Vincent Dolp, George Will, And Harry Kincaid Veterans

Northern Conference Title Tournament To Be Held Here

With the return of nice weather Oregon's varsity golf aspirants are shining up the old clubs and feeling the urge to tramp the fairways. According to Hal Fraundorf, senior golf manager, indications point to another successful season for the Webfoots on the links.

Heading the list of veterans who will be on hand is Vince Dolp, last year's Pacific Coast Intercollegiate champion. Other lettermen are: George Will, former captain, and Harrison Kincaid. Bill Palmberg probably will not be on deck.

Although Don Moe, Oregon's most famous golfer, has returned to school, chances are that he will not go out for the team this spring.

New material which will furnish keen competition for positions on the squad include Bob Near and Charles Gruenig.

This season Oregon will be host to the Northwest section of the conference in the play-offs. This involves a new plan inaugurated by the graduate managers recently. Previously one tournament, in which both northern and California schools were entered, determined the champions of the coast. This time the winner of the northern division will be host to the southern winner.

A definite schedule has not yet been drawn up, but the Webfoots will have team meets with both Oregon State and Washington. Last season the Oregon team defeated both these schools.

Popular Social Swims To Continue This Term

The Friday night social swims, which proved so popular winter term, will be continued again this term, according to an announcement made by Paul Lafferty, who, in company with Miss Edith Greene, serves as lifeguard at the swims.

All men and women are invited to attend the affairs, the first one being held tonight and every Friday night hereafter at the women's gymnasium from 7:15 to 9 o'clock. The pool can accommodate a large group of swimmers, and last term each event attracted approximately fifty people.

SPOT DOPE ON SPORT NEWS

Fall of Thorpe—

It seems incredible that the name, Jim Thorpe, which in the realm of sportdom belongs to the man known as the greatest athlete of modern times, is now to be associated with a pick and shovel laborer earning $4 a day.

Yet Thorpe, at the age of 40 or thereabouts, is digging up clods where they are excavating for a new hospital in Los Angeles, and is trying to earn enough to support two sons, aged 4 and 2. No one on the job admires his muscles, and the timekeeper knows him only as J. Thorpe.

The American schoolboy hero worshiper who has listened reverently to snatches about the marvelous feats of the famous Indian athlete will feel sad indeed to picture him now as a lowly ditch-digger.

At His Height—

Better to remember Thorpe as he was in the days of 1912 at the Olympics in Stockholm, Sweden, where Bill Hayward supervised his training.

Thorpe was then at the height of his career. Just previously he had been attending Carlisle Indian school and his exploits on the gridiron ranked him as the greatest football player before or since that time.

The Olympic pentathlon, and decathlon, consist of five and ten events respectively which put an athlete through a supreme test of versatility. There were about 150 men entered in each of them. Thorpe won both, the only man ever to do it.

Gave Up Trophies—

Bill Hayward has pictures of Thorpe being presented with the trophies by the king of Sweden for winning the decathlon and pentathlon. One of them was a silver viking ship set with gems offered by the czar of Russia which was all Jim could hold in his arms. The other was a bronze bust of the king himself.

However, Thorpe had hardly gotten back to the United States before they discovered that he had played baseball somewhere for $25 a week and they took his awards away from him. The king of Sweden offered to duplicate the trophies, but he wouldn't hear of it. All he has now are photographs of them.

An Old Story—

Hayward says Thorpe was like all Indians, he enjoyed his liquor. He would train all right for an event, but afterwards he celebrated. It was the same trouble as affects a lot of athletes who suddenly find themselves outside the stadium just hearing the echo of the cheers.

Jim sums it up himself. "Guess it's an old story. I liked to be a good fellow with the boys."

Hayward declares Thorpe couldn't keep money at all. This must be true for the last 15 years he has played both professional football and baseball, and must have made a small fortune.

Yes, best to remember Thorpe as the man who had a standing bet out that he could always make his ten yards in three downs, and never lost his bet.

Donut Day Committees Complete Appointments

The sub-committees for the Frosh commission doughnut day sale on Wednesday, April 8, have been announced by Nancy Suomela, chairman.

Delivery to the various living organizations and townspeople will be under the direction of Margaret Pollitt, assisted by Theresa Gauntlett, Helen Shingle, Dorothy Edleson, Geraldine Hickson, Mildred Carson, Ellen Endicott, Lucille Skiei, Kathleen Shepard, and Rose-lic Commons.

There will also be booths on the campus under the direction of Joyce Busenbark. Helping her will be 32 members of the Frosh commission.

Tuesday evening a group of freshman women will make an all-campus dinner drive. Those scheduled to speak at the various houses are: Louise Barclay, Dorothy Morgan, Caroline Card, Betty Davis, Alice Wedemeyer, Madeline Gilbert, Ruth Irvin, Mary Jane Mills, Eleanor Sheely, Mary Bohoskey, Eileen Hickson, Geraldine Hickson, Evelyn Kennedy, Mary Frances Lowry, Janet Cox, and Mary Helen Corbett.

The rest of Miss Suomela's staff consists of Betsy Steiwer, assistant chairman; Joan Cox, secretary; May Masterton, town soliciting; and Jean Failing, halls.

Intramural Managers Plan Spring Program

Before a rather slender group of athletic representatives yesterday, Paul R. Washke, intramural director, laid final plans for the coming intramural season. Baseball, golf, and tennis have been chosen as the spring inter-organization sports.

After a brief introductory address, Mr. Washke introduced Earl Boushey, Art Ireland, and Jack Hewitt, who will have immediate charge of the activities. These instructors cleared up any doubtful points concerning the rules and playing conditions of the sports.

A rather novel arrangement was adopted by the group concerning the baseball leagues. If there are more soft-ball leagues, the league winners of both baseball and soft-ball will be forced to play soft-ball for the championship. If there are more baseball leagues, the situation would be reversed.

Hayward Better, To Be Back Today

COACH BILL HAYWARD, who has been ill with a cold for several days, was feeling better last night and expressed the opinion that he would be back directing track activities this afternoon on Hayward field.

Hayward contracted a severe cold last week searching the countryside in the Lake Creek region for valuable camera equipment that was in his car when it was stolen. The machine was found in a ditch 10 miles from Junction City, but it was stripped. Bill, believing that some of the material might have been tossed in the brush, searched in the rain and mud for two or three days, but to no avail.

Sigma Chi Probation Ban Lifted Term Early

Ralph David, junior in journalism, was elected president of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity, yesterday at a luncheon meeting at the College Side. Other officers chosen were: Phil Cogswell, vice-president; Merlin Blais, secretary; and Victor Kaufman, treasurer. It was also voted that the president shall attend next year's Sigma Delta Chi convention to be held at the University of Minnesota.

David has been prominent in campus journalism, and at present he is an editorial writer of the Emerald. The other officers are also on the Emerald staff. Cogswell is sports editor, Blais is a reporter, and Kaufman is promotional advertising manager.

The retiring officers are: T. Neil Taylor, president; Ralph David, vice-president; Harry Van Dine, treasurer; Lester McDonald, secretary, and Robert Allen, Quill reporter.

Other business conducted at the meeting was the appointment of a committee consisting of Allen, Cogswell, and David to determine whether the local chapter shall officially attend the Portland alumni chapter at the Founders' Day banquet on April 17.

THREE SCHOOLS OPEN DRAMA TOURNAMENT

Taylor, and Marvin Shaw. It was directed by Earle Lee Gilbert.

The second play, "Somebody," directed by Richard L. Melville, was a decided contrast to the light and delightful comedy of the first. It is the horrible portrayal of the change of a man from a free and adventure-loving man to a coarse and drunken hangman. His wife's nagging desire for him to have a steady job and to "be somebody" led him to accept the position of hangman because somebody has to do it and not many have the nerve. He feels himself to be everybody because he represents the whole state and has such great power that to him can be made no appeal.

The horror rises to its final pitch when he strangles his own son and the story is immediately seized upon as a scoop for the newspaper. Roy Stout as the hangman gave perhaps the most powerful piece of acting of the evening. He was admirably supported by Shirley Stuart, the wife; Joe Mitchell, the son, and Don Bennett, the reporter.

The third play, "Jazz and Minuet," was still a different type from either of the two preceding, for it combined both the modern and the costumes of 150 years ago. This is a case where the very modern miss learns something from the experience of her great-great aunt and thus avoids a similar tragedy. It was very well done by a cast consisting of Althea Peterson, Jeanne Holden, John Milligan, Claire Bryson, Katherine Coleman, and Robert Lowery.

agriculture, forestry, mines, women's careers in the realm of foods, and teacher training in the sciences and their applications.

"6. The professional schools resting essentially upon the arts, literatures, and the social sciences should be located at Eugene or at Portland. These include architecture, music, law, medicine, public health, nursing, social service, journalism, business administration (including commerce), and teacher training in the arts, literatures and social sciences and their applications."

Goebel Will Again Be Salesman on Emerald

Dick Goebel, who worked on the Emerald last fall, has returned to the campus this term and will again be a salesman on the campus daily, it was announced by Anton Peterson, business manager. Goebel has been working with the Ray Carr advertising agency in Portland for the past three months.
