

New Coach Starts Teaching Football Players Fundamentals

Spears Gives Football Men First Workout

Largest Spring Turnout In History of School Begins Drill

Backfield Men Receive Coach's Attention

With the largest body of men that has ever turned out for spring football practice, to work with, Dr. Clarence Spears, last night put the candidates through a stiff workout.

A departure from the ordinary routine of setting-up exercises was indulged in with some of the fundamentals of backfield and line work being illustrated.

Though the procedure at yesterday's workout may not have been indicative of the type of eleven Spears will eventually turn out it looks as if a fast powerful eleven will result. The backfield men spent the afternoon going through pivoting maneuvers that would be the basis for innumerable plays should the coach so desire.

The linemen under the particular supervision of Gene Shields and Prink Callison, worked on blocking tricks which Spears himself illustrated using Shields as his opposition, but for the majority of the workout the head coach was working with the backfield candidates.

Many men who signed up at Monday's meeting were not out, Marsh Shields, Woodie Archer, Eric Forsta, Jerry Lillie and Ed Moeller being conspicuous by their absence which is, however, justified by injuries in most cases.

Johnny Kitzmiller was out on the field watching what was going on but did not indulge in any of the actual work. He is slightly bothered by his ankle injury and it is considered best that he take care of it for a while.

Practice will be continued with workouts scheduled for 4 o'clock. Even though the turnout is the largest on record here, a lot more men could be used.

Spears Loses Little Time in Getting to Work

FIVE Doc Spears plenty of credit for getting right down to business. Yesterday afternoon, three days after his arrival in Eugene, he had the Webfoot football squad out in uniform for the opening practice session of the spring period. In comparison to Jimmy Phelan at Washington, Doc is a real hustler. Phelan arrived in Seattle a couple months back and will not start spring practice until the latter part of this week. Of course Phelan had to return to the Middle West to complete the roster of his coaching staff.

Phelan certainly has cleaned house at Washington and we would be willing to bet that Washington's team next year will cost the Huskies plenty as far as coaching salaries go. Within the last few days he has signed Edmond Collins, former star Notre Dame wingman, to handle the Husky ends. Cotton Wilcox will take care of the backfield men while "Pest" Welch, former Purdue star, will show the yearling team the finer points of the game. Dan Lamont will handle the line.

Nothing definite has yet been done about securing an assistant to complete the Oregon coaching staff but some announcement is expected to be forthcoming in a few days. The present staff of assistants includes Gene Shields and Prink Callison and they will help Coach Spears with the practice sessions during the spring training period. Bill Reinhart, who served as backfield coach last year, is busy with basketball and will soon call out his varsity baseball squad, so will be unable to help with spring practice.

Webfoot Tossers Have Tough Assignment

Coach Bill Reinhart has his Webfoot basket tossers hard at work in preparation for the invasion of the Washington Huskies' lair this week-end in the crucial series of the 1930 conference race. The Webfoots have a tough assignment to defeat the strong Husky quintet in both games of the series to tie Washington for the title. If the Oregon squad is able to come through with a pair of victories over the Huskies, they will climax one of the most brilliant finishes ever staged by an Oregon team.

Considered by all dope experts to be doomed for a poor finish after dropping the third game of the Oregon State series, after defeating the Beavers two straight, the Webfoots started on their annual road trip. The Webfoot hopes sunk even lower when Washington State won the first game of the series. Reinhart's men weren't yet through, however, and won the remaining three games on the trip. Last Saturday they won their fourth straight by a spectacular rally against Oregon State to make it three out of four over the Beavers.

This season certainly provided its share of upsets. Washington has lost only four games, three of them to Oregon State. Washington State has been the only other conference team to turn back the Huskies. Washington won both games from Oregon played at Eugene, the last one by a one-point margin. Everybody admits Oregon's chances of winning both games this week from the Huskies are very slim, but the Webfoots are instilled with the old Oregon fight and consider that they have an excellent chance of beating the Huskies. It would certainly be a fitting climax to an exciting season.

Moeller Able To Toss Disc, Says Doctor

Track Captain's Arm Said To Be Healed; Team's Chances Brighten

Rain Prevents Men From Working Outside

Definite words was received yesterday that Ed Moeller, captain of the Oregon track team and unofficial world's discus champion, will be able to throw the discus in track meets this spring.

Doctors examined Moeller's arm which was broken last month in a bobsled accident, and pronounced it completely healed. However, it will be some time before Ed can cut loose for distance heaves. Oregon's track hopes are brightened noticeably with Moeller's presence on the team assured.

Rounding Into Condition

The usual early season charley horses, buck shins, and cigarette smoker's aftermaths are hitting the varsity track squad, especially among those who were too eager to show their speed, but on the whole the squad is in good condition.

Rain has held up practice considerably, making it necessary to use the long corridor in McArthur court for a track when the Hayward field track is too wet. The sawdust field also comes in handy for the racers to romp on. Hurdles and high jumpers have been displaying their talent under skylights indoors.

Scheiber Is Prospect

Aside from Virgil Scheiber there are no outstanding sprint candidates on hand to fill the vacancy left by Bert Tutlich and Tyrell Lowry. Scheiber was the star frosh sprinter last year and should develop into a good varsity man.

Oregon's track championship hopes will be built around Ralph Hill, miler; Claire McKennon, quarter-miler, and Ed Moeller, discus heaver. Although these men can be counted on to cop first places regularly, much will depend on the material for the other events.

Oregon Boxers To Fight Champs In Tournament

Pacific Coast Amateur Contest To Attract 130 Entrants

The University's three entries in the Pacific coast amateur boxing tournament which is slated for this Friday and Saturday at Portland will encounter exceedingly rough going in their quest for titles because last year's flyweight and welterweight champions are returning to defend their laurels. With these experienced rivals to compete with and a host of other exponents of the gentle sport all clamoring for recognition, it will be a herculean accomplishment for the University boys to walk off with a crown.

Many Enter

The tournament, which is sponsored by the Multnomah Amateur Athletic club, has attracted 130 entrants from various amateur clubs up and down the coast and practically all of the northwest colleges. This is a new record for participants, and there is considerable wonder how Jimmy Richardson, who is in charge of the meet, can run off the matches in two nights. Portland alone has 36 boxers entered and San Francisco is not far behind. These entries represent the cream of the coast's amateur talent.

Champs To Compete

Bob Knox and Mahr Reymers may clash with each other for both are entered in the welterweight division. As there are 26 other entrants, however, this chance is lessened. John Perdick, ex-University of Washington titleholder, holds the championship of this division. Ben Pasion, flashy Filipino, has only to blast his way through a field of ten, but one of them is Able Miller, the champion.

Bernie Hughes, Oregon's unattached entry, competes with ten other mitt slingers for lightweight honors. Here, too, a returning champion will defend his title rights.

Oregon Riflemen Defeat Idahoans In Week's Shoot

Webfoots Trail Stanford Marksmen by Sixteen Point Margin

H. Wright Is High Scorer In University Team

The first reports of the inter-sectional rifle match for the week ending February 22 give the University of Oregon team a margin of 96 points over the University of Idaho, which made 3,487 points in the ten-man shoot, as compared with Oregon's 3,583 points. However, the team did not fare so well with Stanford, which made 1,860 points in the five-man shoot, as compared to Oregon's score of 1,844 points.

The schools which the local squad have challenged for this week are: Oregon State college, Gettysburg college, University of Tennessee, University of Washington, Davidson college, University of Southern California, University of California at Los Angeles, University of Wisconsin, and Culver Military academy. In addition to the matches with the above named schools, the local riflemen will meet the 7th United States infantry team.

In the individual scores, Harvey Wright leads again with 375 points to his credit. The ten high point men for the last week, with their individual scores, are as follows:

Wright, 375; Powell, 371; P. Smith, 369; Livesley, 369; Conder, 360; Minturn, 357; Nelson, 351; Relling, 348; Raynor, 343; Shoemaker, 340.

WARNING TO BE SENT OUT ON LOW MARKS

(Continued from Page One) been sent out by Dean Biggs, in conjunction with Dr. Howard R. Taylor, associate professor of psychology and head of the personnel bureau. A questionnaire concerning individual study habits and difficulties, to be filled out by the student and handed in to his adviser, is enclosed in each letter sent out.

Urges Conferences

In a statement made yesterday, Dean Biggs urged that every student who has been instructed to confer with his adviser do so at once, in order to safeguard against the possibility of flunking out at the end of the term. His statement follows: "Inasmuch as the opportunity of conferring with a faculty member and receiving his advice and assistance is offered to students at midterm, students who fail to take advantage of this opportunity are apt to receive less favorable consideration from their instructors and from the scholarship committee in case of scholastic difficulties at the end of the term than those who are shown to have done all that they could to avoid such difficulties.

Term End Nears

"The term is rapidly nearing an end, and the time for making adjustments in the students' study programs is rapidly passing.

"The committee considers the work of the advisers to be of very great importance and thinks it highly desirable that students who are falling behind in their scholastic work benefit from faculty assistance in this manner. There should be no difficulty in arranging suitable hours with the advisers' offices, either personally or by telephone."

Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the college of literature, science, and the arts, is chairman of the scholarship committee. The other members are Mrs. Virginia Judy Esterly, dean of women; Dr. Carlton E. Spencer, professor of law; George S. Turnbull, professor of journalism; A. E. Stillman, assistant professor of business administration; Dr. John F. Bovard, dean of the school of physical education; and Hugh L. Biggs, assistant dean of men.

Brad Harrison, Tennis Star, Gets National Ranking

Listed Sixth Among Men's Doubles Teams of United States

National amateur tennis ratings, which were issued last week, contained the name of Bradshaw Harrison, Webfoot tennis ace last year, paired with Kenneth Appel of Princeton in sixth place in men's doubles teams.

Although George Lott and Johnny Doeg were ranked first in doubles, Appel and Harrison defeated them in the New York state championship matches and had them point set twice in the national doubles.

William Tilden and Francis Hunter were ranked third in the nation. The Oregon ace and Appel played that renowned pair one of the longest matches in history of the Southampton courts, losing after a five-set battle by the scores of 12-10, 14-16, 11-13, 10-8, and 6-4.

Harrison was not ranked in the men's singles because he did not play in the national tournament. The early start of school here kept him from participating. He would probably have ranked in the first ten net stars of the United States as he has twice defeated Berkeley Bell of Texas, who ranked eighth on the national drawings.

Brooks in naming his assistants. The various committees are expected to be organized during the week and meetings of all the members of the directorate will be held regularly starting next week, according to Brooks.

The theme idea for the show is expected to be made public in the near future, as the committee is already at work on the new plan. Hall stated that the Vodvil will be a high class musical review this year, and that it would be a fast moving show which will appeal to every member of the student body.

Intercollegiate football may be given the air at Wyoming according to a statement issued by the Alumni association president.
