

Refusal of Parker Should Be Straightforward Says Dean

Carpenter Thinks That if Man Is Not Considered Of Supreme Court Calibre, He Should Be Dismissed for That Alone

By ELEANOR JANE BALLANTYNE

"It is to be surmised that the senators who refused to confirm the nomination of Judge Parker really felt that he was not of supreme court calibre, and if that is correct, it is most unfortunate that it wasn't placed squarely on that ground so as to make a president aware in the future in his selection of candidates," said Dean Carpenter, of the law school, yesterday, who does not feel that the attack made upon Judge Parker on the ground of his decisions being unfair to labor, in his upholding the "yellow dog" contract, were warranted.

"There was nothing left for a lower federal judge to do under the state of the law, but to enjoy the use of persuasion to induce employees, who had entered into the employment under a contract not to join a union so long as they continued in that employment, to break that contract," said the dean. "This was the ground of the decision in the famous Hitchman case in which Justice Holmes and Brandeis dissented, and these dissents gave much encouragement to labor.

Tri-City Case Cited

"The statement by Senator Borah that the later Tri-City case in the United States supreme court modified this holding in the Hitchman case, is wholly unfounded. In the Tri-City case there was no contract involved. No federal judge, situated as Judge Parker was, having any competency in the law whatever, could have done differently in enjoining the unions from inducing a breach of one of these "yellow-dog" contracts in the Red Jacket cases.

"Of course," Dean Carpenter went on, "the labor unions cannot be blamed for their attack upon Parker, although it was not really an attack upon him, but upon the United States supreme court's conservative decision in the Hitchman case that they were aiming at." Concerning Owen J. Roberts, the man now being considered for the supreme court vacancy, Dean Carpenter said:

"Owen J. Roberts is a man of an entirely different type. He is one of the ablest lawyers of his years in America. I have heard him speak on three different occasions, and on each of these I was favorably impressed with his analytical and keen mind, and his ability to express himself briefly, without a superfluous word. One who hears him always feels that he has handled his subject adequately and comprehensively, yet tersely.

Teaching Experience Valuable

"I know nothing of his legal scholarship, but I surmise that it is of a high order, and that his early experience as a professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania has furnished a foundation that will be valuable for him if he becomes a member of the supreme bench.

"His expressions in regard to the prohibition amendment should not be taken against him even by the dregs, for he was simply objecting to prohibition by constitutional amendment and not by legislative enactment. This is a distinction taken, and an attitude approved of by most political scientists and lawyers."

Business Staff Is Given New Home

Bill Hammond at Last Gets Private Office

At last the Emerald business manager has a private office; and the other members of the staff have a large room to work in, where they can turn around without kicking the waste basket over. The big house-moving of the business office has taken place.

The editorial staff has picked up its great semi-circular desk, and moved with it into the typing room on the south side of the Journalism building. The business staff, formerly in the little shack on the back of Friendly hall, has taken up quarters in the old copy room.

Bill Hammond, business manager, is occupying the old office of Vinton Hall, managing editor, while Hall has moved in with Art Schoeni, editor.

The telephone numbers have not been changed: editorial office, 655; business office, 1895.

7 Reserve Officers Review Parade Here

Seven members of the Lane county chapter of the Reserve Officers association reviewed the R. O. T. C. parade, which took place at 5 o'clock Wednesday evening. Harvey Wright, major in the cadet corps, acted as battalion commander. There are two more parades to be held, according to Major F. A. Barker, head of the department of military science.

Plans for Co-eds' Breakfast Unique

'Cap and Gown' Feature Affair on Sunday

A "Cap and Gown" idea, and spring flowers will form the decorations at the annual Junior-Senior breakfast which will be held in the Gerlinger building, Sunday, May 18, at 8:30. The affair is given in honor of the graduating class by the junior women, and is sponsored by the Y.W.C.A.

Speakers at the breakfast will be: Dean Virginia Judy Esterly, Helen Peters, who will speak for the senior women, Bess Templeton, who will represent the juniors, and Christine Holt. Daphne Hughes, president of the Y. W., will preside. Subjects of each talk have not been announced as yet, but they will carry out the idea of a farewell to the senior women.

Lucille Kraus, in charge of the serving, announced the following girls would assist: Frances Drake, Dorothy Foss, Marjorie Halderman, Barbara Leiter, Betty Jones, Jean Lennard, Eileen McIntyre, Jean Whitney, Frieda Stadler, Frances Calderwood, Kay Laughridge, Ruth Bracher, Nora Jean Stewart, Carol Werschkul, and Margaret Luce.

All junior women who have not bought their tickets yet, or have not signified their intention of asking some particular senior, are asked to do so immediately, at the Bungalow, according to Dorothy Thomas, secretary of the Y.W.

Donald M. Erb Passes Doctor's Examinations

Mr. Donald M. Erb, assistant professor of economics, who has been on leave of absence studying at Harvard to complete the requirements for his Ph. D. degree, has passed the final examination and his thesis on "Weak Railroads," has been approved by the department of economics. His doctor's degree will be formally granted at the coming commencement according to word received by Dean Gilbert today.

Dr. Erb and family will leave next week for Washington, D. C., where he will spend the summer in research work and in revising his doctor's thesis for publication in book form. He will return to Eugene and take up residence about the first of September, and resume his work in the economics department at the beginning of fall term.

TODAY'S ATTRACTIONS

McDonald—"Paramount on Parade."
Rex—"Mountain Justice."
State—"Song of Kentucky."
Colonial—"The Love Doctor."
Heilig—"Ingagi."

Paramount is putting on a parade this week at the McDonald theatre, and what a parade it is. In the line of march we have some of the best known and best loved of our screen celebrities. One can really imagine Maurice Chevalier as a Paris cop, but who could ever conceive of fat Harry Green as a foreador? We'd be almost sure bull wouldn't get badly hurt, yet Paramount is full of surprises.

Ken Maynard breaks away from straight westerns for once to do a highly dramatic tale of love and justice in the Kentucky mountain country. These feuds are worse than a Chicago gang fight.

Another Kentucky angle is presented at the State. "Song of Kentucky" breathes of the race track, and simply abounds in jockeys.

Richard Dix is a competent physician in "The Love Doctor" at the Colonial. This degree must be D. M. L., Doctor of Many Loves. "Ingagi" is a good show to see if you are disgusted with your present state of life. It is reasonable to admit it is better to be a victim of a rolling pin than to be a close resemblance to Pithecanthropus Erectus, or whoever those African creatures descended from.
