words of comment.

First, the Emerald does not doubt that the student affairs committee acted in the best of faith when they thought they were doing the best thing by the student body.

The Emerald does doubt, however, that the move they took was for the best interests of conserving students' time for better and more productive pursuits like studying. What a pity such a move was not taken before the Vodvil was all written and practices well launched. All of the time spent on it will be a total waste and student enthusiasm in the activities of the associated student body cannot help being dampened.

The biggest reason for abolishing the Vodvil was on the grounds that the revised plan did not coincide with the plan agreed on at the first of the year. It was desired that the show be divided up into short vodvil acts and long practices eliminated. Under the revised plan this was promised. Faculty supervision of practices was asked for and was promised by the new plan. Health and scholarship of participants were to be looked into and everything possible done to conform to the requirements but to no avail. The things the Vodvil directors did to meet the rules were overlooked, apparently, and a unanimous vote sunk the good craft Vodvil.

jury has decided or lock the barn after the horse is stolen, but it relieves the tension sometimes. The ruling was the will of the faculty, not of the students. The students want the Vodvil and in order to have it they apparently will have to more than meet the requirements set down for them to follow before it will be allowed.

Cheating

Few thieves think they do wrong when they last place. steal; law violators find justification for their acts in their own reasoning. No man commits an unsocial act without at least convincing himself that he is partially in the right.

Some unlegal acts, however, involve little thought or search for justification. One of these is cheating, copying from a neighbor's paper, carrying a "pony" to class, or opening a notebook behind cover of the seat. Complaint has been voiced that cheating in tests students are blamed as reasons for the practice. But whichever be the case, the best prevention for contest.)

Radio Education

University of Oregon, Eugene E DUCATION by radio—to investigate which Sectoral Wilbur appointed a committee last spring-has been reported on pessimistically by that committee.

Points which they found to be real difficulties in the path of teaching classes via the microphone included

Radio is mainly an instrument of diversion. The most popular radio hours-when a person would be able to sit down and listen to a lecture-are too much in demand and involve a too high cost.

It would be difficult to make educational programs sufficiently attractive to appeal to an audience which, for the most part, wants entertainment.

Yet in spite of these drawbacks the value of the radio in educating the people opens a great possibility. There is the educational value of addresses broadcast during political campaigns, or, as in recent weeks during such an important international conference as the London disarmament meet. No one who listened in and heard the king, our secretary of state, or the British prime minister failed to gain a quickened sense of the importance of what was going on.

The most obvious difficulty of education by radio is the problem of getting people to tune in consistently on a program that is for their own betterment, but which must compete with the "amusement artist." During the less crowded hours people are usually too busy to tune in. After a day's work they may be too tired to concentrate on learning something. It will be hard for the educator to compete with the entertainer.

Colleges Notice!

NEW quarterly report cards which elementary school pupils take home at Hamburg, N. Y., are different.

Not only do they grade the student on the academic subjects, but also on his social relationships, self-expression, critical thinking, worthwhile activities, knowledge, skills, and health.

Grading on those bases will be difficult because THERE is nothing more futile than holding post there are no accepted standards as to just what mortems over a dead cause, but the banishing constitutes a 100 in critical thinking or self-expresof the Junior Vodvil from the extra-curricular ac- sion. Emerald Corner for Notables

This is the fourth of a series of interviews with prominent ons on the Oregon campus which is being run weekly in the Daily Emerald.

TT WAS a good thing there was a chair handy or he'd have flopped down on the floor. He was that tired. And for that matter anyone who has played golf from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. with only an hour off for lunch has a right to be tired.

Ten hours of golf a day is not an average day's menu for Bradshaw Harrison, tennis ace holder of more titles than a flock of European kings and emperors, but yes-! terday was just one of those days. He wore out five opponents during the day and shot most of the nines in the 30's and early 40's just to show people he is something besides a rajah of the racquet. (And to think he's only had a

The doctors used to shake their heads over him. When he was about 10 years old, he used to spend most of the day in bed. His mother took him for walks in the parks around San Francisco and there the tennis bug bit him.

"DOUBLED AND REDOUBLED"

Detroit has astonished the world by the amazing rapidity with which it has grown in recent years. Due to the phenomenal development of the automotive industry, Detroit has doubled and redoubled its population so frequently that statistics read like fiction.

Vertical Transportation has permitted Detroit to grow upward as well as outward and the Otis organization, naturally, has been an important factor in such record-breaking building operations.
