

Author From India Reveals Truth About Colorful Leader of Revolt In Native Country

Hindu Writer Tells of Ghandi On Visit Here

Great Leader of Race Is Not Phenomenon, Says Friend

Manilal Parekh Enjoying Visit on Campus

By JACK BELLINGER

A personality as full of friendship as the doctrine of inter-racial peace which he advocates makes Manilal C. Parekh, noted Hindu writer and lecturer, who spent the week-end in Eugene as the guest of the International house, a man that anyone would like.

This man, by his long association with the English and other white people, has so orientated himself to the ways of the West that one would not realize, unless his nationality was already known, that he was a son of the East by birth.

Describes Ghandi

Asked about Mahatma Ghandi, leader of pacifist resistance in India, Mr. Parekh said, "Ghandi is a representative of his race. He is not an isolated phenomenon. He is unique in some respects, but his real greatness lies in the fact that he represents the genius of the Indian race. Ghandi is only leaving the fruit of the harvest that was sown by great teachers of the past."

Mr. Parekh, who has written a biography of Ghandi, as well as several other works, said that he was a member of the same class of people as this "great little man of India." It is from these people, the Jains, thousands of whom would not even kill an ant, that Ghandi's non-violence idea originated, Mr. Parekh said.

Speak of Ghandi's life, Mr. Parekh said, "His parents were extremely fine people, honest and faithful. When he finished high school he went to England to study for the law. After three years in England he was admitted to the bar. He first started his non-violence movement in South Africa. Then he carried it over into India. For ten years, he and his family were put in jail again and again for breaking laws. Ghandi never accepted Christianity, although he studied several years."

Mr. Parekh said that he found great interest in Ghandi in China and Japan, as well as in this country.

Many people in India do not get two square meals a day, according to Mr. Parekh. He blames this on the British government.

"The great problem of the future is the inter-racial problem, not the international problem, Mr. Parekh stated.

Mr. Parekh was very happy to find so many friends here, especially at the International house. He spoke informally to a small group which met at the International house Saturday night. Sunday evening he spoke at the Unitarian church.

GHANDI'S REVOLT IN INDIA DOOMED TO FAIL

"is attempting to unite an ultra-heterogeneous mass of people, and although he may be able to gather many followers, he can never get behind him more than a small minority of the Hindu people, because his principles are so abhorrent to the Mohammedan one-third of the population, the aristocracy of India, in that he threatens to tear down the economic and social system upon which their position is based.

"If Ghandi could organize his peoples and become capable of warding off all India's enemies, even so Ghandi's policies would be futile, for although the nation has varied industries she can carry on successfully and so acquire wealth for the purchase of necessities from many parts of the world, she is remarkably devoid of the fundamental natural resources upon which even the lowest grade of civilization in this day and age depends. If the Hindu is to make himself absolutely non-dependent on the rest of the world, it means that he must inevitably revert to the most primitive and barbaric mode of living.

"There are innumerable things necessary to any civilization which she cannot produce herself. How could she be self-sufficient? Ghandi's political doctrines are like those of many other political figures who tried to solve their national problems, with no fundamental knowledge of the natural resources of their country. Ghandi has ignored this fact, and in his ignorance he is leading his people on a futile journey."

A WEEK WITH THE MOVIES

McDonald—Tuesday and Wednesday, "Young Eagles"; Thursday to Saturday, "High Society Blues."

Rex—Tuesday, "Broadway Hooper"; Wednesday and Thursday, "Undertow"; Friday and Saturday, "Trailing Trouble."

State—Tuesday, "Flight"; Wednesday and Thursday, "Lucky Star"; Friday and Saturday, "Young Nowhere."

Colonial—Tuesday and Wednesday, "Hard to Get"; Thursday to Saturday, "The Virginian."

Heilig—Tuesday, "Little Johnny Jones"; Wednesday to Saturday, "Show Girl in Hollywood."

Talkie Talks

If you want to go up in the air for a tour of cloudland just witness "Young Eagles," at the McDonald theatre. Buddy Rogers is a charming pilot and the things he does with airplanes will keep you on the edge of your seat. Then to balance the week the McDonald is offering Gaynor and Farrell in "High Society Blues." It is a welcome relief to find Janet rich in this picture and not dependent upon Farrell to bring her out of the slums.

Louise Fazenda's fortune is in her face sure enough, no one else could possibly equal her ability to look dumb and still be interesting. In "The Broadway Hooper" she is at her best.

At the State we find another thriller and the Colonial offers "Hard to Get" with Dorothy Mackaill and Charlie Delaney.

The Heilig offers "Little Johnny Jones" today with "Show Girl in Hollywood" coming to enliven the rest of the week. Alice White bowled 'em over in "Show Girl" and this picture is a continuation of her former success.

Professor Dunn To Speak Tonight On 'Aeneid in Art'

Lantern Slides Will Be Used To Illustrate Lecture

Honoraries Are Sponsors; All Invited

Frederick S. Dunn, professor of Latin, will speak tonight in the geology lecture room in Condon on "Virgil's 'Aeneid' in Art." He will illustrate his lecture with lantern slides which he himself has gathered from the old masters and modern illustrators.

The lecture, which is being sponsored by Phi Beta Kappa and Pi Sigma, Latin honorary, will be open to the public. Students especially are being urged to attend, according to Miss Mary E. Kent, secretary of the Oregon chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

Is Part of Celebration

This lecture of Professor Dunn's will be a part of the world-wide celebration, which is being held for the first time this year, of the 2000th anniversary of Virgil's birth, sponsored in the United States by the American Classical League.

This lecture by Professor Dunn, the Classical League's regional committeeman for Oregon, will be the first expression offered on the campus of the University's participation in the Bimillennium.

Other features of the Bimillennium celebration will be a library exhibit of some of Virgil's works, a dramatic reading on Dido and Aeneas by Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt early in May, and discussion groups conducted by Dr. Clara M. Smertenko of the Latin department.

Plays, pageants, lectures, and pictures will be presented from time to time in every college in the United States throughout 1930 with the final celebration culminating on October 15, the actual anniversary of Virgil's birth.

At this time Professor Dunn will give a lecture on Virgil as a conclusion to this year's international recognition of the great Greek poet.

Interior Decoration Demonstrations Given

Advanced students in interior decoration in the school of architecture and allied arts went to Portland yesterday, where practical demonstrations of interior decoration are being given for their benefit. The class is studying the interior decoration of several of the Portland stores, and will also visit some of the homes in Portland. Nowland B. Zane, who teaches the class, accompanied them to Portland.

Drama Division Bills May Plays

Seybolt and Matson Will Direct; Casts Picked

The two performances which the drama division has planned for this spring are "The Yellow Jacket," lyric comedy taken from the Chinese, which will be presented at the Heilig theatre on Wednesday, May 21; and two children's plays, "The Toy Soldier" and the "Knave of Hearts," both of which will be presented Saturday afternoon, May 17, at Guild theatre.

Mrs. Ottilie Turnbull Seybolt, head of the division, is directing "The Yellow Jacket," and Cecil E. Matson, her assistant, is directing the other two.

The cast for the "Yellow Jacket" is chosen largely from the class in technique of acting, although several of the men's parts were played by tryouts.
