The Moving Finger

Executive Council Boost . . . New Control for Editors . . .

By OLIVER POLITICUS

through its vote on by-laws to the executive council has been recommended by the regular publications committee of the A. S. U. O.

This suggestion, if it is adopted by the committee to which it will be referred, and then by the whole constitutional revision committee, will not be such a reversal of form as first appearances would indicate. The change will be made a permanent resolution, and will probably need a two-thirds vote of the council for amendment.

lications committee is that the Oregana minimum salaries be placed at $100 instead of $150. and that amounts above that be placed on a 20 per cent basis in-$300 for each.

Since the publications committee is composed of editors of the student publications, besides the president and vice-president of the associated students, two faculty members intimately connected with publications, and a representative of the faculty at large, the unanimous vote accorded the recommendations seems to dispel any fear of toogreat control of the publications by the council.

Practically, the cry against the executive council is not against its members or its action, but against the problem in theory. Too many faculty members ARE on the council, and too FEW of the student members DO voice their opinions, IF the council does perform its duties with too little respect for student opinion.

But the question resolves on that "if." The executive council does its work well. Any serious attack directed against that body is really against the future possibility of a council not so able. And that attack is always embarrassed by usually well-performed actions of the council in office.

And McDonald Contract Go to Leaders

Kappa Sigma Nabs Third Place Among Scorers

By STERLING GREEN Phi Sigma Kappa was declared winner of the Emerald-KORE raterday by Fred Norton, contest director, after all returns had been turned in and tabulated. Independents were awarded second place and Kappa Sigma third. Prizes will be officially presented at the Fox McDonald theater during the first week of spring term, Norton announced. The Phi Sigma Kappa musicians will receive a magnificent 9-tube Majestic cabinet radio set donated by McMorran and Washburne, a 20-inch silver trophy cup offered by Paul D. Green, and a four-day contract to present their act at the McDonald theater. This contract carries with it a guarantee of not less than $50. The formal presentation of all prizes will take place on the opening night.

Lamps to Be Presented

As second and third prizes, a bridge lamp and a radio lamp will be awarded the Independents and Kappa Sigs, respectively. Faville, of the University school of business administration; Dale Coolly, local entertainer and musician; Leonard 'Mike" Gross, well-known Eugene musician; and Arthur L. Schoeni, editor of the Emerald.

Scoring System Given

These judges, who listened to the programs from different points in the city and reached their de-One change suggested by pub- cisions independently of one another, sent their ratings in to the studio late Thursday night and Friday morning, where they were compiled by representatives of KORE and the Emerald.

A simple point system of scorof 50 per cent until the total for ing was employed in tabulating the editor and manager reached the results, whereby each of the five competing houses was credited with five points for every vote it received for first place, four points for every second-place rating it received, and three points for each third place vote. Thus the Phi Sigs, by receiving firstplace mention from all five of the judges, made a total score of 25 points. Under this system the following totals were reached: Phi Sigma Kappa-Five first-> lace ratings; 25 points. Independents - Two secondplace ratings, two third-place ratings, 14 points.

Kappa Sigma - Two secondpdace ratings, one third-place rating; 11 points.

Kappa Alpha Theta-Two thirdplace ratings; 6 points. Sigma Chi-One second-place rating; 4 points.

The winning program was planned and directed by Lawrence Wagner, and was entitled the 'Potpourri" idea. Several entertainers well known in campus circles were featured, including the famous Phi Sig trio, composed of Vinton Hall, Lawrence Wagner, and Jack Morrison. A seven-piece orchestra was a feature of the program. Personnel of the band included the three members of the trio, Marcus Woods, George Barron, Ed Graham and Kenton Hamacker.
