Merle Hufford Certain To Be In Starting Lineup

Frosh Race by ONS Reserves At 45-0 Pace

Whole Yearling Squad Gets Into Action

Strong Combination Seen In Backfield Working Under Callison

Flashing a scoring spree in the second quarter, Prink Callison's freshman football outfit walked off Hayward field yesterday with a 45-to-0 decision over the Oregon normal reserves. It was the first appearance of the season for the yearlings.

After a slow first period, the frosh found their stride for a while and ripped through the Normal defense for four touchdowns and were deep in the Monmouth men's territory on the way to another when the gun sounded. The half ended with the Oregon yearlings in the lead by a 32-to-0 count.

With the beginning of the third canto Callison began running in his substitutes and before the quarter was over most of his charges had seen some action. The flash that the frosh had shown in the previous quarter faded and they barely held their own with the Normal eleven without even coming close to scoring.

Late in the game most of the starting string was returned to the game by Callison, but except for a few times, it didn't display a great deal of sparkle. Two scores resulted from beautifully executed passes from Clarkson's effective left hand to "Butch" Morse. These tallies and Bevan's conversion boosted the total to 45 points for the game.

For their first game the yearlings showed up as having great potential power, and many of the men should prove to be a big help to Doc Spears next season. Precision was sadly lacking for the most part and only occasionally did the outfit function as a polished unit. When this did happen, however, the frosh displayed a powerful combination. If they come through with the expected improvement which Callison's tutelage should provide, this year's crew should attract plenty of attention before the short season ends.

Statistics Show Many Campus Religious Ties

Presbyterians Rank Highest by Margin of 485

Church preference statistics compiled from fall term registration material and released recently by R. B. Porter, executive secretary of the Y. M. C. A., show a total of 24 denominations represented by students in the University.

In number of preferences the Presbyterians lead with 485. Next on the list are the Methodists with 335, the Episcopal church with 262, and the Christian church with 195. The Roman Catholic, Christian Science, and Congregational denominations are next, according to the record.

Thirteen of the 24 churches are represented by less than ten students each.

Only 34 students registering ignored the cards and failed to sign their names. No preference was shown by 337 men and 110 women, and a total of 23 designated their choice as "Protestant."

Webfoot-Husky Football Game Will Go on Air

The Oregon-Washington grid-iron classic will be broadcast this afternoon beginning at 2 o'clock over stations KGW, Portland; KOMO, Seattle; and KORE, Eugene.

The regular Emerald-of-the-Air scheduled for 4:15 will not be broadcast, and the campus radio feature will not be resumed until Monday. Wally Telford and Kenny Lord, the Harmony Twins, will not appear until Tuesday afternoon, when they will present a program of popular songs.

Wandering Trio Writes Home From India

Letter to Emerald Reveals Successes of Pacific Basin Team

By DAVID WILSON

LUCKNOW, INDIA, Sept. 10.—(Special to the Oregon Daily Emerald from its self-appointed trio of foreign correspondents).—Having decided that it would be cheaper to travel around the Pacific for seven months than to stay at home and pay University of Oregon registration fees this fall, the "Three Must-Get-Theres" (not "Theirs," children) of the Pacific basin debate team find themselves exactly halfway around the world from Eugene this September day.

What thoughts are allowed to us by the muggy heat of the Indian monsoon season are turning backwards toward Freshman Week and the opening of the football season at the University, which must somehow manage to struggle along without our help for the next three months.

Mid-winter in July We are writing this report more or less in the dark, for we haven't heard a word about the big educational squabble on the Oregon front since we left at the first of June, and for all we know the University of Oregon is now but another "tradition," with ivied halls as empty as the ruins we saw at Delhi a couple of days ago. And even the esteemed Emerald may be nothing but a journalistic memory of brighter days.

We arrived in New Zealand, the first arena of our international debating endeavors, about the first of July, and found collegiate life in mid-winter swing, whirling about the central interest of the rugby-football season. The rigours of the snowy weather which we encountered at Dunedin on July 4 were very nearly enhanced by a compulsory ducking which we received from our student hosts at Otago university, in charming commemoration of the day "on which we so graciously granted you your freedom."

Team Wins 12 Out of 16

We divided a total of seven weeks between New Zealand and Australia, holding 16 debates in 8 different cities. Modesty almost forbids us to say that of this number we won 12, but foreign correspondents must tell the truth, no matter how much it hurts. The uniformly hospitable and genuinely friendly spirit with which we were received in these first two countries of call was heartening, and gave us ample reason to overlook the fact that scarcely anyone knew where the state of Oregon was located, and that those who did considered its position much inferior to that of California. Chamber of Commerce, where are you?

The American college student is a romantic and fearsome figure in the minds of New Zealand and Australian students whose judgments are formed from the "collegiate" motion pictures. They

Editing Class to Choose Own Speakers This Year

Speakers appearing before Dean Allen's editing class this year will be chosen by the journalism seniors, who will invite prominent people to lecture to them.

Dr. A. R. Moore, professor of the biology department, was the first speaker, who gave a resume talk on Italy. Dr. Moore has just returned from an extensive two-year research trip in Italy.

The disposition of Russia was interestingly portrayed by Dr. John H. Mueller, associate professor in sociology, who spent the summer months observing conditions in this country which has a new type of government.

Arrangements are being made to get Oregon's newest exchange student, Miss Nella Roster, from the University of Florence in Italy.

Bankers, social workers, and business men will also be on the schedule of speakers for coming lecturers.

Fraternity Votes Against Continuing Open House

A fraternity vote in the recent Open House discussion was overlooked in yesterday's Emerald, but it will have no bearing on the decision reached in favor of holding Open House on October 17.

Alpha Upsilon goes on record as being decidedly against the proposition, which increases the number of fraternities voting in the negative to three, as compared to one sorority.

Correspondence School Enrolls 114 Students

The report of the correspondence school for September reveals that 114 students, of whom 40 were men and 70 were women, were enrolled for the 137 courses. Seventy-one new students registered for the first time.

The total number of hours enrolled was 455 1/2. This is the equivalent of 30 full time students on the campus.

To Match Wits Today

It is likely August Buse will open at fullback, though the consensus of opinion around Seattle is that Paul Marlowe, the defensive flash, who has been coming up rapidly, will undoubtedly see action and even may start in place of Buse.

Bill Marsh, 190-pound, left-handed passer, with two seasons' service, will probably be Phelan's choice for quarter. Bill Walcott, also a letterman, is slated to be Hufford's mate at the other half.

Other backs who are making their services popular are Johnny Cherberg, Elmer Martin, Jack Patrick, and Clarence Bledsoe. They

BULLETIN

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON, Seattle, Oct. 10.—(Special to the Emerald).—With ideal weather predicted, the University of Washington and the University of Oregon will meet here in their annual grid classic.

Last-minute word has it that Merle Hufford, Husky backfield star, will start in today's game, although he has not as yet fully recovered from injuries received in the Montana game.

Betting odds here favor Washington, 10-7, but a close game is predicted by all. The teams are considered on a par offensively, but Washington, because of its heavier line, is given the edge on defense.

The city of Seattle is on edge in anticipation of today's contest. A large pep rally was staged down town last night by the Washington rooters to stir up enthusiasm, and a near sell-out is predicted.

The Oregon squad took a light workout yesterday in secret, in the Husky stadium, and are said to be all set to go when the whistle blows at 2 o'clock today.

Lillard and Hufford seem to be the center of controversy, and the fans are looking forward to some good excitement when they oppose each other today.

On the eve of the big game, Coach Jimmy Phelan of Washington is worried by the morale of his proteges. He has made statements to the effect that they are ready for most anything except a tough battle such as the tilt with the Oregonians will be.

Except for a very few men, Phelan declares that his team is not in the right mental condition. "Irish Jimmy" regards this game as the crucial point in the destinies of the Husky combination this year and will strive with all his assembled power to pull a win over the Webfoot eleven which defeated him last year at Portland.

While the Washington starting lineup has not been made public, it is certain at this time that Merle Hufford will start at his old half-back job. Hufford has acquired the name "Hula-Hips" on the northern campus and rightly so, for he is one of the most deceptive runners in this conference.

Much of the drive depends upon Hufford, and as he goes, so goes the whole Phelan tribe. Hufford is a triple-threatener and he is expected to make his final year at the Husky school a banner one. He seems one of the logical contenders for all-American honors this year if he is up to form. He was named on one authority's selection in this capacity his sophomore year.

It is likely August Buse will open at fullback, though the consensus of opinion around Seattle is that Paul Marlowe, the defensive flash, who has been coming up rapidly, will undoubtedly see action and even may start in place of Buse.

Bill Marsh, 190-pound, left-handed passer, with two seasons' service, will probably be Phelan's choice for quarter. Bill Walcott, also a letterman, is slated to be Hufford's mate at the other half.
