Fashion's Monocle

How to become popular overnight: it's really very simple; just announce your candidacy for presidency of the associated students. Every woman's eyes are on you.

You hear the words: "Dynamic! Personality plus! O, boy! Did you get a look at those eyes? Where has he been all this time? Why haven't I seen him before?"

Also, it is really quite the fashionable thing to do nowadays, to be in the political running. You ought to be a blond to do it, but last year a brunette entered the race—and won it, so it might be that brunettes aren't completely out this year.

As for invitations extended any candidate: at the D. T. G. house last week they were talking about dates for the spring dance.

"Say," said one of the girls, "we ought to ask that good-looking blond-headed fellow who's running for president for one of the pushies."

"Oh, no, you don't," said the second susceptible, "if any one gets him, I do."

"Mammy," said a third, with a sigh and a plaintive wave of the hand, "if I went out with that man... well!"

Deferred Pledging Rouses Ego Of Freshmen, Many Critics Say

Short Rush Period Best In Opinion of Men At Other Universities

Editor's Note: This is the seventh of a series of articles giving both arguments for and against deferred pledging in order to indicate the desirability of adopting the system at the University of Oregon.

By RALPH DAVID

If pledging is deferred it should not be for long, in the opinion of many critics. The longer pledging is deferred the more "chesty" the freshman becomes and the harder it is to bring him back to earth.

The freshman, because of the "kowtowing" done by the fraternity men over the longer period of time, gets an exaggerated idea of his value as a man. Even in the shorter rush period that is carried on during freshman week at this University the freshman often gets an overdose of ego because he has so many fraternities at his feet. Think what he would become if pledging was deferred for a whole term!

Another objection to a long deferred period is that the upperclassmen do not get to know the freshmen soon enough. W. H. Wannamaker, dean of men at Duke university, said, in reply to the questionnaire sent out by the interfraternity council, that in his "frank opinion deferral should not be long. If a freshman is not allowed to be pledged during his first year in college, the result simply is that he is rushed throughout the year. I believe that from four to six weeks is the best plan and we have had the best results from that requirement."

Shepardson Gives Views

A point brought out in the interview with Dr. Francis W. Shepardson, national president of Beta Theta Pi, that deserves further consideration, is that where rushing is unrestricted the rushing is as much for the college as for the fraternity. Most fraternities keep files with the names of all high school students that are thought to have any intention of entering their particular school. When the fraternity rushes these men prior to the opening of school, one of their main interests is to convince the prospective freshman that this college is the one he should enter.

This brings out still another point to be considered before deferred pledging can be considered as desirable. If there are two educational institutions rather close together that are competing in a way for the same graduating high school students, would it be feasible for one to adopt the deferred pledging plan and not the other?

Deferment Cuts Enrollment

The answer is "no." In such a situation it is almost a foregone conclusion that the enrollment at the institution where pledging is deferred would suffer considerably. It is easy to see why. The high school student will be approached by fraternity men from the college where pledging is open. He will feel reasonably sure that if he attends that institution he will be able to pledge a good substantial fraternity. At the same time he has no assurance that if he goes to the other school that he will even be rushed.

This identical situation exists at Los Angeles, where the University of Southern California, and the University of California at Los Angeles are competing for the same high school students. At Southern California there are rules that prohibit pledging of high school students. At U. C. L. A. high school men can be pinned. This leaves the University of Southern California immeasurably handicapped in its rushing. But think what the situation would be if either of the schools had deferred pledging!

Patton To Begin Work On Museum Capitals

S. J. Patton, a stone carver of wide experience, started work this week on the capitals in the new fine arts museum court. He is carving 14 capitals that were modeled by R. W. Bock, instructor of sculpture, and his students, and panels modeled by the same class. Mr. Patton is from Portland.

Leap Week To Close Last Splurge Tonight

After one glorious splurge tonight at the Barroom Bust, senior women will resume their proper sphere in the collegiate world. This Bust marks the close, the grand finale of the activities of Senior Leap Week, which started Thursday afternoon with the Kappa Koffee.

Although there will be no "Tom 'n' Jerry's" or "Horse's Neck," "Gin Rickies," or "Manhattan Cocktails" in evidence, a sure-nuff old time bar will be there with a rail and sawdust and all the trimmings down to a jovial bartender.

Bowery toughs, cowboys, thugs, tramps, Bohemians, dancers, gypsies, Mexicans, a motley crew of them will all be there as seniors in disguise to partake in the evening's wild time.

The senior women are doing things up "brown" this year for the men, in one of the most elaborate week-ends ever held on the campus for the men.

This Barroom Bust represents the Beau Geste, or the Shanghai gesture, the last fling of the staid seniors before settling down to respectability.

Now that Senior Leap Week is upon us the man of the party can have a secret grin as his escort hands out the dough at the box office in return for two slim red tickets made of light cardboard. And not only that, but said man will have the privilege of selecting the evening's entertainment. What about that western he's been wanting to see?

Here you are, sir, Hoot Gibson in "Trailing Trouble" at the Rex. Or perhaps he wants some romance—what man doesn't? Well, Gaynor and Farrell are at your service at the McDonald. By the way, how about a comedy? Marion Davies will keep you amused at the Heilig in "Not So Dumb." Or if it's realism, Dick Barthelmess will supply it in "Young Nowheres." Last of all if pioneer pictures are preferred, the Colonial is right on hand with "The Virginian."
