Huge Saber-Tooth Tiger Lured To Death in Asphalt Is Story Told by Local Mounted Specimen

By MERLIN BLAIS

A great elephant floundered to its death in a reeking, sticky pool of asphalt, and its dead carcass lay gleaming white in the black mass. A ranging saber-tooth tiger approached the body, then leaped upon it, and commenced feeding on its flesh. The elephant slowly sank deeper into the asphalt, the long-toothed cat not noticing the death closing in about it also. The tiger leaped toward the firm edge of the pool, but slid back into the black half-liquid.

This is the story the skeleton of a saber-toothed tiger which has just been mounted in the geology department tells. The great carnivore is six feet in length, and over three feet in height, and it has two saber-teeth over six inches in length protruding downward from the massive upper jaw. The bones are typical of the cat, tending more toward those of the lion rather than the tiger, for the tiger slinks along the ground in the jungle, and the lion trots swiftly about in the grass of the tropical prairies.

The bones of the tiger were taken from the asphalt deposit at Rancho La Brea, near Los Angeles, has been preserved in almost perfect condition in the asphaltum. This pool which was but an acre in size has been the most prolific region in the world in the yielding of specimens of ancient mammals. Many thousands of specimens of horses, wolves, camels, lions, saber-tooth tigers, elephants, and of carnivorous birds, including owls, eagles, and even a peacock.

The skeleton was presented the University three years ago by Dr. Chester Stock, then instructor in vertebrate paleontology at the University of California, and now at the California Institute of Technology. It belongs to the species of smilodon californicus, which received its name from Dean John F. Bovard, of the physical education department. Dean Bovard was a student in paleontology at the University of California when the deposit was first dug into in 1902. He made a study of the saber-tooth tiger found in the asphalt pool, and after comparing it with species found in South America, he placed in the same genus, smilodon, but distinguished it from the others with the species title californicus. Although similar tigers have been dug up in Oregon none of them have reached the great size of the californicus, which in some instances, developed teeth 13 inches in length.

Sam Itzkowitz, senior in biology, mounted the local specimen. Although his experience in mounting has been limited to members of the feline world, he has done a neat and accurate piece of work with the tiger. Dr. Packard, of the geology department, said yesterday.

Oregon Rifle Team Takes Fifth Place In 9th Corps Area

National Intercollegiate Matches To Conclude Year's Activity

Only Five Highest Squads In Area Shoot

Aggregate scores of the area division of the National Intercollegiate matches, compiled by corps area headquarters in San Francisco, give the University of Washington first place, according to Captain C. H. Bragg, coach of the Oregon rifle team.

The scores are as follows: University of Washington, 7,602 points; Oregon State college, (first team) 7,588 points; Montana State college, 7,364 points; Oregon State college, (second team) 7,274 points; University of Oregon, 7,062 points.

Only the five highest teams in the preliminary matches are allowed to compete in the match, and this was the first time the Oregon team had entered, Captain Bragg said.

There are no more matches scheduled for this year.

Norblad Visits Over Week-End

Governor Makes Short Call on Campus

Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of articles written about the leading candidates for the office of governor of Oregon. The material printed attempts in no way to establish an editorial policy for the Emerald.

By BOB ALLEN

"Hats off to the past. . . Coats off to the future!" That's the slogan Governor A. W. Norblad is using in his campaign for Republican nomination for governor in the May primaries.

And well it fits him, too. Believe me, when you have to give up a good Sunday morning's sleep to interview a man, and even then, when he is so rushed that a few minutes is all he can spare, you know he's got his coat off for something. And it's not because he didn't need the sleep, either.

Saturday he attended almost a dozen dedications. Anyway, he reeled off a list as long as he is tall, of things that he had done the day before, and they were a lot worse than just going to a Saturday 8 o'clock, doing a few house duties, and maybe taking in a dance in the evening. Yes, sir, he has his coat off.

Meeting To Be Held of Canoe Fete Officials

Positions of Floats To Be Drawn This Afternoon At Four o'Clock

NEW FEATURES PLAN

Vodvil Acts and Choruses Are Gradually Nearing Completion

Drawings for places in the annual Canoe Fete will be made at a meeting of representatives from all houses participating, this afternoon in room 3, Johnson hall, according to an announcement made Monday by Bill East, chairman of the fete directorate. The meeting will start promptly at 4 o'clock and all organizations are requested to have a representative there.

Names selected for all floats must be submitted at the meeting, according to East, and all house representatives are urged to turn in the form sent them.

New Plans Made

Several innovations have been planned for this year's affair, and houses may now secure special lighting and music for their floats by simply requesting it of the directorate, East declared. It is the desire of the directorate to have the floats of a higher calibre than ever before as the fete will be the biggest attraction of the entire Junior Week-end this year.

The added attraction of three choruses and several individual specialties which will feature the evening's entertainment is expected to draw a greater attendance than ever before. A big stage is to be erected to take care of the large vodvil acts.

Tickets To Go on Sale

Prices announced for seats at the fete were also announced by East. Reserved seats, to go on sale at the Co-op several days before the event, will be 75 cents. General admission seats will be sold the evening of the fete at 50 cents.

University Press Publishes Murray Warner Booklet

Museum Cornerstone Will Contain Copy as Memoriam

A booklet about the life of Major Murray Warner was published recently by the University Press. The book will be placed in the cornerstone of the new Murray Warner museum, that his memory may always be preserved.

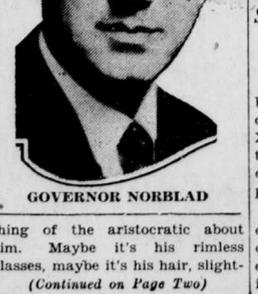

The booklet contains letters about him written by close friends of his, Leonard Metcalf and Captain Phillips H. Mallory. It is beautifully printed on a very fine grade of paper.

The introduction of the book says in part: "For a man who, himself, never visited the University of Oregon, Major Warner had had a most far-reaching effect on this institution. The priceless Murray Warner collection, brought together by Mrs. Gertrude Bass Warner, his widow, and donated to the University, can be traced in part to his inspiring influence." Major Warner was born March 9, 1869, and died October 4, 1920.

Cummings Returns From AWS Meet

President-elect Is Greeted By Snowstorm

"We arrived at 6:20 in the morning in a snowstorm," reminisced Margaret Cummings, president-elect of the Associated Women Students, who returned Saturday from the meeting of the Western Intercollegiate conference of A. W. S. and Deans of Women at Laramie, Wyoming.

"And what was worse, all the Oregon and California delegates brought their new spring clothes with them."

In Laramie, at least, everyone has the cowboy friend, Miss Cummings declared. Most of the 1,000 students at the University of Wyoming are sons and daughters of ranchers.

A formal dinner in honor of the delegates was one of the highlights of the conference, and was attended by the governor of the state. This was followed by a formal dance. "There were lots of cowboys to dance with," remarked the new A. W. S. president-elect, "and, oh, boy, did they dance!"

The American Association of University Women will hold a tea in the gallery today, when one of the professors of painting will address them. Andrew Vincent, professor of painting and drawing, will probably be the speaker.
