

Low Degree Of Sanitation Defeats India

Lack of Drainage, Sewage Systems Are Blow to Hospital Work

American Doctors Not Sent By Organizations Out of Place in Country

Hospital standards in India are practically the same as in the United States, but the fact that the Indian people as a whole have so much lower standards in sanitation and living in general retards the work of the hospitals and mission stations, according to Dr. Elizabeth Grace Lewis, medical missionary, who spoke to the Westminster association and the Asklepiads at Westminster house last night.

Dr. Lewis has been stationed in India from before the World war in several hospitals and missions. She has just returned from Ambala, The Punjab, where she has worked in the interests of the Presbyterian church since 1918.

Government Has Hospitals

The speaker declared that there was no place in India for American medical practitioners unless they are sent out by some organization, because it means that they are out to make money. The government of India, she said, has both a military medical service with a station hospital in every military center and a government civil hospital in each of the important cities.

These medical agencies are rapidly being Indianized, according to Dr. Lewis. The Indians take their preliminary work in Bombay or Calcutta and then go to England for their doctor's degrees. The native practitioners do not charge fees for their services. They sell drugs, in which the Indian people have considerable faith, said Dr. Lewis.

One of the native doctors in a large city has 300 or 400 patients a day, for whom he merely fills out prescriptions as fast as he can write. Many of the native doctors train their sons by having them help in the business until they have learned enough to be "hakims."

Dr. Lewis said that plagues, especially bubonic, were quite prevalent and dangerous, and that tuberculosis was common among the women and the hospital nurses. She explained that sanitation was needed, for there is an almost complete lack of drainage and sewage systems, even the hospital in Ambala having no running water, but only water from the city well.

Bad Conditions Unseen

When asked about the conditions reported in "Mother India," Dr. Lewis stated: "The conditions which are described in the book are in the main true, but they aren't so obvious to us. When you know them, the people seem much nicer. It is quite true, however, in most respects, but it just shows one side. I have seen many of the things told of in the book, but not often."

The speaker centered her talk around a party which she pretended she was giving for a group of Indian women friends, just as it would be done in India. Seven students of the University were dressed in Indian costumes, which Dr. Lewis explained to the 40 assembled students.

W. A. A. Announces First Mass Meeting of Term

The Women's Athletic association will hold its first mass meeting of winter term at 5 this afternoon, according to an announcement by Jessie Puckett, president.

The organization, including both old and new members, will meet in room 121 of the Gerlinger building to hear committee reports and discuss initiation plans. Frances Haberlach, vice-president, will talk on the initiation which will be held sometime during next week.

'HELLO' CUSTOM HERE SAID TO BE DYING OUT

At the present time the custom is not generally observed, although one does hear an occasional "hello" from someone he knows, but rarely from a stranger—unless a politician angling for some campus popularity.

New Novels Put Into Circulation

Library Receives Works By Noted Authors

The University library has received three new books during the last week which have been catalogued and are now ready for circulation.

"College," by John Palmer Gavits, is a story of our educational system and our present day college life. Mr. Gavits says "there is something wrong with our colleges but no one can agree exactly what that something is, although most authorities will agree on the fact that there is entirely too much 'passing the buck.'" Seeking how to cure this "something," Mr. Gavits has visited many colleges and this book is the result of his expedition.

"The Eagle and the Serpent," by Martin Luis Guzman, relates a tale of a Mexican revolution. The story is written with the eagle as the symbol of democracy and the serpent representing tyranny. The author has served under several prominent Mexican generals and knows many of their systems.

"Learn or Perish," by Dorothy Canfield Fisher, is a call to educators to refresh their personalities with new intellectual and cultural activities for the sake of continuing our mental growth.

will be honored with a tea on Thursday afternoon in Alumni hall by the members of Master Dance group. Miss Marjorie Forshemer, instructor in physical education, is the sponsor of Master Dance.

Bend Students Will Have Instruction by Stillman

Bend students enrolled in the University's correspondence course in accounting will receive personal instruction when A. B. Stillman, assistant professor of business ad, goes to that city Thursday for a two-day stay, it was announced at the business ad school yesterday.

There are 16 enrolled, most of them working for University credit, and it is thought that personal instruction given once every month or six weeks by a member of the department will be of some help to the students. If the plan is successful it will be carried out regularly.

Student Violinist And Pianist Show Good Technique

Misses Wynd and Kanzler Give Joint Recital at Music School

By DAVE WILSON

Satisfactory technique and capable interpretations marked the performance of both Jane Kanzler, pianist, and Beulah Wynd, violinist, in the joint student recital which they gave last night at the music auditorium.

Miss Wynd, a sophomore student of Rex Underwood, gave herself no favors when she selected her program pieces. Her opening number, Sonata in A-major, by Handel, was an intricate and difficult composition, as were Arthur Wright's "Spanyo," Novacek's "Perpetuum mobile" and Vioux-temp's "Fantasia Appassionata." In all of these, and especially in the last, she displayed promising execution. Her double-stops were effective.

In her two contrasting numbers, an air by Mattheson and "Menuett" by Mozart her tonal qualities were pleasing and her transitions smooth.

Miss Kanzler did not attempt any of the heavily-chorded and crashing compositions which most piano recitalists include on their programs, but in her three numbers showed a pleasing naturalness and simplicity which made it a pleasure to hear her. In Mozart's Adagio in E-flat major her firm forearm action, flexible wrist movement and light touch made the slow-moving composition display all its natural charm and daintiness.

These qualities, combined with effective and discriminating use of the pedal, made Debussy's "Clair de Lune" particularly enjoyable. She concluded her part of the program by demonstrating with Schumann's "Whims" that she could do equal justice to a more eccentric and heavier-toned work.

Mary Nolan is featured today at the Rex in an intimate crook story, "Owens the Law," supported by Owen Moore and Edward Robinson.

The story revolves around a robbery of a large bank by a crafty cracksmen and the complications resulting in his refusal to make a 50-50 split with a gang leader. The action moves swiftly and builds up a highly dramatic and tense climax.

Women Debaters See India Films

Dr. Mez Follows Movies With Ghandi Lecture

Pictures of India taken during the world debate tour in 1927-28, were shown to the women's debate squad last night by W. E. Hempstead Jr., instructor in English and one of the three men to take the world debate tour. The pictures were shown in connection with Dr. John R. Mez's extension class on international trade policies of the Pacific area, which was held at 7:15 o'clock in 110 Johnson.

After the showing of the pictures, Dr. Mez lectured on India, with special reference to Ghandi. The women's debate squad is using the question this year, "Resolved, that Ghandi has been a benefit to India," and the pictures and lecture were for their benefit.

WHAT SHOW TONIGHT?

McDonald — "New Moon," with Lawrence Tibbett.
Colonial — Gloria Swanson in "What a Widow."
Rex — "Outside the Law," with Mary Nolan.
Heilig — "Personality," with Sally Starr.
State — "Lawful Larceny," and "Beyond the Rio Grande."

Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore, appearing at the McDonald in "New Moon" this week.

"New Moon" Has Opera Stars

In one of the finest pictures of the year, Lawrence Tibbett and Grace Moore, famed Metropolitan grand opera stars, are appearing at the McDonald today and for the rest of the week.

"New Moon" is an all-talking adaptation of the whirlwind stage success, made tuneful by the music of Sigmund Romberg.

The unusual inclusion of these two stellar games in the musical world in a single production assures one of the most distinctive productions of the year.

The rest of the cast includes Adolphe Menjou, Roland Young, Gus Shy, and Emily Fitzroy.

State Has Double Bill

There is no doubt but that the new policy of a double bill every Tuesday and Wednesday at the State theatre is going to prove one of the most popular features of that theatre.

Today "Lawful Larceny," with Bebe Daniels and Lowell Sherman, coupled with "Beyond the Rio Grande, with an all-star cast will be on the screen.

PROPOSAL BEFORE LAW BODY FAVORS MERGER

The director of the department, as proposed by the measure, will be appointed by the governor with an approval by two-thirds of the senate.

Representative Hector Macpherson of Linn county, prepared the initial draft of the bill, considered by the committees this week. According to Mr. Barnett, Dr. Macpherson has been a leader in the effort to introduce consolidation in Oregon government for a number of years. He is a former professor in economics at Oregon State college.

Clara Bow. She has a dash of the Bow "it" and belongs to the "modern pep and personality" school.

She appears opposite Johnny Arthur in "Personality." Supporting roles are played by Blanche Frederici and John Murray.
