

The Emerald SCORE BOARD

By Phil Cogswell

You Have To Look Up at 'Em

A six-footer may rank fairly high as a man, but he's short as a basketball player. The teams in the northern hoop league, which have centers around 6 feet 6, namely the two Washington teams and Oregon State, are in the select class, while Oregon and Idaho, without such tall pivot men haven't been able to win a game yet.

Getting the tip off nine times out of every ten, as Gordon, of the Cougars, did here, gives a team a tremendous advantage and has a disheartening effect on the players of the other squad. They never get their hands on the ball until their opponents have taken a shot at the basket and generally not then for that giant of a center is right in front of the hoop ready to take the ball off the backboard if the shot is missed. During the second Webfoot-Cougar game, the Staters at one time scored 11 points in succession. While they were doing it, Oregon only had the ball in its possession once!

No Favorite In Race Yet

The Huskies have not lost a game yet, and hence have already been conceded the best chance to win the pennant. Washington has a good team, but it hasn't played either Washington State or Oregon State yet, so there are no grounds for the Huskies to be so highly rated. The two state college teams certainly can't be much, if any, inferior to them.

Some rather bad news was given out by Friel, the Cougar coach. He said that the Beavers had a wonderful quintet, and he was afraid they would beat his team over at Corvallis. He was right, the Orangemen won Monday night making it two Cougar scalps. The worst they could do last night was make it even for the season.

Cougars Cub

If an earthquake doesn't shake a building down on some of those W. S. C. players before next year, or something else stop them, what a team they should be! This is the way Friel thinks they will lineup. Holsten and Cross, forwards, Gordon, center, and McClarney and Wills, guards.

CORVALLIS, Jan. 20.—(Special)—Washington State college's basketball team, showing a sudden reversal of form, swamped the Beaver quintet of Oregon State, 44-30, here tonight, after the score had been tied at 18-18 at the half.

Huntley Gordon, towering sophomore center, went wild in the second half and rung up basket after basket, to take high honors with 16 points. His teammate, Claude Holsten, followed close behind with 13.

Beavers Take Lead Oregon State took a lead early in the game with Ed Lewis and Ken Fagans piling up a score of 11-1 in the first few minutes. Lewis had three fouls called on him, so "Slats" Gill, Oregon mentor, took him out and substituted Bob Drager. Drager could not get the tip-off over Gordon, as Lewis was partially able to do, and the Cougars started sinking their shots. Wills made two in short order and McClarney and Holsten also contributed before Oregon State recovered from their lapse. The score varied at 15-7, 15-9, 15-11, 15-13, 15-15, and then the Orange came through to take a lead again. W. S. C. countered almost immediately and the score stood 18-18 at half time.

O. S. C. Defense Falls Oregon State's zone defense had crumbled before the cautious sure-fire shooting and dribbling of the Cougars, and the Orange resumed their man-to-man defense in the second half with Ed Lewis in the lineup. The second half was all the Cougars' with Gordon standing under the basket to tip in

Multnomah Meet May Be Tough; Ex-Webfoots Are on Team

Jim Travis, varsity swimmer, won the 100-yard breast stroke over a fast field last Saturday night at the Multnomah club of Portland in the city swimming meet. His time was 1:18.4-5.

Oregon will meet the Multnomah club here for their first scheduled meet on January 31. The club has a very formidable team this season and numbers among its members many ex-stars of Oregon.

Johnny Anderson, tow-headed flash for Oregon last year, is now swimming for the club, as is Silberman, another ex-Oregon man.

"The Multnomah meet is not so terribly important although it will probably mean a bitterly fought contest," stated Jack Hewitt, varsity swimming coach. "Our aim is to point for the California teams. We hope to give them good battles."

Hewitt is going to take ten men with him to California. These men will be chosen for their versatility as they will also be used for water polo. Water polo practices will be held on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at 5 o'clock.

Interest has been aroused among different schools in favor of a freshman swimming conference. Plans would include the Oregon State Rooks, Eugene high school, University high school, Salem high school, the Eugene Y. M. C. A., and the Oregon frosh.

Such a conference, it is expected, would stimulate interest in development for collegiate competition. In previous years there has been little competition and little interest, which made training difficult. Northern schools suffer from lack of material and lack of places to draw from. In the South this condition is not found.

Tennis Squad Has Hopes of Good Season

Stanley Almquist to Come For Net Competition In Spring

Yearling Prospects Good; Portland Players Are On Hand

"The tennis prospects this season, especially the frosh, look bright," stated Don Guild, senior tennis manager, yesterday afternoon at McArthur court during the first turnout.

The frosh squad will be unusually strong this year. There is a large turnout of good material. Among those who will try for a berth on the first-year squad is Don Lewis of Portland. Lewis went to Canada last summer and while there won the Western Canadian junior singles championship. He also won the Washington state junior championship and was runner-up for the Northwest junior title.

Johnson Junior Champ Another man who is expected to bolster up the frosh squad is Bob Johnson. Johnson was Portland city singles champion three years ago and won the British Columbia junior singles title last summer.

Johnson and Lewis should make a very strong doubles combination as they paired together last summer in the Northwest successfully. Other frosh who are turning out are Richard Goldthwaite, Portland city singles champion; James Edmiston, No. 1 man at the Medford Tennis club; Tom Tongue, Bob DeGraff, Bob Hauge, Malcolm Krier, and Alan Carley.

Almquist Expected Back The varsity squad will be built around Stanley Almquist, letterman and nationally known player. Almquist is not in school at present but will be enrolled next term. He has held many important titles in the last three years. Last season he was runner-up for the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate title. Last summer he made a very impressive showing in the East.

Others out for the varsity are Jack Rhine, numeral man; Jim Babson, who made the frosh squad last year, and Joe Kalisky, letterman. "Practices, for some time at least, will consist of the fundamentals, such as strokes, form, and footwork," said S. Stephenson Smith, varsity tennis coach.

SPORTS SHORTS

President Jacobs, of Oglethorpe university, says: "Football is the most wonderful blessing ever to come to a college. It is the best advertisement and draws great numbers of students."

Knute Rockne says Notre Dame is going to lose at least three football games next year. He thinks too much success is sad, for "if you keep on winning all the time the alumni will not have anything to talk about."

As the umpire prepared to dust off the home plate steeplated to starting a baseball game in Los Angeles, the first batter walked out and played leap frog over his back. The player was Hap Hogan, a comedian, but the ump failed to see the joke and sent Hap back to the bench.

There are 10,000 high school football teams in the United States. Their squads would aggregate 250,000 men.

Frosh Hoopsters Face Two Games

Salem High, DeNeffe Five Will Be Opponents

With one game with Salem high at Salem definitely scheduled for Saturday night and another with DeNeffe's of Eugene tentatively arranged for Friday night, the Oregon freshman squad faces another busy week-end.

So far this season the yearlings have played three games winning two and losing one. The stiff competition found in each of the three games seems to have been just what Callison's squad needed, for their teamwork, both offensively and defensively, has improved with each contest.

The game with the DeNeffe outfit will most likely prove to be the yearlings' stiffest competition. The quintet is composed of ex-college stars, with a recent addition of three Oregon freshmen who are ineligible for competition. Henry Simons, Ike Donin, and Jack Robertson, three of Callison's most promising candidates at the start of the season, will play with the Eugene amateur outfit. Other players on Frank Reinhart's squad include Charles North, who played for Southern Oregon normal, Jim Hanley and Jim Bally, both of whom formerly played with the Webfoot squad.

Little is known of the Salem five. For the last two years they have placed high in the state hoop tournament and pre-season reports indicate they have a strong team this year.

Volleyball play showed an improvement over Monday's play with Phi Delta evening up a handball loss to S. A. M. when they took the Sammies into camp in the net game after losing the first set 4-15.

Zeta hall showed promise of a real team by their 15-10, 15-11 win over Sigma Chi while A. B. C. outpointed Chi Psi 15-10 in two sets. The only lopsided struggle was the 15-6, 15-5 lacing that Sherry Ross hall took from Smith's Independents. Kjoeness and Sprague, independent stars, rolled up most of the winning counters with accurate placement shots.

Although they lost their doubles match to A. B. C., the Sigma Nus took both singles in handball, Stott and Deuel winning from Winton and Yerkovitch. The Nimh-Rebe doubles combination from A. B. C. beat Godfrey and Cheney in a closely contested doubles scrap. A. T. O. made a clean sweep against S. P. T., Benson, Whitley, and Leedy Harper scoring victories. Phil Cogswell, Emerald sports editor, was walloped by Benson in the No. 1 singles match, 21-10, 21-10. Smith's Independents trailed in handball also when S. Schneider, Kashuba, Sprague, and A. Schneider beat Chi Psi. Only the doubles match was close, Travis

Oregon To Study Rates With O.S. C.

Colleges Will Investigate Power Rates

The University of Oregon through its economics department has been asked to combine with representatives of Oregon State college in a study of rates charged for power and electricity in Pacific coast cities. The aim is to compare the level of rates in Portland with other Pacific coast cities.

The University of Oregon has offered the services of Dr. Galvin Crumbaker of the economics department who will join the investigation with a single representative from Oregon State college faculty. Work will be done under the direction of the industries committee and the Portland Chamber of Commerce.

A.S.U.O. Members Will Be Selected

Student Representatives To Be Chosen

Names of students to represent the associated students on the student advisory committee will be submitted to the executive council for approval and selection at the executive council meeting this afternoon, according to an announcement from George Cherry, president of the A. S. U. O., last night.

The three students selected for this important post on the advisory committee must have an acute understanding of student problems, Cherry said, and show a willingness and an ability to decide the best course of action for all concerned in the many cases of students up before that committee. They must show intelligence and must have demonstrated their capability of judging a case fairly and justly on the evidence submitted.

It is possible that the three representatives will be selected from among the names submitted this afternoon, Cherry said, and can be announced tomorrow. However, he stipulated, it is more likely that no selection will be made until later.

International Relations Club To Hold First Meet

The International Relations club will hold its first meeting of the term Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the International club, Cal Bryan, president, announced yesterday. Dr. Warren D. Smith of the geology department, will lead a forum discussion on South America.

A new secretary will be elected at the meeting, Bryan said, as Tim Booth resigned his position on transferring from the University at the end of last term.
