

The Emerald SCORE BOARD By Jack Burke

RENEW YOUR OREGON SPIRIT

Today is the day that we gather to do honor to returning alumni. Homecoming may be a bother to some of us but it is at least the occasion for a renewal of spirit and loyalty to the University which we have been associated with.

This renewal of spirit should be manifested at today's game. The game itself should be interesting and should foster this spirit. Thus far the true outbursts of student enthusiasm have been few and far between and this game offers an opportunity for the redemption of our lost prestige.

Students are apt to forget in moments of victory, what that victory or string of victories has cost in hours of patient labor by the coach and hours of concentrated work by a squad of players.

We don't like to be harping on this very much but there is a decided lack of spirit around and if we want to beat Oregon State next Saturday it is going to take the combined efforts of Doc Spears, eleven men and the entire student body to do it. So we offer the suggestion that you take the kinks out of your vocal chords today in order that they may be in perfect shape for next week.

MANY GOOD GAMES ON TAP

Today is another one of those days when the schedule holds interest throughout the entire conference. Washington meets the Stanford Redshirts and although many would predict that the north-erners can take them as the Sons of Troy did not long ago, we fail to see where the justification of this is. Phelan has a tough three weeks ahead of him and although this is a game which would make a nice win he is going to save something for Washington State. So we think that Pop can win this week-end.

Down in Los Angeles Nibs Price is going to try and repeat his last year's performance against the Sons of Troy. Nibs and his California Bears got a break last year and managed to win 15 to 0, only to turn around and get crushed by Stanford, which in turn had fallen before the U. S. C. team.

Nibs would like to beat U. S. C., but not so much as he would like to beat Stanford. So although the Los Angeles team has never yet defeated both California and Stanford in the same season before we believe that this is the year that they will do it.

COUGARS TAKE ON IDAHO VANDALS

Washington State will meet another team this afternoon that will be primed to knock them over. The Cougars proved a bit weak against a passing attack last Saturday and may find trouble against Idaho but not enough, however, to make much difference, as they should win handily.

As for the game here we believe just this. That Oregon can win by two touchdowns and also that the Oregon backs will be passed off their feet to the extent of a touchdown. We may be wrong, we have been before but nevertheless that is our opinion and must be taken for what you believe it is worth.

DON'T HOOP LEAGUE SUCCESS

We are pleased to notice that the enthusiasm which was manifested in the intramural swimming series has been carried over into the basketball season.

Paul Washke, the new head of the physical education department, has taken a great interest in this phase of the work of the department and while no small part of the success is due to his efforts we are glad to see that the students are cooperating with him.

Freshman Gridders Outplay Washington Babes to Win by Score of 25 to 6

Lillard Proves Stellar Player In Yearling Tilt

Passing Offense Scores Three Touchdowns For Oregon Men

U. of W. Squad Makes Lone Score in Long March Down Gridiron

By BRUCE HAMBY

Using a sensational running and forward-passing attack led by Joe Lillard and Mark Temple, the Oregon Frosh eleven outplayed the University of Washington Babes in every department of the game yesterday on Hayward field to win by a 25-to-6 score as a curtain-raiser to Homecoming week-end.

Statistics show that the Frosh outplayed the Babes in every phase of the game. They gained 187 yards from scrimmage to the Babes' 116. They intercepted six Husky passes, two of which put them in scoring position. Out of 22 passes thrown, they completed 10 for gains totalling more than 192 yards. Three of the Frosh scores were made on forward passes. A fourth touchdown was made by Temple on a 10-yard drive through the center of the line.

Joe Lillard played a brilliant game for the Frosh. His passing was accurate; his ball carrying was most spectacular, and his blocking and defensive work were of varsity caliber. A close second to Lillard in outstanding play was Mark Temple. His fighting twisting runs accounted for one score and several first downs. Kennedy's line plugging and backing up of the line was a big factor in holding down the offense of the Husky backs.

Mike Mikulak and Chuck Wishard stood out at the wing posts, both often smearing Babe plays behind the line. Anderson at guard did his part in forcing the Babes backwards also.

Starting lineups: BABES vs FROSH. Includes names like Thompson, LER, Wishard, Isaacson, LTR, Fury, Shores, LGR, Anderson, Nuttley, C, McKelligon, Nuttley, RGL, Thompson, Deacey, RTL, Morgan, Yama, REL, Mikulak, Bolton, Q, Bobbitt, Witter, LHR, Temple, McMeine, RHL, Lillard, Smith, F, Kennedy.

Favorites Remain In Running for Basketball Title

Sigma Nus, S.A.E.'s Appear To Have Strongest Hoop Quints

The first round of intramural basketball left most of the favorites still in possession of the field, although a few had their hopes rudely jostled. Kappa Sig, Sigma Nu, Delta, and Phi Delta received setbacks from supposedly inferior antagonists while Beta, Phi Psi, Sigma Alpha Mu, Theta Chi, S. A. E., and A. T. O. successfully defended themselves.

A. B. C. Bachelordon, Gamma and Omega hall proved themselves the dark horses of the tourney. A. B. C. showed the best form of the four but they have yet to acquire shooting ability. The Omegas did some splendid point-gathering in their game while Bachelordon and Gamma appear to be one-man teams.

The championship of League II will hinge greatly on the result of the A. T. O.-Sigma Alpha Mu game Monday. The winner, however, will still have to hurdle the Theta Chi barrier, which is mighty steep indeed.

Eat Your Fill, Alumni

Old Grad's Gift Trees Stand As Silent Campus Sentinels

Living Testimonies Are Marked With Year of Donating Class

Campus sentinels they might be called, the class trees, growing near Deady and Villard, that are gifts of the first and succeeding graduating classes of the University from 1878 to 1900.

Quite distinguishing for a tree to have an entire university class hoping for its health and growth! A map found in the comptroller's office revealed the location of these living gifts, and Friday morning found markers bearing the class year under the base of each tree. When the map was made one of the trees had died, and since then two more have probably been removed, for they couldn't be found.

The variety of the trees is interesting to note, for it includes several types of evergreens, and in addition oaks, laurels, linden myrtle and elm.

The first class to graduate, in 1878, had only five members. One of them is Judge Robert S. Bean, United States district judge, who is the only member still living. An other prominent member of this group was Mrs. Ellen Condon McCornack, whose loyal interest in the University ceased only with her recent death. An English laurel is the gift of this class, and was obtained by Professor Condon, veteran instructor in geology, after whom Condon hall is named. This tree was planted near the west walk leading from Deady to Villard.

A cedar tree is the gift of the class of 1879. In 1880 a large class was graduated and, true to its size, left a California Big Tree. Members of the class have become prominent over the state and in the Northwest. A Port Orford cedar was left by the class of 1881.

Due to a triple misfortune, no tree was left for those of '82. A mountain hemlock was set out early in the year, but it lived for only a short time and another tree was planted, which shared the same fate. While the seniors were discussing another planting, a leading member of the class became suddenly ill and died also.

Almost all of the class of '83 are said to be from pioneer families, many of whom are well known in Lane county. The '83 tree, an elm, sent here by Senator Slater, father of one of the graduates, grew from a slip of the famous Elm at Washington's tomb at Mt. Vernon. The cedar left by the class of '84 is on the north side of the walk from Deady to the old athletic track.

Class Swimming Teams Selected By Miss Troemel

He Couldn't Do It Himself, So Looky

TODAY'S issue of the Emerald contains a lot of news about Homecoming and week-end events.

Rufus Kimball, who has plucked away at the typewriter, met with the committee, and been on the job all the time for the last two weeks. We have his picture and we are publishing it. Since he couldn't and still maintain his cloak of modesty, we will, and here it is.

Florence Alden motored to Portland last night in the latter's car to attend the concert of Fritz Kreisler, master violinist. They will return this morning in time for Homecoming festivities.

MONDAY'S GAMES: Men's Gym, 4:00-Sigma hall vs. Kappa Sig, 5:00-S. P. E. vs. Delt, Igloo, 4:00-A. T. O. vs. S. A. M., Phi Sig vs. Phi Delt, 5:00-Fiji vs. International house, S. A. E. vs. Friendly hall.

Yearling 'B' Team Goes to Ashland

Frosh To Play Normal School This Afternoon

Twenty-one members of the freshman "B" squad left early this morning for Ashland, where they will play the Ashland Normal school gridders this afternoon in the Ashland school's Homecoming game.

This game was originally set for the varsity "B" team, but due to many injuries handicapping the players, the yearlings were sent instead.

The players making the trip include: Kranenburg, Meredith, McCallum, Campbell, Wiltshire, Benton, Thomas, Morast, VanEvery, Munholland, Nelson, Glassman, Shepardson, Ross, Beckam, Johnson, Voegly, Hakanson, Ballard, and Hug. They were accompanied by a student manager and assistant coach.
