An Emerald With Wings

TONIGHT at 8:15 the broadcasts sponsored by the student publication and KORE will be resumed. It will be the Oregon Daily Emerald of the air.
Something more than mere hour broadcasts, something higher than the incessant prattling of an advertising announcer, something greater than the trifling amusement of the cheap entertainer, the radio hour is a vent for the unlimited supply of campus talent. Many a student who is blessed with the ability to perform rarely finds occasion to expose his skill. He has difficulty finding a field for development. Too, the radio public and fellow students are interested listeners to the unassuming and imperfect amateur.
The Emerald and station KORE have organized the hour fundamentally for this purpose. No other way may an ambitious student perform. The Junior Vodvil is held only once each year—sometimes not then. Here only a selected group is given a chance—but on the radio hour ample time will be found for any worthy aspirant.
Keen interest was shown in a contest sponsored last year by the Emerald. It was merely indicative of the vast field from which bi-weekly programs may draw. People are tired of listening to "canned" music. They are tired of listening to electrical transcriptions and concerts by individuals in whom they do not maintain a personal interest. A campus tinge will be given the Emerald radio hours. Each program will be primarily for the entertainment of students, faculty, and boosters of the University of Oregon.

Let Dad Have His Way

SATURDAY, October 25, will be a red-letter day on the University of Oregon calendar on one condition—that more fathers attend the third annual "Dads' Day" to be observed then on the campus than have attended the affairs of the past two years.
"Dads' Day" is one of the best of Oregon's new traditions and the Emerald sees no reason why this year should not see the largest influx of fathers to the campus. The last two "Dads' Days" have been successful. But that does not mean that this year's event should be no more than that. Let's make October 25 a record-breaker for attendance. The third time is the charm—the old saying goes.
A record attendance of Dads this year will go far towards strengthening the Oregon Dads' association, which is working with the best interests of the University at heart. And a day in Eugene will give visiting fathers a closer contact with the University their sons and daughters have chosen.
Entertainment galore has been planned for "Dads' Day." There's the Oregon-Idaho football game in the afternoon on Hayward field, the annual banquet at McArthur court that evening, and special luncheons and dinners at fraternity and sorority houses.
Let Dad have his day. He'll enjoy it and so will you. Write to YOUR dad now and be sure to get him here October 25.

It's a Real Band!

WHEN is a band an asset?
During the past few years an attempt has been made to have a worthy organization of trained musicians represent Oregon in the form of a band. Until last year students openly ridiculed the organization. It was a sort of hit and miss proposition. There was no regular training course, and if the organization was started within the first month of the fall term it was a lucky break.
Today a large party of representative Oregon citizens will invade Seattle on a challenge trip—for the Oregon-Washington football game to be played in Portland October 18—and the big attraction of that notable party will be centered around a great Oregon band. The band will parade the streets of Seattle and will also be much in evidence around the Washington campus. The Oregon band this year is a real asset.
Where credit belongs there let it rest. In this case the credit should go to none other than John Stehn, who is starting on his second year as director of the Oregon band. Mr. Stehn has worked hard to make the Webfoot musicians among the best on the coast, and he has succeeded. Instead of waiting until school was begun, the members of the band started rehearsals during Rush Week. It was not a small group of 30 or 40 players, but an organization of 75 pieces.
Hard work on the part of the members of the band and untiring and painstaking effort on the part of Mr. Stehn have contributed to the success of this year's organization. The 1930 Oregon band will be a great asset to the University.

Since we are undergoing a period of business depression and finances seem to be flowing less freely than they should, why not organize an anti-haircut league?

Some agitation has been felt among campus women for advancing the date of Dads' Day. Could it be scheduled before the Washington game it might mean a few new fur coats.

Students enter the University because they cannot secure jobs and have nowhere else to go, according to an article which appeared in the Emerald yesterday morning. We wonder if students enter the College Side for the same purpose.

Someone said that a darn good looking girl somewhere back East didn't know where Oregon was. Well, beauty is only skin deep.

Tommy Williams, football manager, says that if you get the football team up in the air you can save one thousand dollars by not feeding them.

A Decade Ago

From the Emerald, October 9, 1920

Opening the season's dances, 275 couples gathered at the armory last night for the first of the Student Body dances. Though this was the first dance to be given by any campus organization, the crowd was far lighter than expected. These student body affairs are to be given from time to time during the school year.

Forgetfulness in a professor is excusable when the offense is nothing more than an attempt to put a textbook in a vest pocket and a chain-anchored watch in a bookcase, but when mental lapses result in class period irregularities, about 1700 Oregon students are up on their toes.

Classes taken up ahead of schedule time inconvenience students who have to travel across the campus from other classes held over-time by instructors engrossed in their own work. Early roll calls are unfair to the pupils. Classes held late are injustices to other instructors.

Punctuality is an essential of success. Instructors should not encourage tardiness by their own abuse of time exactitude.

Between Classes

Yesterday we saw: VINTON HALL orating in front of the Cop; KITZMILLER wearing a new pledge pin; NEIL TAYLOR presiding at a political meeting; DOT THOMAS sneaking to breakfast; K. O. MULLINS leaving the infirmary; PETE SLAUSEN and GEORGE WILL gulping milkshakes; CHET ANDERSON in the Women's gym; WILBUR THIBAUULT in uniform; and ADELE HITCHMAN getting rained on.

THE WETFOOT

"ALL THE NEWS THAT'S FOOT TO PRINT"

We notice that the Sigma Chi didn't issue the story to the press of Sidney Wood, the tennis shark, entering school until after he was registered and had the pledge button on. The boys learned several bitter lessons this year and are taking no chances.

Many of the boys are waiting for the memorial arts museum to open as a problem of what to do with Sunday afternoon dates when it becomes winter.
WELL, THERE WILL BE NO BLINDS TO PULL DOWN, ANYWAY.

Prof. Myer's accent.

Wetfoot Detective Agency Solves Murky Mystery

The Wetfoot detective agency has just solved one of the most puzzling mysteries of the year. It will be remembered that a week before school started the Alpha Phi radio came up missing. The A. O. Pis, it has been revealed, have just blossomed out with one similar.
Motive: Several of the heavy steadies who clutter up the Alpha Phi parlor during dull afternoons, were heard to mutter that they wished the (censored) thing were in purgatory. The reason given was that it was very difficult to whisper sweet nothings into the girl's lily white ear with the (censored) thing playing "Stars and Stripes Forever" full blast. Also, that when things were getting serious the girls could arise, disengage themselves and walk over to the radio on pretext of either turning it off or on. Also that it offered a good excuse to spend a quiet evening at home instead of going up the millrace. Further, the Alpha O's needed a radio to drown out the sounds of revelry from the D. Z. and Alpha Gam

Conclusion—Judge for yourselves.

Oh, it's easy enough to be happy when you've a car of your own; But the house worth while Is the house which can smile When the pledges take their Cadillac home.

Midnight and the closing hour,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no proctor at the door
When I come in at three;
But such a luck one never seems to have,
Too bad for curse or groan,
When that which draws from out the shadows deep
Turns again home.

Monday and the seniors' meet and after that the tub!

To the Editor:
After reading the letter by A. T. and M. R. in yesterday's Emerald, I am convinced that there are still a lot of people that think the University is running a day nursery instead of an infirmary.
What a pity that their friend wasn't admitted to the infirmary two weeks ago. If I had been running the place I wouldn't have let him in either. How would I know that he was going to pay $26.25 for medical attention, a student body ticket, and "gym itch"? As far as I have been able to find out, you can't collect the benefits until after you have registered and it has only been a week and a half since we did that.

A. T. and M. R. also have a friend who was refused admission over the telephone last night. If the nurses in charge were to admit all the students who called up for a bed, the place would look more like a fraternity or sorority house sleeping porch than an infirmary.

I happened to be in the infirmary myself when he made a personal call to gain admission. In fact, I was standing about three feet from him. I didn't hear him do any begging though. If he had, I am just kind-hearted enough to have given him my bed and slept in the sink with the rest of the drips. But as it was, he got a bed without having to do any more than have his temperature taken. The next day he was worrying about getting out.

If a man who is seemingly on the very brink of death can be brought back to complete recovery in 18 hours, the infirmary can't be such a bad place. Personally, if they can work such miracles as that, I think that I'll buy some stock in the institution.
