

In the PRESS BOX with Walt Baker

As we look over the potential strength in the various departments of the game in Seattle next Saturday and compare the Huskies and the Webfeet on the same basis, it comes right down to the fact that Oregon's greatest weakness is the total lack of a consistent and effective kicker. Washington has Bill Marsh, the halfback that has been getting off some of the most dependable kicks so far this season. It will be remembered that this same Marsh did the booting for Huskies last year in Portland and gave Johnny Kitzmiller some mighty fine competition. At any rate, Oregon is on the short end of the deal in this department this year—Lillard is erratic and Schulz, before the start of this season, hasn't been on that end of things since he played in high school. At that Captain Schulz is slated to do all the kicking for the Webfeet up in Seattle. So far this season he hasn't had to get any great distance in his punts, for in the Idaho game most of the kicks were called for out of bounds in Idaho scoring territory.

SCHULZ DOING KICKING
But it will be different in Seattle. With such undoubted strength in this department, Washington will be able to use this threat to good advantage, as Oregon's power here is as yet untested. Schulz may make good here. If he plays this department of the game, inexperience notwithstanding, like he has been showing up in the line so far, things will look brighter. But it's still a long chance for Oregon, which is better than none at all at that.

PHELAN WARNS TEAM
Earlier in the week Jimmy Phelan in a pep talk to the Washingtonians told them that "Your season revolves around the Oregon game Saturday. Beat that bunch and you needn't be afraid of anybody." And we are inclined to agree with him. Although some risky gamblers in Seattle are offering as high as 21 points on Oregon, it looks to me like they are sort of biting off more than they can chew when it comes right down to facts. However that may be, there are plenty of more level-headed backers of the Oregon team that might like to get in on some of those bets.

DOC SPEARS ON EDGE
And on his part, Doc Spears is hardly laboring under the illusion that the Washington outfit is a set-up. Tonight's practice winds up the preparation for the game as the team leaves on the 6:45 train for Seattle. In all probability, the boys will be on the field until the last minute, having only enough time to change clothes and rustle for the train. This is the way the good doctor is pointing his boys in reply to Phelan's challenge. Of course there will be a light workout in Seattle Friday afternoon, but it will be in the nature of a warming up rather than an intensive practice on offensive or defensive.

Faville, Walstrom Fill Co-op Board Vacancies
Wedemeyer and Dean Bovard to Leave Positions

Two new members now serve on the board of directors of the University Co-op store, recent vacancies having been filled at a luncheon meeting of the officers today.

David Faville, dean of the school of business administration, was elected to take the place of Dean John F. Bovard, recently resigned, due to absence from the campus for several months because of poor health.

Ralph Walstrom was chosen to fill the vacancy left by Adele Wedemeyer, who did not return to the University this fall, having registered at an eastern school.

According to Wallace Baker, president of the board, today's appointments again give the Co-op a full list of officers.

Dorothy Illidge, he explained, was elected last year to serve the unexpired term of Dorothy Jean Murphy. Miss Murphy had been elected for two years, but did not return to school after the fall term. She was to serve until next spring.

Ethan Newman, George Turner, and Dean James H. Gilbert are the other officers of the board.

would affect the religion and do away with many of the harmful taboos, and aid in relieving the poverty of the lower classes, which is caused largely by illiteracy and ignorance.

"England has just about made up her mind to give India dominion status," said Mr. Mondol. "If she does we will have to compete with the capital of other countries, but it will be clean, straightforward competition, instead of the underhanded, unfair method which now exists to insure the monopoly of English capital."

Mr. Mondol has been in this country two years, studying at Northwestern university. He will return east after his present tour to complete requirements for a master of arts degree. He will then return to Calcutta, India, where he is headmaster of the Collin's Boy's school, which is a university preparatory school.

Oregon Eleven Heads North Today; Week's Drill Smooths Rough Spots in Defense

Ducks Will Be at Full Strength for Game With Powerful Huskies, Saturday

BOUND for the big game of the year, Doc Spears and 35 Webfoot gridders will leave Eugene tonight for Seattle, ready to battle the University of Washington next Saturday. The squad will arrive in the northern city Friday morning and will work out on the turf field at the Husky stadium that afternoon.

A stiff practice session yesterday that lasted until after dark ended a strenuous week of drill for the Ducks. Some of the rough spots that were plainly shown in defensive work in last week's game with Idaho appear to have vanished as the first and second string elevens went through a light scrimmage with the frosh. A smoothness that was lacking in Portland has taken place of the indecision and poor team play shown in offensive play.

The Webfeet will be at full strength for the Husky tilt, according to Trainer Bill Hayward. Bill Morgan, regular tackle, who has been out of scrimmage this week, is in good shape and will be able to start. Outside of a few minor bruises, the Ducks suffered no ill effects from the Vandal game.

Reports from Seattle have it that Coach Jimmy Phelan is somewhat worried about Joe Lillard and the rest of Oregon's young backfield stars. The Washington scouts came back from the Idaho game, Seattle dispatches say, with

S. A. E. Stage Spectacular Grid Struggle With Preppers

By RANTLAND GRICE
SPECIAL DISPATCH DIRECT FROM UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL FIELD, Oct. 7.—Doc Spears would have felt a heap more confident about the outcome of the Oregon-Washington game if he had been around here today and had seen some of the S. A. E. "has-beens" and "might-of-beens" in their titanic and colossal super-deluxe gridiron struggle against Choppie King and Jean Eberhart's University high eleven.

Unfortunately, the game was not widely advertised and only a few thousand spectators were on hand as the two teams battled furiously in a veritable sea of sawdust. As far as the final score went the game ended in a tie, as both teams claimed victory on technicalities. The preppers cried loud and long when the collegians hooked the best headgear and the S. A. E. hopefuls claimed that Dave Gilman, the head-linesman, was under the pay of King and Eberhart.

"Silver-top" Sievers, the trumpet-playing idol of thousands of gridiron followers, led the Alder streeters. Earle Cranston and a specially appointed board of strategy coached the collich boys and the team used all of three different plays.

Seriously, the game was arranged as a practice scrimmage for the University high outfit, and outside of the fact that the S. A. E.'s cheated by smoking during time-outs, a real rough and tumble game was produced.

glowing accounts of the prowess of the seven or eight backs used against the Vandals.

All this is undoubtedly true, but the main problem in Oregon's offense and defense will be the line. So far this season the forward wall has not shown up in A-1 fashion. But, as said before, this week's practice seems to have ironed out many of the rough spots.

Despite reports from the north that Merle Hufford, Husky backfield ace, will not be able to perform next Saturday due to injuries suffered in the Montana-Washington game, the Oregon group are not planning on counting him out of the picture. Bear stories of this type are too frequent this time of the year.

At least a thousand Oregon rooters are expected to be present Saturday at the Husky stadium. Washington officials are planning on a crowd of around 40,000, for it is a well-known fact that Phelan and his men are determined to end Oregon's three-year string of victories.

Process Is Accepted and Published in Treatise On Chemistry

The millions of people who daily eat with relish various forms of gelatin prepared as a flavored dessert, as salad or even as cold confection may not realize that this delicacy is composed of a substance called "gels" and that these gels are made up of a porous framework, the pores of which are filled with water. And they may not realize that these pores are so tiny that until a short time ago they had never been measured, being so small that they defied even a microscope.

Friedman Measures Gelatin Pores After Six Years' Effort

It remained for a University of Oregon chemistry professor, Dr. Leo Friedman, after six years of painstaking research, to discover a method and actually measure these minute openings or pores, and his work has now been accepted as authoritative and published as a new part in the latest edition of "Treatise on Physical Chemistry," by Taylor.

Comprehension of the size of these pores is an overwhelming task, for they measure from .00000008 to .00000048 of an inch. To pronounce this say "eight his appearance. His 22 years of service in India for his home church in Luxemburg had given him an insight into the question of Indian independence.

Mr. Iyer says that Katherine Mayo received every possible assistance and encouragement from the British government when she wrote her sensational book, "Mother India."

When asked if he would talk about his book, how it came to be written and where he secured his information of the "degeneracy" of western civilization, the little man settled back in his seat, took a proffered cigarette, and proceeded to unfold the strange story of "Father India."

"I was in London shortly after 'Mother India' was published," he said slowly. "Everyone was talking about it. At that time I had no idea of writing any kind of a book, but a member of the Indian council, Sir Mohamed Rafique, suggested that I answer Miss Mayo's portrayal of India. His suggestion appealed to me and I started to work at once to write a book about the West similar to 'Mother India.'"

"Where did I get my material? That was easy. Someone told me that 'The Revolt of Modern Youth,' by Judge Ben Lindsey, would supply me with all the necessary information about American life.

"I bought a copy in London, took the next boat for France, and in three weeks the book was completed. I was at a loss for a title until Sir Charu Ghosh, his majesty's judge in the Calcutta high court, proposed that I call it 'Father India,' as it was a reply to 'Mother India.' They are now printing the fourteenth edition."

hundred-millionths to 48 hundred-millionths of an inch," or in other words, one hundred million (100,000,000) of the pores side by side would measure just eight inches to 48 inches in width.

Dr. Friedman, now recognized as one of the leading young scientists of America and already known abroad for his work, is engaged on the general research problem of seeking knowledge on life tissues. He is attacking the problem through the study of gelatin or "gels," since all living plant and animal systems are made up of gelatin-like substances. His papers on properties of gelatin systems have just been published in the Journal of the American Chemistry Society, a publication which prints only the work of scientific authorities and which is regarded as the highest authority in this field.

Dr. Friedman's remarkable discovery of the size of the pores in the gelatin was made possible by the process of diffusion or by measuring how fast liquid would go through the openings, since there is no instrument made that would actually be small enough to span such a tiny space. The actual measurement hitherto has defied scientists, but Dr. Friedman's system has now been proven accurate and accepted by the Treatise as correct.

The research being carried on by Dr. Friedman, while not intended primarily as a commercial venture, may result in discoveries that will make possible new edible preparations, it is stated. He has now reached the point where he is studying emulsifying or "sticking together" properties of gelatin and may find new ways of binding substances such as oils and water together, resulting in food combinations not now in use.

Dr. Friedman came to the University from the University of Wisconsin in 1928, where he had just received his doctor's degree. He is also highly regarded as an instructor, as well as research expert.

Huskies Working Hard for Tilt With Oregon Saturday

Hufford on Injured List; Webfeet Regarded as Dangerous Team

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 7.—(Special).—Washington is regarding the approaching game with the University of Oregon as the "important" tilt to win. "Irish Jimmy" Phelan has never yet been able to win from any team coached by Dr. Clarence Spears and he looks on the game this year as the one in which to stage an "about face."

Overtime practice sessions which have lasted far into the murky darkness until it becomes too dark to see the "spook" ball have been the order of the day in the Husky camp. The frosh have been thoroughly schooled in Spears' style of play and the varsity has been putting on considerable polish while these scrimmages have been under way.

Teams' Styles Known
Phelan and his staff of assistants maintain that they have been in contact with the genial doctor's tactics long enough to know how to combat it successfully. This line of reasoning is not all one-sided, however, for Spears has a record on file in his mind that just about contains all there is to know about stopping the Notre Dame attack which Phelan sponsors.

No new injuries have made their appearance so far this week, but Merle Hufford, the ace of the Husky backfield and contender for All-American honors, has done nothing more than walk around a bit trying to loosen up his "charley horse." Johnny Cherbörg is also bothered by the same ailment and is under a rest cure.

At this date it looks as though young Paul Marlowe may be the starting fullback. His defensive work has won the eye of Phelan and this alone may give him the place August Buse has held. Buse has everything on offense that might be asked for, but his defensive game has been his weak point.

Oregon Taken Seriously
A slant at the seriousness with which Oregon is being regarded is best shown by Cliff Harrison in his column in the Seattle Star. Harrison says: "Not wishing to be tiresome, but still insistent on driving home to our readers a truth that seems to be escaping them—look out for Oregon."

"This same Spears we've mentioned before comes here Saturday with a team of big, fast, hard-hitting Oregonians.

"Our scouts say he's been holding back, has plenty ready to spring on the Huskies.

"When someone talks about giving this and that many points with Washington a favorite, they're just plain 'nuts'.

"This is going to be the ball game of the day so far as the Pacific coast is concerned, and don't forget it."
