LEMON PALOOKA

Hey, hey! Here's one for you to chew with your morning mush—that is, if you really mush.

The scene is laid at a banquet. A huge and distinguished crowd is dining. Long runs the discussion of the coming Homecoming, of its glory, significance, and magnificence.

The Homecoming Chairman sits by and with a fatuous smile listens to the plaudits of the gathering who praise his directorship, technique, ability, genius, personality, and personal charm. He nods in approval of the sentiment of the assemblage. Truly is he one of the great. And then, like a bolt out of the blue—

"Who is the homecoming chairman?" a little girl asks with crushing simplicity.

As they carry out the GREAT BIG CAMPUS MAN,

THE CURTAIN FALLS

And that, my friends, is a word of one syllable.

WHAT'S THIS RUMOR GOING AROUND THE CAMPUS THAT THE OUTFIT BACKING THE DOUGHNUT SALE IS NOT SELLING DOUGHNUTS AT ALL, BUT JUST SHELLS FILLED WITH JAMAICA GINGER MINUS THE GINGER?

If that is the case, we prophecy that their commodity will sell like hot-cakes.

After the way these girls gypped the poor gullible fraternity boys, we decided to hire a girl to get the dirt on the fraternities.

We wonder what the heck the boys expected for a dollar after the girls "used a few of their feminine wiles."

This little girl we are hiring is an experienced wench. Reports have it that she has been in every male living organization on the campus. She is present at every scene of conviviality and is also a member of every risque party. Allow us to introduce Ethel L. Collier:

Ethel will assist Little Irvin in the daily investigatory reports of the fraternities.

And now a little bit of choice dirt comes to our ears:

It seems that a certain chap whose last name resembles that of a high churchman has a little apartment in Eugene where he lives while attending school. It seems, also, that he with Kirby Kiddoo and Elizabeth Strain were wandering around in the basement of the Ad building when they chanced upon a cache of janitor's supplies. The aforesaid gentleman with the apartment thought that here would be an excellent chance to furnish his apartment with little cost to himself. What ho! Forthwith did he inveigle the others to be his accomplices in the nefarious plot. Soon, laden with the spoils, bearing hand towels and other paper, they staggered up the steps. Who did they meet there? None other but the janitor.

"Uh, er," stammered the leader, "these things just fell out of the box."

The janitor looked hard at him and the forlorn little group wended their mournful way back to the basement where, frustrated in their plans, they replaced the supplies. The moral of this story is: Be careful what kind of paper you swipe.

Geology assistant: Hey, Roy, why don't you light your pipe? Little Roy: Aw, heck, what's the use? She isn't looking at me now.

And now Little Irvin makes his report on the Buy Rice house located between Dirteenth and Horteenth on Brawlder.

Dear Lemon Palooka:
The Cry Sigh house, as the name indicates is somewhat of an oriental house. None of the boys are ever orientated. A large portion of their furniture is jappanned and their roof needs chinking up. Also, some dog has mongoled the rug pretty badly.

"Lean" Frady, an Irishman from long-ago, came forward and whispered some unprintable scandal on the way one of the brothers won an election some time ago.

The pride and joy of the house, Georgie Heismuller was not there but, believe me, I heard plenty about him.

The first thing the boys said when I entered the house was an admonishment not to judge them by that house—that they were building shortly. Another of the fellows, in confidence, showed me the complete plans of the house, a luxurious two room bungalow. Construction will start in 1944.

The house manager appeared to be worried with what to do with the garbage since they no longer lived on the mill race. One cynic ventured that they may not live on the mill race but that they certainly live on the grace of their creditors.

Yours sincerely,
Little Irvin.

EMERALD of The... AIR

"The present railroad crisis and railroad consolidation" will be the topic of Dr. Donald M. Erb, when he speaks during the Emerald-of-the-Air broadcast over KORE at 4:15 this afternoon. Dr. Erb, professor of economics, is particularly interested in the economics of transportation, and will devote the 15-minute period to a discussion of the recent developments in the status of the nation's rail carriers. Railroads have been hit as badly by the depression as other large businesses, but the semi-public nature of the services rendered by them brings their plight much more into prominence. The necessity for reduced expenditures has brought about movements for higher transportation charges, but the action of the interstate commerce commission has been toward continued low rates. Consolidation has afforded another means of cutting overhead, and the recent rail merger proposed for four of the leading eastern lines is an illustration of what is being carried out in this direction. The latter point will furnish Dr. Erb with material for his talk this afternoon.

Hellig—"Road to Singapore," starring William Powell and Doris Kenyon; showing for the last time today.

McDonald—"Susan Lenox," featuring Greta Garbo and Clark Gable; showing for the last time today.

State—"Mother and Son," with Clara Kimball Young, and "Hush Money," with Joan Bennett and Hardie Albright; showing Tuesday and Wednesday.

By ROY SHEEDY

"Susan Lenox" at McDonald
Reviewers in most every part of the world except Sweden have adopted the habit when reviewing one of Greta Garbo's films of saying: "If you like Garbo, you'll like this picture." And so this writer adopts that policy, for the admirers of the actress seem satisfied with any picture so long as Greta is going through her motions on the screen.

"Susan Lenox, Her Fall and Rise" is the story of a girl who was very, very misunderstood. The whole picture is built around the idea that the character played by masculine Clark Gable thinks Greta is a lily in the mud, whereas she is actually as pure as Sweden's snowdrifts. Well, practically. More stuff like this and even people who admire Garbo won't like her pictures.

Clark Gable proves pretty conclusively that his popularity in the films is due to his personality and not to his acting ability. As for Greta herself, her success has been caused by an illusion which she has placed on the public, but some day this illusion will be shattered like a soap bubble.

"Guilty Hands," starring Lionel Barrymore and Kay Francis, is a novel mystery thriller, is showing Wednesday and Thursday at the McDonald.

By RALPH MASON

William Powell at Hellig
"The Road to Singapore," featuring William Powell in his first starring picture under Warner Brothers, gives ample reassurance of his ability in characterization. Supporting Powell are Doris Kenyon, Marian Marsh, and Louis Calhern.

Powell, playing the part of Dwaltry, a suave, idle man of the world, falls in love with a doctor's wife (Doris Kenyon), who at first pays no attention to him. Louis Calhern, as the very busy Dr. Marsh, devotes most of his time to his patients and has little time for his wife.

The scene is laid in the depths of the Ceylon jungles, where Miss Kenyon yearns for affection, and which she eventually finds in Dwaltry.

The sudden return of Dr. Marsh brings the picture to a dramatic and unexpected climax.

"The Road to Singapore" is a misleading title for this picture, the jungle looks positively anemic.

Greta Garbo, starring in "Susan Lenox," showing at the McDonald for the last time today.

and there isn't a murder in the whole show. Powell plays his part well, it is neither overdone nor done over. Miss Kenyon acts her part with passionate sincerity which rivals that of Powell.

"The Gay Diplomat," presenting Ivan Lebedeff in his first starring role, opens for a three-day run tomorrow.

"Vice Squad" at Colonial

"The Vice Squad," featuring Paul Lukas and Kay Francis, is showing at the Colonial tonight ("dime nite") only.

Double Bill at State

"Mother and Son," starring Clara Kimball Young, and "Hush Money," with Joan Bennett and Hardie Albright, constitute the double-bill feature at the State today and tomorrow.

Westminster Guild Plans To Send Orientals Gifts

Contributions Will Be Accepted Wednesday Evening

Christmas gifts for boarding school girls in China are being wrapped and sent by members of the Westminster Guild. A meeting will be held in Westminster house Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock for the preparation of the first box.

Girls who would like to send a gift are asked to bring to the meeting some small article not exceeding 25 cents in value.

Miss Helen Whitaker, who has spent the last five years teaching in this school, makes the following suggestions for appropriate gifts: small rag rugs, bracelets, stationery, note books, handkerchiefs, combs, Eversharp pencils, and any similar article which girls of high school age would enjoy.
