

In the PRESS BOX with Walt Baker

About 8 o'clock last night the report came over the Associated Press wire that the faculty representatives had had the first session of their hurry-up meeting in Portland. The results, as we were able to interpret them, were exceedingly vague and looked like everyone was treading on eggshells and trying to cover it up by slapping each other on the back and saying that everything was going to come out all right.

The report read to the effect that at the first preliminary meeting Prof. W. B. Owens, of Stanford, the president of the league, handed in his resignation and that the men present unanimously voted not to accept it. Somewhat on the order of the British parliament when the premier gets in hot water and wants to know whether his cohorts are still for him. Also at this meeting the representatives unanimously voted to express their complete confidence of Oregon's sincerity in their rejection of Conference Czar Butler's proposal of last week. Then they adjourned to meet again at a formal dinner later in the evening to get down to the facts of the matter, and, at the present writing, this is the extent of the progress.

A TENSE SITUATION

The farther this thing goes along the more it seems that each school represented is being extremely cautious about opening up any fireworks on the supposed ineligibility of Joe Lillard, who is, of course, a test case in the whole question of the eligibility of semi-pro baseball players.

The action of Owens of Stanford may be interpreted in two different ways. Either he has something very drastic up his sleeve, such as conclusive evidence barring the validity of the "gentlemen's agreement," and wants to know that his position at the present time is the same as it has been in the past; or he merely wanted to know how his action in calling this special meeting has been met by the Pacific Coast conference schools. And as for the last part of the meeting—voting Oregon a vote of confidence—it seems to be merely a gesture meaning "We're sorry, Oregon, please don't kick back and bar our football players."

FORSTA OR MORGAN CAPTAIN
Schulz' injury sustained in the Washington game, and the one that may keep him out of the game Saturday with U. S. C., will leave the Webfest without a captain. In this event, according to Doc Spears, who gave out the information before he left, either Eric Forsta, center, or Bill Morgan, guard, will act in that capacity. Forsta is a two-year letterman, playing his last year for the Lemon and Yellow, and holds down a regular center berth for Oregon. Bill Morgan played last year for the first time and has been in both games so far this season most of the time, although he is handicapped with a sore shoulder that may keep him also out of the game with the Trojans.

Debate Tryout Date Set At Meeting of Managers

The University forensic managers, Neil Sheeley, president, Rola Reedy, manager of men's debate, and Bernice Conoly, manager of women's debate, met last night with John L. Casteel to discuss oratory activities for the year. Tryouts for the varsity and freshman teams were set tentatively for the week-end of November 19. Women interested in debate will sign up in the speech department as no tryouts will be held for them.

The questions to be debated this year are yet undecided but will be announced next week. In the scheduling it is planned not to have more than five or six debates of the same question on the campus during the year.

Trojans Set To Stop Flight Of Ducks Toward Possible Coast Conference Crown

Thundering Herd Will Use New Formations in Los Angeles Game Saturday

By MAX PLAKE, Southern California Trojan.
UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, Los Angeles, Oct. 15.—(Special)—Although duck season does not open in the Southland till the middle of next month, Head Man Jones will attempt to end the non-stop flight of the Oregon flock to the Pacific Coast conference championship here Saturday afternoon with the latest model of his Trojan automatic.

Primed with the new tandem shift plus a new defensive formation plus several new plays, Head Man's new shotgun is set for its long range test. The Ducks, who are led by that foxy old mallard, Doc Spears, have successfully sailed through the camps of four would-be Duck hunters, but hardly a feather was touched. On the other hand, the Cardinal and Gold eleven fell short of their first target, and therefore are entering the fracas Saturday as the underdogs.

Baker Out of Game
Johnny Baker, regular running guard and firing pin of the Thundering Herd's interference, will not start against the invading Webfest as had been expected by the grid enthusiasts of the South, but may see some action before the final gun of the fracas. Baker has been out of Southern California's line-up since the Gael tragedy with an injured leg. In Baker's guard berth will be seen Rosy Rosenberg, who has done such good pinch-hitting in the last two battles.

Although it is certain that Ernie Smith, right tackle, will be on the field when the whistle sounds, it is just as certain that Bob Erskine, the sophomore shock troop for Ernie's position, will keep the left side of the Oregon line busy preventing him from being the fifth man in the Ducks' backfield.

Musick on Sidelines
During the recent scrimmage this week held on the Cardinal and Gold practice field, Bovard field, Coach Jones has been using Dick Barber, I. C. 4-A broad-jumping champ, at full inasmuch as Jim Musick, regular fullback, has been on the sidelines with an injured foot. Although Barber lacks the experience of Homer Griffith, second string fullback, it is possible that Barber will get the call over Griffith. Barber has the leg power of two ordinary horses and can get more speed up in 12 feet than any of the other backs can in that many yards.

Because of his rapid improvement on offense during the past week, Gordon Clark will replace Tom Mallory at left half. Clark is a pass-grabbing fool and an excellent defensive man and, with his improvement on offense, he should turn in a good game tomorrow.

P. I. P. A. Meeting Date Undecided; Hall Will Preside

William Randolph Hearst Receives Invitation To Conference

Contrary to previous announcement actual dates of the Pacific Intercollegiate Press association conference to be held on the University of Oregon campus this year have not been definitely decided, it developed yesterday when Vinton H. Hall, president of the press group and last year's editor of the Emerald, was interviewed.

"The first announcement sent out called the meeting for November 15, 16, and 17," said Hall. "Subsequent to this the dates were set for November 12, 13, and 14, which would also be homecoming weekend. Many of the members have stated that either of the times are agreeable, but as the two Washington members cannot attend on the latter date, I am conferring with every delegate to determine which dates will prove more satisfactory to a majority."

A telegraphic invitation to attend the session was sent to William Randolph Hearst, world-famous newspaper magnate, yesterday, Hall reported.

"Last year he was scheduled to appear at the Los Angeles convention of the P. I. P. A.," continued Hall in commenting on the telegram, "but as he was unable to attend, he signified his attention of appearing at another meeting in the near future, so we are hoping he will find it possible to come this year."

Larry Jackson, business manager of the Emerald, will be vice-president of the gathering this year, taking the place of Tony Peterson. The constitution of the P. I. P. A. stipulates that "in case one of these officers leaves his university, his successor as editor or manager shall succeed him in office."

In addition to the customary two representatives from each of the 12 newspapers which make up the press association, Joe Osherenko, manager of publications at U. C. L. A., will be in attendance. King Wilkin, executive secretary of the group, will not be able to attend the convocation on account of an extended illness.

Hall has announced the committee chairmen in charge of the affair as follows: Larry Jackson, program; Barney Miller, entertainment; Bob Allen, speakers; Phil Cogswell, housing; and Willis Dunaway, regular business.

HANGS OUT SHINGLE
Ralph C. Hoerber, head of the speech department and debate coach here last year, has opened a general law office in Portland, located in room 725 Yeon building. Formal announcement of his venture was received here yesterday by University friends.

Sunday Morning Jaunt Scheduled by W. A. A.

The second W. A. A. hike has been scheduled for this Sunday morning at 8:30, according to an announcement made by Alice Madson, student manager of hiking.

The hikers will leave from Geringer hall and will travel out the Lorane highway, returning in time for dinner and late church services. All girls interested in hiking and in earning W. A. A. activity points may meet with the group and attend the hike.

Newest Dance To Make Appearance Open House Night

"May I have this dance?" says he. And he puts his arm around your waist, murmurs "I didn't get your name," then snuggles his cheek down against your hair.

But it is nothing to be alarmed about and nothing to slap his face for. They call it the Collegiate Swing—we suspect that a lot of fellows will be practicing it tonight.

The announcement of this new dance, opportunely made the day before open house, says that dame fashion will sanction the cheek to hair and cheek to cheek mode. The leading is done with the head and right shoulder. If he is taller, he puts his chin against his partner's hair. If they are near the same height, he leads cheek to cheek.

Of course the announcement of this new dance hit suggested that the steps were intricate, that the movements should be executed smoothly, but since it is too much to expect that anyone should master intricate steps and smooth execution overnight, we only mention the easily mastered technique in order that there will be no misunderstanding when he attempts to show the "best looking girl on the campus" just how it is being done this season.

Party at Peters Lodge Planned by Philomelete

An overnight party at Peters lodge is being planned for tonight by the Woman in Her Sphere group of Philomelete. Lucile Terrill, secretary of the group, is making arrangements.

Fifteen members are expected to be at the lodge. Each is to bring her own cup, silverware, and blankets, Miss Terrill announced. A marshmallow roast is to be the diversion of the evening, and the girls are to arise early enough to cook breakfast and be in Eugene in time for eight o'clocks.

Cocoanut Grove Site for Junior-Senior Dance

Several Campus Bands Are Under Consideration To Play

Cocoanut Grove will be the scene of the first annual Junior-Senior dance to be held Saturday night, October 31, it was announced last night by Ferd Fletcher and Gordon Day, general chairmen.

With several campus bands under consideration to play for the dance, the best music available will be procured, according to Sally Addleman and Marjorie Swafford. Programs have been chosen, and all committee chairmen are busy working up preliminary plans for the dance. Further appointments on the dance staff will be announced Tuesday.
