It's Your School

PLEDGE day on the University campus is a day set aside to honor Oregon, to build up faith in its expeditious, and to organize a spirit of interest and good-will in the community of students.

Will students attend this assembly? True, there have been programs proffered to students who have not accepted. Programs have been equal to the one promised for Thursday morning.

At the assembly Thursday morning some of the greatest minds of the state will be opened before the audience. As guest speakers, Governor Norblad and Frank Irvine of the Oregon Journal will hold the floor.

After all, pledge day is a day for the University. It is your school and your duty to help it. It will be a real assembly—with the entire University orchestra, the great choir, and the noted men present.

Initiative of '32

FOLLOWING its plan of inaugurating some new class activity each year, the class of 1932 now comes forth with its latest idea—the Junior Jinx.

In its second year of existence, the class held, in addition to its regular functions, a sophomore banquet, and attracted the favorable attention of the campus.

The Emerald likes the initiative of the class of 1932. Would that other classes show similar originality and introduce new and useful traditions that following classes could carry on.

Recently the Emerald printed the names of Oregon alumni who were prominent in state politics and failed to include the name of Julius L. Meier.

"COLLEGE SPIRIT?" College traditions—the traditions Washington now is in the process of reviving—stunt the growth of individuality.

The true college spirit consists of only a diligent search for cultural knowledge," Dr. Savery further stated.

Can traditions be condemned on the ground that they stunt individuality? There are multitudinous laws which accomplish that purpose, and much more effectively, yet these laws are quite necessary to the efficient administration of government.

It is true that college should train the individual to think for

THE MEDICAL SCHOOL: There have been howls of protest from this department of the University because they feel that they have been slighted in not being included in our survey of schools and departments. So here goes: One never sees much of the students in the med department. They are the bane of the pet lover's existence. No domestic pet, be it cat, dog, sheep, owl, or rhinoceros is safe within 100 yards of Deady hall. In fact the animals shun it like poison, and for good reason. Up there among the tortuous turnings of Old Deady there dwell a peculiar race. Their hair and clothes are unkempt, their near sighted eyes are covered by horn rims, and the shoulders are stooped from bending over the dead cadavers of all types of beastie and battles—election defeats—dirty politics—futile attempts to complete a lesson assignment on time—and the rest of it create such problems. Together, they constitute the "true college spirit." A "diligent search for cultural knowledge" could be but a phase, even though an important one, of such an education.—Washington Daily.

retrieve a stolen pumpkin. It's sure getting to be a heck of a note when women have to lock men up to keep them in the house. birdie, stept in alcohol. The odor is something between a morgue and a distillery. They are the one department in the University who have access to the pure grain alcohol, and, need I add, it aids them immeasurably in making their way through school. It is the one reason why they are accepted in polite society. Their social life is nil. The girls refuse to go out with them because, in the midst of a perfectly normal conversation, one is apt to see their dim eyes light up with a fanatical glare, they jump out of their seats, run down a cat which is innocently walking by, and tear it limb from limb to see what makes it run. This is too much for anyone. Whenever you look at them, they make you feel uncomfortable, as if they were looking into your very innards, and one can almost see their fingers itching to get you where they can dissect you at their leisure. It's a good think to handshake them while they are in the University, because, if they dislike you,

In every college town there is one outstanding smoking tobacco. At Illinois it's ALONG Green Street, where campus leaders stroll... in the great slate-roofed fraternity houses of Champaign... there is one pipe tobacco which always rolls up the biggest vote. At Illinois it's Edgeworth, every time. A pipe—Edgeworth. That is the smoking combination which has won the college man. Harvard, Cornell, Michigan, Stanford, Dartmouth—all agree with Illinois. Natural merit has made Edgeworth the favorite tobacco in America's leading colleges and universities. College men everywhere respond to the appeal of pipes—packed with cool, slow-burning Edgeworth. Be guided by their verdict: try Edgeworth yourself. Find it at your nearest tobacco shop—15¢ the tin. Or, for generous free sample, address: Larus & Bro. Co., 105 S. 22d St., Richmond, Va.

it makes our blood chill to think what they could do to us when they start practicing medicine. The chief aid to the University is the fact that they are the reason so many students take up Christian Science.
