Webfoots' 3 Wins From Cougars, Vandals Are Big Surprise

Road Trip Victories Put Reinhart Men in Race

With their road trip behind them the Oregon basketball team will return to the campus a far more successful team than it was considered to be at the time it started on its campaign last week. Of the four games played while in the north the Webfoots won three and lost one. The series with Washington state was split and both games with Idaho were won by comfortable margins.

By virtue of their excellent performance on this trip the Lemon and Green returns in second place in the conference, having risen from fourth place where they dropped after losing the third game of the Oregon State series.

May Tie Huskies
If the improvement noted in the games of this week and last week continues, and the team is successful against the Oregon State Beavers in the final game at Corvallis Saturday, the series at Seattle against the Washington Huskies at present secure in first place will take on the nature of a championship series. The Webfoots will have a chance to tie for first.

On their recent trip many men were outstanding in the Oregon lineup with the name of Billy Keenan appearing most as the outstanding player of the team. His floor work and shooting won the admiration of the crowds in all four games and the success of the team is due in no small part to his playing.

Eberhart Hits Hoop
Jean Eberhart, at center showed that the shooting eye he acquired during the Oregon State series had not lost any of its accuracy in the recent games and he contributed some remarkable floor work as well.

The Oregon guards showed well against the Idaho Vandals. Winsor Calkins, Harold Olinger, and Cliff Horner showed particularly well at this position.

If nothing else was proved on this trip the Webfoots showed that they are still the "dark horse" of the conference and have a good chance to finish well up in the final rating, a thing no one would have predicted for them at the opening of the season.

MOVING FINGER

puted? Because someone feels that he or his has been injured.

It seems time for those who would delegate the power to a group other than the aggrieved parties and the court to investigate the reasons for having a judiciary at all. If an interested person or group is to decide who may present cases in court, then even the machinery as well as the name of justice seems a little rusty and spotted. The student officials should more than any others be interested—they are the government which is affected.

For a disinterested body, who would search elsewhere after setting up the judiciary itself? If the court is impartial enough to decide the cases it will as properly decide whether they come under its jurisdiction. The court will formulate its own code, its own procedure, and should be trusted to know the limits of its power.

That the court will be overcrowded with petty cases is hardly conceivable if the aggrieved individual himself has to bring the matter before the court. Interested seniors and anonymous plaintiffs might shrink a little before bringing themselves into the news columns via that publicity which should be accorded the decisions.

If further check would need be made, then a petition might be required, but the ease of gaining signatures would make that a small check indeed. Actual cases, facts, the constitution, plaintiffs and defendants are required. Without a plaintiff there is no case, without a case there are no facts, with facts supplied by the personal whims of the student president or a group, there is no use for a judiciary.

Webfoots Enjoy Great Success on Road Trip

WINNING three games out of four conference battles on their annual road trip is the record set up by Coach Bill Reinhart's battling Webfoots and the Oregon quintet has climbed from fourth to second place in the league standings during the past week. Reinhart's men showed that the flashy form they displayed against Oregon State was no temporary condition and the Webfoots have proven themselves to be the real dark horses of the circuit. Much credit is due Reinhart for the manner in which he has whipped a band of green players into a team that is a real title contender.

Of course it is a far cry to the pennant with three tough games remaining on the Webfoot schedule. Oregon State will be met at Corvallis Saturday night and the league-leading Washington Huskies will furnish the opposition in the last series of the year. The Webfoots will take to the road again to play the Huskies. Washington is enjoying a healthy lead at present, while only two games separate Oregon in second place and Oregon State in fourth place. Idaho meets Washington in a two-game series this week-end in the only other games scheduled. The Vandals should make a comeback after dropping two games to the Webfoots.

Oregon State didn't fare quite so well while sojourning on the road, the Beavers breaking even with both Washington State and Idaho. They dropped from third to fourth position in the dope standings but helped Oregon to climb by defeating Washington State Tuesday night. Oregon will have to win all three remaining games and Idaho will have to win over Washington this week for the Webfoots to have a clear claim to the title. In other words, Washington has only to win two more games to at least tie for the pennant while Oregon must win all. This series between Oregon and Washington should be a great one if the Webfoots can down the Beavers this week.

Everything Is Ready for Spears' Reception

Fifteen hundred mimeograph copies of Oregon songs have been prepared for the great Spears banquet in Portland and will be distributed among those in attendance. The affair gives promise of becoming a huge pep rally before the evening is over, with a capacity attendance expected. Doctor Spears will arrive in Portland at 10 o'clock Friday morning and will be greeted at the station by the civic and University committees. Governor Norblad will be in attendance along with other high city and state officials when Spears steps off the train and everything is in readiness for the occasion.

A 27-piece Oregon band and the men's glee club will be on hand for the banquet in Portland, with the band furnishing the main musical entertainment during the evening. These members of the band will get a real work-out over the week-end as they will leave Portland late Friday night and will arrive in Eugene about 3 o'clock Saturday morning. After catching a few winks of sleep they will again play for the Eugene reception of Spears and will also play at the student rally.

Dr. Spears will be subject to another of those reception banquets at the Osburn hotel here Saturday night and we think he will probably be ready to call it quits when it is all over. He certainly will be well received before all the shooting is over, and he will have had plenty of opportunity to demonstrate his much heralded abilities as an after-dinner speaker.

Ad Slogans Make Impression Upon Student Buyers

Catchy Phrases Stick in Minds of Class; Most Luxuries Recalled

"I'd walk a mile for a Camel" is the slogan with the greatest appeal to college students on this campus a survey conducted by Prof. Vernon G. Sorrell's social science class shows.

In order to ascertain the effect of the wide-spread use of slogans in advertising, the students were requested to hand in a list of well-known popular phrases. Eighty lists with about 125 suggestions were submitted.

When compiled, the results revealed that out of 12 leading slogans 5 concerned cigarettes, 2 soap, and the rest dealt with various items as automobiles, listerine, flowers, and toothpaste.

The fact that an idea of the goods advertised is obtained by the reader before the actual words are learned was verified when several slogans were found to contain altogether different expressions from the original. One case cited by a student was "On the floor it's space, in the cigarette it's taste." Another result of the survey was the discovery that all of these slogans had to do with the selling of luxuries. Only one article out of the whole group could be classed as pertaining to some basic commodity.

Typing by wire—an adventure in communication

The telephone typewriter, a new Bell System service, has commercial possibilities as yet barely realized.

For example, a business house can type-write a message over telephone wires, and this is retyped instantaneously and simultaneously in any number of branch offices. The advantage is obvious—in knitting together far-flung organizations and in quickening the pace of business.

Here is still another extension of telephone service which has already proved its value. The telephone typewriter promises even greater things as industry discovers new uses for this instrument of convenient communication.
