

Webfoot Golf Team In Lead By 14 Strokes

Dolp Heads List of Medal Players; Rosen, Husky, Next

Final 36-Hole Round Will Be Staged Today at Country Club

Vince Dolp and his Oregon varsity golf team earned a 14-point lead over the University of Washington golf team in the first half of the 72 hole Northwest division championship here today. Captain Vince took first place in the individual medal competition by scoring a nice 149 over the 36-hole route but is only two strokes ahead of Kermit Rosen of Washington who has a medal of 151 at the halfway point.

George Will is in third place with 152 and is not far behind the leaders. The other two members of the Oregon team are far below in individual play, Kincaid having 164 and Shafer having 167.

Huskies Close Behind

The close of the first eighteen holes found the Huskies only two points behind the Webfoots but the gap was widened considerably during the afternoon, thanks to a pair of 85's and an 84 by three of the Huskies.

Montana and Oregon State each sent only two representatives to the meet so are not competing for the team championship. The men are theoretically in the race for the individual championship but practically speaking have eliminated themselves by their high scores, the best of the quartet being a 165 by Bob Finch from Corvallis.

Dolp Better

A bright spot in the day's competition was Vince Dolp's showing. Dolp had not been playing as well as he might lately and fears were felt for his chances in the present important tournament. Evidently he has returned to his usual steady form and bids fair to again win the Pacific Coast conference championship.

Kermit Rosen, Washington's big number one man, played a good round yesterday afternoon in cutting down Dolp's 18-hole lead of four strokes. Rosen is a powerful hitter and if he should have a lucky day today, might provide some unlooked-for competition for the Oregon aces, Dolp and Will.

In general, the golf was not up to the usual standards of intercollegiate competition. Of 24 18-hole rounds, only seven were in the 70's with the majority hovering around the 80-mark. A summary follows:

Oregon (632):
Vincent Dolp	73	76	149
George Will	75	77	152
Harrison Kincaid	82	82	164
Frank Shafer	86	81	167

3 Oregon Netmen Remain in Play at Seattle Play-Offs

Webfoot Tennis Men Lose All Varsity Matches With Huskies

Three Oregon tennis players, Jack Rhine, Joe Kalisky, and Tom Mountain, survived the first day's play in the Northwest playoffs, which began yesterday in Seattle. The northern sectional championship of the Pacific coast conference is at stake with six entrants in competition—Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Oregon State, and Washington State.

In the dual meet between the Webfoot and Husky tennis squads played Thursday in Seattle, the Oregon varsity net men lost every match to the Washington varsity players. The Oregon freshman racketeers nearly reversed this count by winning five of their six matches from the Husky yearlings.

Results of the varsity singles matches in the dual meet:

Nordstrom, Washington, defeated Rhine, 6-0, 6-3; Holt, "Washington," defeated Kalisky, 6-0, 6-0; Rostgaard, Washington, defeated Mountain, 6-0, 6-0; Rieke, Washington, defeated Adams, 6-4, 6-4.

In the doubles contests, Nordstrom and Hoyt defeated Rhine and Kalisky, 11-9, 6-1; Rostgaard and Rieke defeated Mountain and Adams, 6-1, 6-1.

The Oregon yearling squad, which swamped the Washington freshmen, was composed of Don Lewis, Bob Johnson, Dick Goldthwaite, and Jim Edmiston.

State-Supported School Standards Seen Lower

May 8.—(Special)—Oregon state institutions of higher learning, scored by the federal education survey commission for their low scholastic standards, fall in line with other tax-supported schools, a report of entrance examinations for 137 schools reveals. Psychology ratings were used to discover that private schools are in general much higher than are public schools.

Median score for tax-supported schools runs from 63 for the lowest, to 175.95. The lowest score for private institutions was 85, and the highest was 235.

Sports Fill Day

With the golf meet, auto races, diving in the campus fountain, and the climax of three hours of thrilling baseball, the day on the campus yesterday was well filled with sporting activities. Unfortunately, the golf tournament, being the only serious affair, was held just out of town. This prevented all but a few from seeing it. The other frivolous events went over in good style, except for the ball game which seemed to have more of an air of the tragic than the humorous about it. This observation is, of course, from the Webfoot viewpoint. No doubt the victorious Huskies enjoyed themselves.

Hardly Possible

You'd hardly think it possible that with gathering 17 hits, the Webfoot ball team would be able to keep from making more than six runs yesterday, but those are the statistics. They have an expression on the diamond of "ducks on the pond," meaning men on the bases. Ten Oregon ducks got left on the ponds, and a few more were put out swimming from one pond to another. This doesn't speak very well of the Oregon base running performance.

Nelson Stars

There's not much use in analyzing the ball game. There will be another one today, and let's hope a better one. The Huskies didn't look so hot, but when any pitching crew allows 17 safe blows and gets away with it, you have to give credit. Nelson, second base, is Washington's fielding star. This fellow ate up many difficult chances with remarkable ease. The game today is the next to the last one on the local field. The Beavers will be here later for the final contest.

A Professorial Coach

Our attention is called by Sam Wilderman to the fact that Coach Stephenson Smith, of the Webfoot tennis team, is one of the few professorial coaches in existence. Coach Smith directs the destinies of the racketeers without any salary bonus. By the way, the tennis team ran into a setback at Seattle, but not due to any fault of Mr. Smith's. Oregon hasn't especially
