Dean Sheldon Has Citizenship Plan

Idea of Civic Duty and Patriotism Combined

Real citizenship is based on intelligent patriotism, Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, dean of the school of education at the University of Oregon, believes, and he has worked out a plan of civics study for high schools which incorporates this idea. The plan is being presented by Dr. Sheldon at various institutions over the state, and is being endorsed by educators and civic leaders.

The plan, which is four-fold, substitutes a dramatic and vital method of teaching civics for the old formal way. In the first place, the students will be taught to have an interest in current events, so that their curiosities will be stimulated as to how the wheels of government turn. By dramatizing government, the students, while they may not learn quite as many facts, will be much more interested in it than if they study it out of a book, Dr. Sheldon says.

This plan has been put in force in the University high school, and has been found highly successful.

"Suzanne"

A 1930 Red Cross Famous "Limit Last" Shoe in Black

"Suzanne" is a popular shoe because it can be worn either with a spectator sports outfit or with an afternoon dress. In design—"Suzanne"—is an Oxford—light weight. The basic leather is a pebbly Morocco that has a dull linen-like surface. The Continental Cuban heel, the interesting trimming on the top of the shoe, and the strap trimming over the instep that give to the shoes a sandal-like effect, are all in patent leather. And following the line of the sandal-like straps are lines of perforations in the actual leather that converge on the instep, giving the foot a slender and dainty appearance. These perforations extend around the top of the shoes.
