

Who's Who Men Big Per Cent of Session Faculty

G. Vannest, professor of history and education at Harris Teacher's College, St. Louis.

Three former members of the regular faculty of the University of Oregon who are listed for the summer session are L. R. Alderman, specialist in adult education, Dr. Ernest S. Bates, professor of English, and Dr. Karl M. Dallenbach, now at Cornell University as assistant professor of psychology.

Reynolds Known Here
Dr. Reynolds is known to Oregonians through his work as secretary of the University of Oregon Medical school at Portland. While secretary of the Medical school Mr. Reynolds continued his studies during spare time and vacations until he got his Ph.D. from Stanford. He is now associate professor of sociology at that institution and has gained considerable recognition in his work there.

We have room for a few remarks about some of the other prominent professorial visitors of the summer session.

Dr. Alderman has a long and enviable record of service in public education. He has been active in this field since his graduation from the University of Oregon in 1898. Some of his many positions have been, successively, superintendent of Yamhill county schools; superintendent of Eugene city schools, associated in the department of education, University of Oregon; Oregon state superintendent of public instruction, superintendent of Portland city schools; and since 1924 specialist in adult education for the bureau of education, with headquarters at Washington, D. C.

Dallenbach Once at Oregon
Dr. Karl M. Dallenbach, who was instructor in psychology in the University of Oregon from 1913 to 1915, and is now assistant professor of psychology at Cornell, does a job of editing in his odd moments. He has been associate editor of the American Journal of Psychology, since 1926; for five years previously he was associate business editor of that publication.

William Morris Davis, Ph.D., Sc.D., is the veteran of the group. With his record of fifty-four years of connection with Harvard University, he seems to be the Dean Straub of old Harvard. Dr. Davis, who for some years has been emeritus professor of geology, is the author of several standard works on geology and physical geography; he is a member of such important scientific societies as the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Philosophical Society, the Royal Geographical Society of London and the Geographical Society of Stockholm.

Fernald Acclaimed Leader
Dr. Grace M. Fernald, Ph.D., associate professor of psychology in the University of California at Los Angeles, is one of the country's outstanding experts in the development of retarded school children.

Dr. Alexander Goldenweiser is a native Russian, but received the greater part of his higher education in the United States, where he took the degree of Ph.D. at Columbia in 1910. He is a recognized leader in Anthropological study and writing in the United States. At present he is lecturer on anthropology in the Rand School of Social Science and is a member of the editorial staff of the Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences. Dr. Goldenweiser has written several books on anthropology and sociology. "The Making of Mankind," written in 1928, is his latest.

Alexander Hull, novelist, short-story writer and composer of music is head of the voice department of Pacific College at Newberg. He has contributed more than 100 short stories to magazines, written many songs, piano and orchestral numbers.

Hunt To Be at Portland
Harold Hunt, who will have charge of the classes in journalism in the Portland session, is dramatic editor of the Oregon Journal, Portland. He was graduated from the University of Oregon with the class of 1909. Before assuming his present position he was for a number of years northwest news editor of the Journal. His enthusiasm is calculated to be of inspiration to the young journalists.

Marion O'Kellie McKay is professor of economics and head of the department at the University of Pittsburgh, a position he has held since leaving the University of New Hampshire in 1920. He was for three years a member of the state tax commission of Pennsylvania and is the author of several monographs on taxation.

In R. A. Rice, Ph.D., professor of English literature at Smith College, the summer faculty will have one who is not only a recognized authority in his field but is a former assistant master of the famous Lawrenceville prep school, reputed to have been the locale of Owen Johnston's "The Varmint," and others of his great stories of school life. He has also served as instructor of English literature at the Naval Academy, Harvard University, and the University of Indiana.

Foreign Teachers Visit
The two visiting educators from foreign countries are C. W. Bailey, M.A., headmaster of Holt Secondary School, Liverpool, England, and Moises Saenz, M.A., assistant secretary of education in the republic of Mexico. Mr. Bailey, who holds an M.A. degree from Trinity College, Dublin, was formerly assistant in methods at the University of Liverpool. He is associate editor, for England, of "Independent Education," and is the author of "A Comparative Study of English and American Secondary Education."

Mr. Saenz has done much in the development of the new rural school system in Mexico. He holds the degrees of B.A. and M.A. from Vanderbilt University.

education, and his name is among the "Who's Who in America" along with Dr. Snedden and Mr. Alderman. He has been a public lecturer since 1927.

Foreign Teachers Have
Two educators from foreign countries will be present during the summer session. They are C. W. Bailey, headmaster of Holt secondary school, Liverpool, England, and Moises Saenz, acting secretary of education in the republic of Mexico. Both men are well qualified teachers, and will lecture in the same course as Snedden, Alderman, and Cotton.

Mr. Bailey holds an M. A. degree from Trinity college, Dublin, and was formerly assistant in methods at the University of Liverpool. He has also achieved some recognition as an author. His subject is, Phases of Progressive Education in England.

The Mexican teacher has B. A. and M. A. degrees from Vanderbilt university. He took a leading part in the development of Mexico's rural school system, and has written several articles dealing with education. His English is said to be faultless, and he comes highly recommended by Dean W. W. Camp, head of school of education at the University of California. His subject will be, Aspects of Mexican Culture and Education.

Moore Gives Course
Another synthetic course in education, Progress in Elementary Education, will be given by the five men previously mentioned, and Ralph U. Moore, assistant professor of education and principal at University high school. This is a special course for teachers in service. Snedden will lecture the first week; Bailey, the second; Saenz, the third; Cotton, the fourth; Alderman, the fifth; and Moore, the sixth.

Dr. Grace M. Fernald, associate professor of psychology at the University of California at Los Angeles, will be back on the campus this year for the summer session. She is well remembered for her excellent work in previous sessions in the field of the Clinical School and the Child Problem. She will be ably assisted in this subject this year by Miss Ruth Kneeland, formerly principal of the Bellevue School for clinical cases at Los Angeles, and Miss Lillian Rayner, teacher of remedial English in the Central Junior high school of Los Angeles.

Other visiting instructors in education, who will be on the campus for the summer session, are Ivan R. Waterman, assistant in the department of educational service of the San Francisco public schools, Conah Mae Ellis, girl adviser in the North Central high school, Spokane, Washington, and Chase L. Conover, professor of psychology and education, Pacific college, whose work will be in the post-session of the summer school.

Eight Remain on Campus
Members of the regular education faculty remaining on the campus are Dean Sheldon, Dr. DeBusk, Professor Stetson, Dr. Huffaker, Mrs. Goodall, Mrs. Pattee, Mr. Leighton, and Assistant Professor Moore.

In the Portland session the name of Dr. Charles Garrett Vannest, professor of history and education, Harris Teacher's college, St. Louis, stands out as one of the most prominent. He has had a great deal of experience in the Middle West, and is the author of text books in both history and education. He will teach courses in classroom organization and management, and the history of education in the United States. Dr.

Vannest will also be on the post-session faculty in Eugene.

John E. Bryan, superintendent of Schools in Bessemer, Alabama, will teach courses dealing with platform schools in the Portland session. Other instructors on the staff are Dr. Charles N. Reynolds, professor of sociology, Stanford university; Esther W. Wuest, Chicago Art Institute, supervisor of art in the Portland public schools; Thomas B. Gentle, professor of education at the University; C. R. Holloway, assistant superintendent of schools, Portland; and Charles E. Rothwell, instructor in education at the University.

REX UNDERWOOD HAS SYSTEM OF HIS OWN

moment before breakfast. Even though I am called several times, I lie quietly and firmly resist the temptation to get up. Some might think I were asleep, my self control is so perfect. Now at first glance, this may seem to be a strange procedure as part of a system of exercise, but it has a reason. When I get up at last, I have to hurry so fast to get a shave, bath, breakfast and to school that I am in a healthy glow in no time at all.

Another sacrifice is my cold shower. I am particularly proud of an icy shower, but instead, I always plunge into a zippy, tingling tub of warm water. This means that in addition to turning on the faucets I have to put the plug in and out again.

"I have also given up walking for the success of my system. I live just three blocks from the school and it is a temptation to walk, but my method is a stern taskmaster, so I take the car.

Think what it means—opening the garage door, shifting gears, and stopping at stop streets. A stern routine? Perhaps, but it is only the beginning.

"Throughout the day I miss no opportunity to build up pep. In playing I sometimes lift my finger higher than necessarily solely to build up the finger muscles. I sit whenever possible on cushioned chairs because it requires an effort to get out of them. While doing chair exercises I often smoke, as I find it a splendid exercise for the shoulder muscles and biceps, to throw away cigarette butts.

"Thus you see it is by constant attention to details and sticking sternly to the vigorous routine that I have maintained my splendid physique and health. I am aware that all this seems severe and a bit Spartan, and I would not advise anyone to undertake it except by a gradual process. It should be started early and increased day by day until that red-blooded, he-man, effervescent feeling of power bubbles within. Then one will know that he is full of vim, pep and red corpuscles, and can go to the limits I have described without fear of strain or breakdown."

Limitation of armaments and political problems arising from the London naval conference are to be discussed at an Institute of Politics to be held at Williams college, Mass., July 31 to Aug. 28.
