Elinor Glynn has many tricks of her own in writing thrillers, but in that very enchanting presentation, "Such Men Are Dangerous," she seems to have borrowed a little trick from Goethe who gave us "Faust." Ludwig, the ugly bachelor has much in common with Dr. Faustus, save he got himself rejuvenated by modern science rather than by selling his soul to the bad old devil.

Dixie Dugan, wisecracker and philosopher, reigns today at the Heilig in "Show Girl in Hollywood." Alice White fits as well into Dixie's characterization as she did in her former success.
