Who Says It's an Honor?

ON THE campus of the University of Oregon one may find an extremely hard-working group of underclassmen. The members usher at games, spend their time doing odd jobs for the associated students, and help now and then with the enforcement of some of Oregon's traditions.

On looking more deeply into the situation we find that they are called the "Oregon Knights." The membership is made up each year by new recruits chosen from the freshman class by each living organization. To some extent it was originally designed to be an honor. But is it now an honor to be an "Oregon Knight"? We can readily say that it is neither an honor nor a dishonor, but merely the luck of being one of the "guys" chosen to help with certain routine work.

Undoubtedly we may be correct when we remind the student body that the reason for the failure of this organization to maintain its position of honor among student groups is the matter of election to membership. Needless to say that a living group will often place one of their more backward men within the folds of the sophomore "honorary" to give him a start and help him in future activities. Many times he fails to come through with further advancement-does not even add to the organization of which he has been made a member.

MEMBERSHIP IN AN ORGANIZATION CANNOT BE AN HONOR UNLESS OUTSTANDING MEN COMPOSE ITS ROLL.

The local group is a member of the Intercollegiate Knights, a national organization. Unless all connections are severed with this association it will be impossible to change this undesirable practice of membership. The Emerald emphatically suggests that these connections be broken-that a new organization be formed to fulfill its duties. An organization reared from the most diligent workers, a group built from the ground with a definite purpose and the appropriate portion of social activities, would truly spell honor. Why dismiss $75 each year from the student accounts to belong to a national organization when a group organized to fit the demand on the local for their pledges? As far as we campus would undoubtedly be far superior?

Each Oregon Knight will himself admit the inadequacy of the phistication is to be able to smoke last but not least, what would microphone to reveal the latest present system. Each would forward a movement to raise the status a cigarette with a certain amount they use to fill up the excess space gossip on the campus.

A dissolution of the underclass organization which existed only a few years after seasons of hard, thankless work and the adoption whoop how you look in your 8 tinct function. of a new and more suitable group is a logical culmination of the passing experimental period.

Concerning Scapulas

WHEN all the rest of the men were out of the office yesterday we pledged our secretary to secrecy and blushingly asked what a scalpula is. She didn't know

We, too, had noted that University co-eds are to be judged on the beauty of their backs and legs, to-wit: concerning flatness of scapula, curvature, overhang, condition of skin and evenness of shoulders in the backs, and straightness and no pronation in the legs. We queried that story, for somehow it seemed to place Oregon co-eds on a basis we don't like to have them on.

For instance, we wouldn't want the girl we met at Open House to break down and sob at a formal because she has just learned that her scapula doesn't come up to the University average. Nor would we want to wonder, with long skirts as they are now, whether or not our secret sorrow has pronation of the legs. We'd sooner ask about her parentage than about so personal a matter.

As for curvature, there's a lot to be said on both sides of that matter. Curves are quite pleasing this year, it seems to us. Probably the reason that the Health Week committee in charge of the judging and the incidental beauty contest include curvature is that they are using blanks printed a year or two ago. A girl who had curves then felt as ill at ease as one whose scapula isn't quite flat nowadays.

After all, it's rather doubtful if the Health Week girls are to be praised for the beauty contest. Oregon men and women are probably not as much interested in shoulders and legs as their jokes might indicate-nor is it likely that the danger of bad feeling which beauty contests usually engender will be overshadowed by the benefits of the

A more valuable health survey would include inspection of all illformed backs and legs, and would cooperate with less fortunate girls in improvement. It is unlikely that the present emphasis will do that. A scapula, by the way, our dictionary tells us, is the superior or proximal element of the shoulder-girdle of vertebrates.

IN EXTENDING an invitation to every member of the A. S. U. O. to attend the football game next Saturday at Corvallis, the Oregon State student body is welcoming its neighbors with outstretched hands. It has announced its plans to act as hosts to both Oregon State alums and students of the University.

We appreciate this, neighbors, and hope that the coming weekend may see the building up of finer and more stable relations, between the two institutions."

Chicago suburb physicians offered to officiate at births on Dollar Day for a fee of one dollar. Not to be outdone, a leading undertaker will embalm persons dying on that day for the same amount. Die now and save!

A Portland veterinary cannot have his license because he claims to do something which scientists agree is impossible. We don't know anything about the merits of the case, but history tells us that flying was once thought impossible.

Law Lockers Lock; Nozzles Knocked

WHAT is a fire nozzle good for? Of course, it comes in handy in case of fire. But then fires do not occur very frequently. Sometimes perfectly good fire - fighting equipment hangs on the wall for years without seeing service.

However, the students of the law school do things differently. They make good use of things that others pass up.

Sometimes the lockers containing the students' notebooks and texts refuse to open. And then what happens to the fire nozzles, ordinarily idle? Down they come, and by a cleverly manipulated movement the lock is opened, with no harm done to the nozzle, which is immediately returned to its proper position on the wall ready for use in case of fire.
