These Traditions Would Not Have Been Enforced for "Many Years"—Unless They Are Backed by Adequate and Justifiable Reasons NOW.

The Order of the O and the Oregon Knights have done commendable work in reviving "library steps." Let us hear no Weak-Sisters crabbing.

—An Amused Senior.

RAPS ADVERTISING SCHEME

To the Editor:
The use of Eugene's city fire truck to advertise the waffle sale was in my opinion an abuse of civic privilege and an unwarranted nuisance. A fire siren even in an emergency call is sufficiently disconcerting, but to use it as a means to exploit a private enterprise is a step further than citizens should tolerate.

It would be well to remember that by law people are required to give a fire truck sounding its siren the right of way, but it was never the intention of that law that people should give up their rights and privileges in order to advertise waffles. It is in a certain sense shameful that the city of Eugene would allow its fire truck to be used for a ballyhoo wagon. Someone evidently didn't know what constituted appropriateness in advertising.

Signed,
—An Indignant Citizen.

If I Were FOOTBALL COACH

I would ask the Order of the O for a more rigid enforcement of existing Oregon traditions. If necessary, freshmen would be padded on the library steps every day for infractions of the rules laid down for their conduct.

—Gracia Haggerty.

I would want the constitution amended so that more students would be on the executive council than is the case at present. In the present situation the student members of the executive council are outnumbered.

—Don Moe.

I would use my influence to do away with punishment of freshmen on the library steps for violation of traditions that have long been outgrown. Such action is childish and inhuman.

—John Yerkovich.

Eighty-three students of the University of Kansas were arrested recently. They had collegiate Fords, without lighting paraphe-nalia.

Sue Finds the Styles of Yore Are Coming Back!

"Sez Sue"

Varsity and Town News of the Shops for the Co-eds

Sleeves Gain Distinction
By many a new little puff, a flare, or a splash of color—no longer are all sleeves following the straight and narrow line, but some are full from the elbow down with different color combinations or shirred effects. Then, too, they are full at the shoulders like grandmother's used to be. Along with odd-shaped necks, cape effects and the long princess line skirts with flares, Miss 1930 has a decidedly different style than she has had for many years.

Mid-Term Exams Bring Eye Strain
And goodness knows the exams are bad enough without a headache to boot. Though you may have never had trouble with your eyes before, if you are bothered with headaches it is more than likely that it is your eyes. Dr. Ella Meade, optician, 14 8th, W., will give you a thorough examination of your eyes to help you track down that ache.

Lustrous Formal Necklace Sets
Are reduced from $7.50 to $4.95 as a special for this week at the U of O Ko-ed Shop next to the College Side. There are some specially lovely pearl and crystal combinations as well as other kinds that will do much to enhance your formal.

Even Hats Have Flares
These days and with everything else having them, how can they help it? Letitia Abrams Hat Shop on Willamette has in some of their new spring hats, saucy-looking hats of felts, and felt and braid combinations in the new bamboo green and picrust shades as well as other popular colors.

Luck Comes With Witch Balls
According to the old New England legend. The glass blowers at the end of the day would blow out the odd bits of molten glass into little balls with sticks to hang them up. And now the Alladin Gift Shop on West 10th has some of these witch balls in different colors to hang in the window with ivy.

Sport Coats Gain On Dress Coats
In the spring forecast of styles. At McMorrnan and Washburne's the new spring coats are in, and the sport coats have belt waistlines and slight flares; tweeds, lamano cloth and oxford cloth are the smart materials. The dress coats have uneven hemlines and many are lapin fur-trimmed.

Curls That Make The Girl . . .
Are not just any kind of curls, but rather curls that frame the face with an attractive and becoming swirl. At the L & R Beauty Shop next to Kennel Ellis you will find that the beauty work is of the most expert kind, and adds greatly to your good looks.

To Call 616 Brings Spring Flowers
To your house—and in case you didn't know to call 616 is to call Raup's Floral Shop on Willamette. Perhaps you would like hyacinths, daffodils, primroses or tulips for your first signs of spring about the room or to send to your friends as a fragrant remembrance.

Campus Frocks Stay Short
But they have a new modern style that makes them seem different from the good old dress you've been wearing around. At Kafoury's Department Store on Broadway there are some very moderately priced dresses that may be used for many different occasions.
