

In the PRESS BOX with Walt Baker

This coming Saturday, students on the campus will have a golden opportunity to demonstrate the extent of the "Oregon Spirit." Oregon has been snowed under by the Trojans last week-end, and the student body responded nobly to the occasion by sending wires and meeting the train at the station on the return of a beaten team. The morale is all in good shape now, and it's up to the Oregon student body to keep it that way. This Saturday's game is one of the toughest on the schedule—according to Doc, it will be fully as tough as the N. Y. U. scrap in New York. Just a suggestion should be enough for we who stayed at home to do anything that will help put the game across from an Oregon angle. The team's address is the Ryan Hotel, Grand Forks, North Dakota. Get a night letter in tonight, not tomorrow, because messages sent on the day of the game will, in all probability, not be delivered until after the fireworks are over.

FROSH PLAY TOMORROW

A hard blow fell on the yearling squad last night. Art Clarkson, the triple-threat man of the Frosh backfield, will probably not be able to get in tomorrow night's game. He had a bit of tough luck the other night in practice and bruised a leg bone—not an injury that will keep him out for the rest of the season—but one that is pretty serious for the time being. Chalk up one point for the Rooks. But aside from this, there is all the power in the world left for the Frosh to display tomorrow night. Probably the greater part of the ball-carrying will be done by Stan Kostka, a battering ram type of player who has been foremost in the freshman line-smashing attack. Probably his greatest weakness is on the defense, but it will take a much better line than the Rooks can provide to stop him short of three or four yards every time it's needed.

ROOKS STRONG

The Frosh look pretty weak in their pass-defense, and that boy Heikenen, who has been tossing a football into knot-holes over in Corvallis, is good enough to pick weaknesses in most any team. Another Rook that looks like a sure-fire grandstand attraction is Franklin, a mere 200 pounds of quarterback that has shown some brilliant field-generalship in the Rooks' pre-season schedule. Upon meeting the boy, we got the impression that he was just a little shy of horse-sense, and after watching him reach 10 feet up the table for the butter, we decided that he was a good football player after all. Anyway, it looks like football is his game, and Saturday night he's going to need all the reach and all the heads-up ball in his system to steer the O. S. C. freshmen through Oregon.

Individual Swim Tourney To Be Commenced Soon

An individual swimming tournament will be held after the completion of the intramural pool tourney. The candidates who will be allowed to enter this competition will be limited to those having one of the six best times recorded in each event in the intramural contests.

These events are the 80 yard free style, 40 yard backstroke, 40 yard breast stroke, 120 yard medley relay, 60 yard individual medley, and 120 yard free style relays. The victor in each will be crowned campus champion in that particular event.

PENDLETON CHAMPION BOWS TO COLLEGIATE

The ride resulted in Paxton being presented with a handful of green amounting to $25, and Nelson still moans about college kids riding horses instead of tending to business.

FAMOUS CHEMIST ADDRESSES CONCLAVE

(Continued from Page One) plain, is a compound of two or more elements which behaves as though it were a single element. Grain alcohol is composed of two radicals, an ethyl and a hydroxyl, the former consisting of two atoms of carbon united with five of hydrogen, and the latter of one atom of hydrogen in combination with one atom of oxygen. If the ethyl radical were removed from the hydroxyl, the ethyl would fall in the class of free radicals.

The method of performing such operations had been executed but twice since the beginning of the science of organic chemistry up until recent times.

More recent laboratory methods, however, have produced ways of accomplishing this. Dr. Wieland, the Viennese scientist who spoke here last spring term, was prominent in the development of this type of research.

Periodic Chart Traced

The periodic chart, which played such an important part in the location of the recently discovered element 87, was traced from the time of its origin. In the time of Lavoisier, Dr. Gombert went on, but 25 types of atoms were known. However, when more were found and some attempt was made to classify them, it was discovered that they repeated themselves at intervals of seven. Thus by writing them under each other in lines of seven and drawing vertical lines between the elements, a type of chart is created.

It was found that the elements in horizontal rows behaved chemically in much the same manner and that the chemicals in the vertical rows behaved analogously. Thus was born the periodic chart. Gaps were found and these were left for the unknown elements. To date, all but one of these gaps have been filled in.

A large crowd of scientists was on hand and formed a most appreciative audience. The lecture was clear and understandable throughout.

Delegation of California Dads May Visit Campus

A delegation of Oregon Dads from California will be on hand October 24 to attend Dads' day festivities at the University of Oregon, if present plans go through.

Interest in the annual get-together is widespread among California parents, according to Rufus Hatch Kimball of San Francisco, president of the California Oregon Dads, who is making arrangements for the trip. The Southern Pacific railroad company has agreed to give rates to a party, which will enable the Dads to come to Eugene at a nominal expense.

Cooperation of the University with the California Dads is being given in every way. Earl M. Pallett, registrar and chairman of the program, announced. Letters are being sent to the Dads, urging them to take advantage of this opportunity of acquainting themselves with the school.

Nodaks Ready For Invasion Of Webfoots

Halfback Injured, Can't Play for Dakotans

Spears' Team Outweighed Ten Pounds Per Man In Forward Wall

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH DAKOTA, Grand Forks, N. D., Oct. 21.—(Special)—As the University of Oregon football eleven nears here on its 2000-mile journey from the Pacific coast, Coach Jack West and his Nodaks spent a busy day preparing for the fray, which will be the major event in North Dakota's annual homecoming festivities.

Some gloom was spread over the Sioux camp this week when it was announced that Ralph Pierce, sensational sophomore halfback, would be unable to play against Doc Spears' Webfeet, due to an injured shoulder suffered in last week's game with South Dakota State college. Coach West has been experimenting with several different combinations in an effort to find a suitable scoring quartet. The Nodaks will depend principally on the line-crashing power of Captain John Burma to score on the Webfeet. But in case he is unable to get past the husky Webfoot linemen there will be plenty of speed left in the remainder of the backfield. The Nodaks will outweigh Oregon on the line about 10 pounds to the man. Except for the right end position the entire line is composed of veteran players.

Dean Parsons Addresses Banquet of PTA Delegates

Members of the state Parent-Teacher association now having their convention in Eugene, gave a banquet at the Osborn hotel last night, with more than 100 people attending.

Dr. Philip A. Parsons, dean of the school of applied social science of the University, spoke on "Program of Adult Education in Oregon."

At the First Baptist church, where the members of the association met at 7:30 o'clock yesterday, Dean Parsons discussed certain sections of the "White House Children Character."

Are The Rooks Going To Win? 'No' Bellows Prink's Lusty Freshmen Troupe

Heikenen Must Be Stopped, Says Prink Callison; Dads To See Game

On the same battleground where they twice will fight as full-fledged varsity eleven, the Oregon State Rooks and the University of Oregon freshmen will meet tomorrow night. The yearling teams will march up to the post at 8:30 o'clock.

Already heralded as a victory at the stronghold of each troupe, the game looms as a ground-gaining duel between Stanley Kostka of the freshmen and Arnold Heikenen of the Rooks. Kostka, 200 pounds of galloping power, recently attained regular employment as freshman fullback. Heikenen has been laboring at left half for the Rooks since the season started.

Vern Eilers, a lineman of all-coast recognition two years ago, will formally introduce himself as head Rook coach tomorrow night. His coaching opponent will be Prink Callison, two years at the head of the Oregon freshmen. Due chiefly to the open-field fleetness of Johnny Biancone, the Rooks won the first engagement last year, 7 to 6. In 1929, with Reginald Rust at the helm, they likewise won the initial encounter. This, also, by a score of 7 to 6.

Further information can be had at the speech offices.

the Rooks in the second fracas of each year by overwhelming margins.

Announcement by Coach Callison yesterday that Art Clarkson, triple-threat halfback, was probably out of tomorrow night's game somewhat dampened the Frosh outlook. A bruised leg muscle, suffered in practice this week, has failed to heal satisfactorily. Clarkson was expected to be one of the main scoring threats after his fine showing in the Oregon Normal game, in which he scored two touchdowns and threw two south-paw passes for a couple more.
