A Successful Administration

"R ING out the old, ring in the new . . . "

This morning the new student body officers will be inaugurated. Those who were elected recently in the polls will be installed in their positions and the incumbent students will join the ranks members of the corps.

This year's student administration has been an exceptionally active one as well as constructive in the things it has accomplished.

The reframing of the whole A. S. U. O. constitution stands out as the outstanding achievement of the year. Involving as it did hundreds of hours of work of remodelling, the constitution as accepted by the students is in better working condition than it has been for several years.

What else has the Stoddard administratio complished?

It has refinanced the A. S. U. O. by floating $150,000 in bonds to wipe out the student body

It has abolished several useless and archaic traditions. It has selected a new football coach and is pointed toward an era of expansion and activity in

It has successfully handled the strained relations with Oregon State college over sportsmanship at athletic contests.

It has reorganized the Greater Oregon committee to function at increased efficiency about the state through city chairmen.

It reapportioned the associated student body offices on the executive council and stbsidiary committees so that students have the majority vote in all cases.

carried out the routine duties which go with a school year. Oregon owes Tom Stoddard and his student assistants a lot for what they have done. Today's inauguration assembly is an opportune time to show its gratitude by full attendance at

Why an Emerald?

A SYMPHONY without its leader, a band of sheep without its herder, or an army without its captain might well be likened to a university with no publication through which harmony, interest, and complete understanding may be realized.

As a newspaper of the associated students, the Oregon Daily Emerald aims to maintain the honor and respect shown by the students during past ad- they-you finish it. ministrations. Through its columns it attempts to transmit all news of a type deserving publication, all in a non-partisan manner. Its editorial columns are devoted only to the advancement of worthy ideas and to suggestions for those ideas deemed unwise. They propound truly constructive criticism. From a toy paper of four columns once a week the Emerald has thrived and grown to the eightcolumn daily emulating the most successful publication as a purveyor of student news and a forum is to run around the block and work up a heat .-

No Need to Vote

. Managing Editor MONTH or so ago it was estimated that but A 40 per cent of the registered voters of Oregon would cast their ballots in the primary elections tomorrow. A month or so ago an editorial writer of a Eugene daily paper approved of that small

> Too much attention, he said, is turned toward politics in the state of Oregon. And the moral which most draw from that is that voters should interest themselves only in the general elections.

Those primaries are tomorrow.

Drumming on Drum Corps

WITH the vast improvement shown in the Oregon band over previous years comes the suggestion for further advancement through the organization of a drum corps. As one of the most effective pieces of machinery in the pep world such has been used to great advantage by many institutions. The trimness, snap and enthusiasm shown by such an organization adds polish to rallies and Music group of Philomelete - be presented. Carolyn Haberlach outdoor entertainment. .

While it is impossible to send the full band combination, which usually consists of about forty students, to many football games away from the campus, representation of the University may be had by the fifteen who are

Material for membership in such an organization need not be of the polished musician type. If such were the case, realization of this suggestion would be an impossibility. On the contrary, a group of men can be carefully trained under the supervision of a competent leader and shape down into form with only a few weeks' work.

The University of Oregon is growing. Its activities in the music world are beginning to reach farther than the limits of the campus. A drum corps would prove an effective supplement to the bigger and better band.

"A crowd consumes, it hates, and it dreams, but it never builds," President Hoover told Yale students in a psychology lecture. Anyone watching the Canoe Fete floats in the process of construction would agree with him that a crowd never builds.

George Bernard Shaw says the way to eliminate poverty is to kill off everyone earning less than $3000 a year or wanting more. Does he want this whole world to himself?
