Heroes of Defeat

"He came through in the pinch."
Everyone on the campus and, for that matter, all over the state, knows who we are talking about, but few of the persons who have been talking about the showing made by William "Choppie" Parke in the crucial game against Oregon State Saturday know much about the man who carried the brunt of the Oregon attack.
Parke's chance came as a result of circumstances which resemble those in many of the so-called "thrilling football novels." In the short space of one week he came up from the hard-working, unsung third team to win a berth on the first team. When he received the chance that every Oregon football player longs for—to start the annual game against Oregon State—Choppie showed the stuff his stocky 150-pound frame is made of and he CAME THROUGH IN THE PINCH.
Doc Spears moved Choppie up to the first team because he still had lots of pep after tagging along on the third team all year. When it was ascertained that Captain Johnny Kitzmiller could not play, Spears started rebuilding his backfield, but even then Parke was not considered capable of holding down a first-string berth until Spears sent him into the regular lineup in one of last week's practice sessions. Choppie made the most of the chance and sports followers around the state began to inquire as to "who this fellow Parke is."
Anyone who witnessed that great game played in the mud of what was once Bell field in Corvallis Saturday will have a world of praise for the showing made by the Oregon team. Rated as the underdogs because of an injury to their leader, the Webfoots put up a fine battle against the Beavers and it was the breaks of the game that counted.
We are not thinking of an alibi—the Oregon State team was superior Saturday and the Staters were a hard-fighting, well-coached eleven, with nothing to lose and everything to gain. They made the most of their opportunities and they played their best game of the year.
Doc Spears used all of the strategy and tactics he has obtained in his long coaching career but it was Oregon State's day to win and it was a fine victory for the Orange and Black team. Oregon put up a fine game under the conditions and it was no disgrace to the Webfoots to lose to the Beavers Saturday.
Every man on the Oregon team, like Parke, was giving his best. Players like George Christensen, Austin Colbert, Jerry Lillie, and Marion Hall, who were facing the Orangemen for the last time in their college football careers, turned in fine exhibitions, but every man on the team will forget his own part in the game to praise the playing of Parke. He was fighting as hard as any Oregon player to win the game, he didn't make one mistake, he was the fire of the Oregon attack, he received a near record-breaking number of punts in one football game in the driving rain and with the ball as slippery as mud and rain can make it. He was hit hard, many times he was smothered under an avalanche of Oregon State players—but he always came up with determination on his face.
He was playing like a veteran—giving his best to Oregon in his first game and under the most nerve-racking conditions.

May Students Ask?

JUST who may criticize student activities? May the students themselves?
After the Daily Californian, student paper of the institution which so recently set a new conference record by losing to U. S. C. by 74-0 in a football game, asked twelve questions implying that its football organization might well be investigated, that question was debated up and down the Pacific coast. May students criticize student interests?
Forgetting that the easiest method of putting the Californian to shame would be to answer the questions in negation of the Californian's implications, sporting editors in sister schools and in metropolitan sheets denied the right of the paper even to ask them.
Oregon is surely more than satisfied with this year's record under its new coach, Clarence Spears, but as a school it might also be interested in the denial of its right to say anything about that record. As surely as a school has not the right to concern itself in defeats, no school has the right to concern itself in victory. Oregon, then, could no more praise its coach than California could censure hers.
Oregon, too, could no more appreciate President Hall's national position among educators without violation of these sports-editors' bounds than could the Stanford Daily ask how long it is to be without its President Wilbur without being laughed at by President Hoover.
If Coach Price and Coach Spears, President Wilbur and President Hall can stand upon their records, their only duty is to answer student questions. But Oregon need ask no questions.

Campi of the Coast

The University of Washington Daily hurls a missile at the women by quoting and upholding a remark printed in the Atlantic Monthly regarding the futurity of the fair sex in their try for a career. Believing that their aim be merely a compromise the point brought out is that from commencement on is an anticipation of the wedding day.
The Stanford rally committee has been accused of pushing a couple of students down the aisle. Well, it looks like other schools are having the same trouble in creating action and interest during football games.
At U. C. L. A. interest in one of their pet traditions is waning. No longer, says the California Daily Bruin, do students support the custom and sing heartily in classes. A sorry predicament to be sure, but might we suggest smoking in classes as a substitute?

Library Obtains Five-Volume Set

Books Tell of 'Interstate Commerce Act'

Five volumes on the "Interstate Commerce Act, Annotated," compiled by the Interstate Commerce commission under the direction of Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison, were recently received by the University library, according to Donald Erb, of the political science department.

The set is a monumental reference work containing a minute examination of the acts controlling interstate commerce in the United States. Mr. Aitchison, who holds an honorary master's degree received at the University of Oregon in 1917, and who is an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa, scholastic honor, worked on this compilation for three years. It is the most complete reference existing on the subject, and it is now catalogued in the library for use of students of economics and faculty members.

Mr. Erb has a duplicate set of these volumes in his office, sent to him at his personal request.

17TH CENTURY BOOKS DISPLAYED AT CO-OP

Robertson's "History of America" (1777), published during the Revolution, to which the author refers as the "civil war."

Besides books, Mr. McClain brought back numerous photographic reproductions of famous paintings as well as etchings and prints by Belgian, French, German, Czech, English, and Italian artists.

The Safety Valve

All communications are to be addressed to The Editor, Oregon Daily Emerald. They shall not exceed 200 words. Each letter must be signed; however, should the author desire, only initials will be published. The editor maintains the right to withhold publication should he see fit.

FLIES AND RESTAURANTS

To the Editor:
At all the restaurants about the campus and most of those down town flies crawl incessantly over the food on the table, and they must be worse in the kitchen. I fight off from one to six every time I eat. This filth is as dangerous as it is disgusting. If the managers cannot do better, they might hang swatters on nails within convenient reach of the patrons.

Two Rare Books Given to Library

Murray Warner Adds to Potter Collection

Two rare books of the 15th century have been added to the Pauline Potter collection of beautiful books. These books were given to the library as gifts by Mrs. Murray Warner, director of the Fine Arts museum.

"Popular Explanation" by M. Lunigi Lipoman, Bishop of Modena, is the title of the first book. It gives two sermons written in Latin, with the printing characteristics of the 15th century Latin type, "Credo" and "Pater Noster." This book was printed in Venice by Hieronymus Scot in 1541. It is bound in full red Morocco leather of the 18th century. The binding is decorated with the coat-of-arms of More Foscarini, a Venetian Doge who lived in the 17th century, and to whose library it formerly belonged.

The second book is the "Royal Almanach for the Year 1776," edited by Annee Bissette. This is also written in Latin and bound in red morocco with gold hand tooling. It bears the coat-of-arms of Louis XV of France.

According to the style of tooling and endpapers the binding should be attributed to one of Derone's bindings of the famous family of French 18th century binders. It has an engraved plate of M. Thierry De Villedavroy.

These books are in perfect condition due to preservation.

Linklater Finds Scotch Students Business-Minded

An education in Scotland is not what it is here, to judge by passages taken from a letter received at the business ad department from Kenneth Linklater, '31, a business ad major.

Apparently the Scotch are a thrifty bunch, despite rumors to the contrary, for he says:

"There is certainly a different attitude among the students here than at home. All business and nothing else. None of them are going to college just to be going, and they all take their work quite seriously."

On the way over he quite evidently pulled a fast one on the cook's steward and the fishes, for:

"I then had the good fortune to be in a wonderful storm on the 'Statendam' (which ranks next to the Leviathan), but it was tossed around like a cork."

Linklater, whose father is a graduate of the University of Edinburgh, is planning to return to this country next year and get his degree from the University of Oregon.

Five Co-eds Initiated by Theta Sigma Phi Sunday

Formal initiation of new members was held by Theta Sigma Phi, women's national journalism honorary, Sunday afternoon in the women's lounge of Gerlinger hall. The five girls initiated were: Lois Nelson, Henrietta Steinke, Mildred Dobbins, Lenore Ely, and Eleanor Jane Ballantyne.

A formal banquet was held at 6:30 in the Japanese room of the Osburn hotel after the initiation. Dorothy Kirk, president of the honorary, presided as toastmistress, Mrs. Eric W. Allen spoke on "The Meaning of Theta Sigma Phi After College Days," and Henrietta Steinke responded for the new initiates.

AFTER RIDING TO CORVALLIS IN A RUMBLE SEAT IN THE RAIN, SITTING IN THE RAIN DURING THE GAME, PAYING OFF OUR BETS AND THEN RIDING BACK HOME IN THE RAIN WE FELT BAD, BUT WHEN WE FOUND THAT, DUE TO AN EMBARRASSED FINANCIAL STATE, WE WERE FORCED TO WALK OUR DATE THENCE AND BACK IN THE RAIN THAT NIGHT, WE FELT DOWNRIGHT DISCOURAGED. A FEW MORE DAYS LIKE THAT AND OUR ADDRESS WILL BE "GENERAL DELIVERY, ARIZONA."

do better to postpone it until spring term.

BUT HAVE PATIENCE, BOYS, MAYBE THESE THREATENING FLOODS WILL SOLVE YOUR PROBLEM.

But while we are on the subject of weather (trite, we know, but then there's space to be filled yet) did you know that the average Oregon student can enjoy all popular sports, in season, right on his way to class? In the fall there are the aquatic sports, canoeing, swimming, etc., even a canoe fete can be possible. In the winter there is tumbling and ice skating. In the spring the varsity backfield can get their practice dodging and eluding showers (not to mention practice kicking on the weather) and when the sun shines all those indolent souls who spend the winter months at bridge in the College side can come out and gamble on the green. Who says we aren't an athletic school?

YE EPITAPH
We're frantically searching For Bulovus Bett;
He stepped in a mudhole,
We'll find him yet.

And then there's the sad case of our pal, Jehosphett. On the outskirts of Corvallis, He thought there was a fork in the road and he drove half a mile in the mill-race before he found out that he was wrong.

AND WHAT'S THIS WE HEAR ABOUT THE SIGMA CHIS HAVING A FIRE YESTERDAY MORNING? IT SEEMS THAT THE BOYS JUST CAN'T GET OVER THE HABIT THEY ACQUIRED WHEN THEY LIVED IN THE OLD HOUSE.

Fecking at the keys,
Now and then I miss,
Lord, but it's a crime
To write such verse as this.

Fecking at the keys,
Will it never end?
I have to fill this column
By half past ten.

And next the campus is breathlessly awaiting for a fire to break
