We like to see the old school spirit coming back to Oregon. We like to know that the student body is behind the team, football or otherwise, win, lose, or draw, and the example of this coming up after last Saturday's walloping at the hands of the Trojans makes us think that we have almost an ideal student body back of the athletic squads.

It's hard to tell you just how much the telegrams, wires, cables and letters, received by the team down South were appreciated by Captain Irvin Schulz and the rest of the squad—but they were—and they helped in a great way to allay the sting of a scorching defeat with the knowledge that the students back on the campus had confidence in their organization and their ability to come out of the hole and win the rest.

WIRES AND TEAM SPIRIT

Coming back on the train last Sunday, a bunch of discouraged athletes that had been battered through four quarters by the powerful Trojan football machine and not knowing how their reception on the campus would be after the ignominy of defeat, the messages that poured into the train at every stop-over not only assured them of the backing of the students but of the enthusiastic reception that rewards—"guts." It may seem to students that sending telegrams to a traveling team is merely a matter of courtesy and that the message is read, thrown away, and forgotten. Forget it. The most heartening stimulus in the world on the morning before the game is a wire from a player from a living organization or an individual announcing the backing of the campus they represent—win or lose.

UNIVERSITY HIGH SHOWS WELL

Chappie King's University high school team pulled a neat trick last week-end by scrapping out a victory over Eugene Hi's football team. King, a student at Oregon and coaching at University high for University credit, took a light team that averages 148 pounds on the field against Eugene's heavy outfit that averaged around 175 to 180. The game, here in Eugene high school circles amounts to about the same caliber that the Oregon-O. S. C. tilt does. King's light, fast squad showed the effects of vigilant coaching in their stubborn defense and heads-up ball all through the game. King, the grand old man of the campus, made a varsity letter in baseball last spring and his Frosh and his frosh numerals in football, basketball, and baseball back in 1922 and this is his first year as coach at the campus high school.

S.A.E.-Sigma Chi To Stage Fracas Saturday Night

Chappie King Confident Of Defeating Rival Grid Team Again

Dad's Day or no Dad's Day, the so-called "mock" football game scheduled for between halves of the Frosh-Rook contest Saturday night is going to be the real thing.

As testimony are the statements of Chappie King and Duke Shaneman, respective leaders in the bitter S. A. E.-Sigma Chi football feud. Arrangements have been made to allow the two factions to settle their battle in the fashion of gentlemen on Hayward field the night of the Dad's Day game.

While the S. A. E.'s won the last struggle by the close score of 2 to 0, Duke Shaneman avers that his cohorts were holding themselves in leash and are ready to unfold their full offensive Saturday night. "We have incorporated the Monmouth hidden ball play in a unique system of our own that will make us invincible once under way," says Shaneman.

Chappie King, fresh from the 2-to-0 victory, is not frightened in the least. "We promise the Oregon Dads the greatest football thrill of their lives, and the Sigma Chis the worst beating of theirs," said the confident Mr. King.

Frosh Work As Rook Tilt Approaches

Callison Has Heavy Line To Stop Eiler's Men

Both Teams Show Strength In Early Games; Fray Is Dad's Day Feature

Freshman football will hold the spotlight this week in the state of Oregon when the Oregon State Rooks and the University of Oregon Frosh clash Saturday, October 24. The contest is the main feature of the Dad's Day program.

The actual strength of the two teams cannot be determined as neither team has met the same foes. The frosh probably have the heaviest team ever to fight for the school, the line being heavier than that of the varsity. The only test experienced by the squad was in the game in which they conquered the super-varsity of Monmouth Normal school, 45 to 0. The opposition was not strong enough to enable the judging of the frosh team's exact strength, however, Callison has been working his men hard the past few days, in attempting to smooth out his offense and balance his team for the test Saturday.

Many Good Frosh Various men of the frosh squad have shown themselves fit to play a bang-up game of football. A good pair of ends is an asset to any football team and with Morse and Simpson in the game, that department is well filled. Morse is a great defensive man, and will take care of his side of the line. Smith, a guard, is the outstanding man in the front wall.

The backfield, the spectacular part of the team, is well supplied with flashy ball carriers. Clarkson is the triple-threat man of the group and is a slippery gent when in the open. His passing and kicking are factors which make his ball carrying doubly dangerous. The green lid team is not a one man affair, as Pepinjack and Kostka are equally important cogs in the backfield. This lad Kostka is the hardest hitting fullback seen in action for some time. He is equally good on the defense.

Hard To Compare Teams The Rooks have the same good team that always represents the school. In a recent game they smothered Chemawa 24 to 0. The score does not indicate the exact strength of the Rooks, as they used the entire squad in the game. Coach Eilers has a mighty fine team outlook over at State, with such known men as Heikman and others in the line-up. It is impossible to compare the two squads, but the freshman will have the advantage in weight, if that factor is to be considered.

As any ardent football fan can tell you, the Rook-Frosh scramble is the most heated contest of the entire year in the local sporting world. It is a bloodthirsty affair, with personal safety forgotten in the desire to win. Every year there is a grievance to be settled which usually results in a fight; we are not promoting a fight, but wish to express the opinion that the game carries a great deal of spirit. The added touch Dad's day lends to the occasion is another reason why the Frosh-Rook scrap will be worth going to see.

Amphibian Group Will Hold Tryouts At Gerlinger Pool

Requirements Named For Membership in Local Swim Honorary

Amphibian club, women's local swimming honorary, will hold its first tryouts for membership this year at 7:30 this evening in the women's pool in the Gerlinger building.

A list of requirements to be fulfilled by each aspirant of the group has been given by Isabelle Jenkins, secretary-treasurer. The swimmer must be able to do 11 lengths of the pool for endurance, two strokes for form, one stroke other than those used for form or speed, and one standard dive in good form.

The time on speed strokes must be for two lengths at not more than 34 seconds for crawl, 38 seconds for side-stroke, 36 seconds for trudgeon, 37 seconds for English over-arm, 40 seconds for breast, 35 seconds for trudgeon crawl, and 36 seconds for back stroke.

The women's pool will be held open for practices every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday between 4 and 5 o'clock. At this time any girl interested in the Amphibian club may practice and improve her strokes.

New Type Face Designed By Oregon State Teacher

Future of Style Is Discussed by Professor Hall A new type face, based on a classic artistic principle new to printing, has been originated and designed by C. P. McIntosh, professor of industrial editing in the department of industrial journalism at Oregon State college.

Professor McIntosh has finished a complete alphabet of upper and lower case letters and figures, and is submitting these models to typography specialists throughout the country for criticism.

"It remains to be seen," commented Robert C. Hall, supervisor of the University press, "just how the popularity of this new type face will develop."

It is described by its originator as characteristically American in form, and is claimed to mark an advance in legibility, artistry, simplicity, strength and economy.

This new type comes nearer than any other to the printer's dream for type of uniform-sized letters, making copy-fitting quick and sure. It is claimed by Professor McIntosh that with the use of this type line justification will frequently be automatic.

Local Interest Held in Eastern College Event

Among the local people who will have a personal interest in the coming inauguration of Robert Lee Stuart as president of Taylor university, of Upland, Indiana, October 28 and 29, are Mrs. Pearl Watts and Professor Fred L. Shinn of Eugene, both of whom were Taylor students.

A two-day program will signalize the event, and bishops, college presidents, and other church and school officials will be heard. The new gymnasium built by T. H.

Notices Will Bar Solicitors From Campus Grounds

"No Solicitors Permitted on the University of Oregon Campus."

These words posted on doors about the campus will cause a few more high pressure salesmen to slip into the rut of depression—at least as far as the University is concerned.

An epidemic of solicitors who are trying to sell professors and employees Sox, shirts, magazines, and "what have you," have taken up the instructors' time in the past, it is declared, and these means have been taken to stem the attack.

Maytag, washing machine baron, who died a week ago, will be the scene of the ceremonial.

Editing Class Conducts Survey for Eugene Daily

Reader Interest Is Revealed by Interview Series

Dean Eric W. Allen's editing class began actual work Tuesday on the Gallup Readers' Interest survey which is being conducted for the Eugene Register-Guard.

Merlin Blais and Ted Montgomery, members of the class, have charge of the work.

The purpose of the survey is to find out what people are reading. In order to secure this information papers are marked for each individual interviewed, showing what that person actually read on that particular day. The class hopes to secure at least 500 such interviews. According to Mr. Gallup, less than 400 interviews in a town the size of Eugene is insufficient to be classed as representative. From these marked copies tabulations will be made and percentages drawn, which will show definitely what people read, classified as to class, age, sex, and occupation.

The Gallup method of surveying reader interest is comparatively new. To date it is the only scientifically accurate method in the field, in the opinion of Dean Allen.

This is the second time that this survey has been used in Eugene. Two years ago the editing class conducted one in the interests of the old Morning Register, which proved of interest not only to that paper but to others throughout the state.

Guards Both Able

The guard positions are both filled with all-conference men, Bill Lowe and "Boomer" Dablow. Joe Bourne, a two-year letterman, fills the pivot berth. Art Malo, although this is his first year as a regular, has been pushing Lowe and Dablow for one of the guard

North Dakotans May Prove Real Threat To Spears' Men; Will Show Flashy Backfield

Nodaks To Place Powerful Team in Field Against Lemon and Green Menace

WHEN Doc Spears and his Webfeet meet with the University of North Dakota eleven next Saturday at Grand Forks, they will face a team which is anything but a setup. In the last three years the Nodaks have lost but three games, one of which was to the powerful Army eleven last year, 33 to 6. Western fans will remember their victory over the Los Angeles Firemen's team last year down South.

From a letter received from the sports editor of the North Dakota Daily, it seems that the Nodaks or the Sioux, as they are termed, have a veteran team, with plenty of all-conference players. Under the coaching of Jack West, they have won the North Central conference championship for the past three years.

Burma Is Star Starring in the Nodak backfield is John Burma, fullback and captain. He is noted for his line-crashing ability and has been chosen on the all-conference eleven for two years. Teaming with Burma as ball-carriers are three other sensational players. Ralph Pierce and Larry Knauf are speedy open-field runners, and Lloyd Richmond is their line-crasher de luxe. Richmond is also their place kicker and, according to reports, seldom fails to add the extra point after touchdowns.

Fred "Nip" Felber, another two-time all-conference selection, is the star of the Sioux forward wall. He is a sensational player, say reports, and is being boomed for an All-American berth this year. He was chosen to play with the collection of East-West stars last year against the Notre Dame all-stars, and distinguished himself by stopping the advances of the famed Jack Elder.

Have Big Schedule The North Central conference is composed of North Dakota university, North Dakota State college, South Dakota university and State college, and Morningside college. Other teams on the Sioux schedule this year include George Washington university, Duquesne university, and St. Thomas college. This is the toughest schedule ever attempted by a North Dakota team. A total of 11 games is scheduled.

Games up to date include a 46-to-0 win over Gustavus Adolphus university, a 22-to-0 in over St. Olaf, and a 41 to 7 win over DePaul university of Chicago. The game with Oregon will be a part of their annual Homecoming celebration, and a large crowd is expected to witness the contest.
