

500 Fathers Visit Oregon Campus to Celebrate Annual Dad's Day

Oregon Dads Rule Campus For Week-End

Fifth Annual Celebration Draws Four Hundred

Fathers Guests at Game, Banquet, Smoker, and Organ Recital

Dads of Oregon students were rulers of the campus during the week-end just passed, when the University observed its fifth annual Dad's Day celebration. More than four hundred fathers attended the two-day affair.

W. Lair Thompson, of Portland, was elected president for the coming year at the executive meeting of the association Saturday morning. O. Laurgaard, also of Portland, is the retiring president. Registration of the fathers continued until late Saturday.

Sigma Kappa Wins Cup
The silver cup for the most Dads was awarded to Sigma Kappa sorority. Phi Mu took second place, and Alpha Phi and Theta Chi tied for third.

Fraternities, sororities, and the dormitories held special luncheons Saturday, and radio reports of the Oregon-North Dakota football game were received. A smoker at the men's gym was a feature of the late afternoon.

Banquet Honors Dads
Fathers, sons and daughters were honored at a special banquet Saturday evening at McArthur court. Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University, and officers of the Dads spoke.

The annual "little big game" between the Oregon Frosh and the O. S. C. Rooks on Hayward field followed the banquet. Dads sat in a special section.

Sunday services in Eugene churches were dedicated to the visiting Dads, as was also the Sunday evening organ recital by John Stark Evans, of the school of music faculty.

Dads Name Prexy, Other Officials For Coming Year

Lair Thompson Succeeds O. Laurgaard as President

At their fifth annual gathering here Saturday, the Oregon Dads elected W. Lair Thompson of Portland, their president for the coming year. Mr. Thompson is an attorney. His son, Don Thompson, is a member of the freshman class.

Mr. Thompson will succeed O. Laurgaard, also of Portland. Two other new officers were installed. J. P. Lettridge of Baker was named vice-president and Wilson H. Jewett of Eugene was chosen secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Paul W. Ager of Eugene will continue as executive secretary.

Five additions were made to the executive committee. These were W. C. Raegnitz, Portland; Charles C. Hall, Portland; Dr. G. A. Massey, Klamath Falls; Edgar W. Smith, Portland, and John N. Edliffsen, Portland.

The much arbitrated problem of student-owned automobiles was discussed by the assembled Dads, who proposed that all attempts to control this matter be abolished. A committee was named to work with University officials in extending the boundaries of the campus.

After the business meeting, the visiting Dads turned from work to play and listened to the Oregon-North Dakota scoreless tie over the radio. They then attended a smoker in the men's gymnasium.

MAGAZINE ARTICLE FAILS TO TELL TRUTH

parently went to the editor of Good Housekeeping and expressed herself in this vein. Her article is simply an attempt to prove she was right, and she cites only those instances that support her case. Her reference to the University of Oregon is very unfair, since the incident of small pox here was two years ago, and has been corrected. Also, no one is capable of judging the values of menus when they eat but one meal here, a meal, which by the way, would be sufficient for an average lunch anyway.

Statements Unfair
"Many of her references are very unfair. She criticizes the University of California for but one small phase of their health work, while the institution on the whole is noted as a leader in health education. Many other observations she made two and one-half years ago have since been altered. No one should take the article seriously, and I am amazed that a magazine like Good Housekeeping would print such an article without first verifying the charges by at least sending copies of the material to the schools criticized."

University authorities have not said whether they will take the matter up with the magazine, although inquiries asking for information on the author and upon her "investigation" have been made to those in charge of Good Housekeeping.

Hall Speaks Before Oregon Fathers at Annual Banquet

Campus Groups Extend Greetings to Dads at Dinner

Speaking in favor of a better understanding between parents and the college administration, Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University, made the principal address at the special banquet Saturday evening at McArthur court in honor of the Oregon Dads.

In view of reaching this better understanding, Dr. Hall explained how the advisory system brought the students into personal contact with the faculty, how the University was training the students spiritually, and how the University aimed to give them a deeper appreciation of music, art, and other forms of culture. He also emphasized the place of research in the University.

Before Dr. Hall's speech, greetings were extended to the Dads by the representatives of the different groups: F. E. Callister, from the state board of higher education, Mrs. F. W. Bond, president of the Oregon Mothers, Brian Minnaugh, president of the Associated Students, and Ann Baum, president of the Associated Women Students.

At the close of the banquet, trophies for the largest attendance at Dad's day were presented. The officers of the Oregon Dads were then introduced by Mr. Laurgaard, past president of the year and toastmaster for the evening.

Invocation was read by Reverend Maxwell Adams, University pastor. The music was furnished by the Oregon concert band under the leadership of John Stehn.

Indoor Athletics Staged for Dads In Gym Saturday

Balcony Packed by Crowd of Fathers, Students At Exhibitions

Wrestling, fencing, tumbling, and stunts of all kinds were included in the men's gymnasium. The program was under the supervision of Walt Evans, vice-president of the associated students.

The smoker was enjoyed by a large crowd of dads and students. The opening bout was a three-round boxing exhibition between Mahr Reymers and Howard Nachtman, University students, followed by a closely contested wrestling tilt featuring Don Cartwright and Francis Keltner. The second wrestling match was between Claire Meisel, instructor in the University and Carl Klemm, resulting in an evenly fought draw.

The dads were then entertained by a display of fencing between Warren Powell, fencing instructor in the physical education department, and Edwin Pitt of Newton, Massachusetts, and a recent student of Senac, who is considered the outstanding fencing teacher in New York City. Mr. Powell and Mr. Pitt demonstrated the use of the foil, the epee, and the saber in three interesting contests.

Mickey Vail, Al Bradley and Clarke Thompson presented ten minutes of feature work on the horizontal bar, followed by trick tumbling by Maurice Pease, Tommy Kneeland, and Clarke Thompson.

Norblad Cup for Most Dads Is Won By Sigma Kappa

Phi Mu Gets Shaw Award; Alpha Phi, Theta Chi Tie for Third

Winners in the Dad's day competition among the living organizations on the campus were announced Sunday, with Sigma Kappa, women's group, taking the honors with one visiting dad for every two members in the house, or 50 per cent. They awarded the A. W. Norblad cup, presented three years ago by Mr. Norblad, then governor.

Phi Mu sorority took second place with six dads present out of a membership of thirteen, or approximately 46 per cent. They were given the Paul T. Shaw coffee set, donated two years ago by Mr. Shaw, then president of the Oregon Dads' organization.

Alpha Phi, women's house, and Theta Chi, men's fraternity, tied for third place.

An unusually large attendance of Dads was noted this year, and many houses had more Dads present than the winning groups, but the awards were made on a percentage membership basis. Final figures indicated that over 400 fathers of Oregon students were present on the campus during the annual event.

A movement has been started by some Chicago business men to interest college students in defense of the prohibition amendment.

Minnesota League Supports Oregon On Lillard Stand

Hometown Conference Is Unaware of Star's Ineligibility

Joe Lillard was again the center of more publicity last night when word was received from Minneapolis that he would be ineligible for play there in the upper part of the Park league because of his ban in this conference.

This information, coming from Jimmy Fox, head of the amateur Park league there, where Joe played before coming to Oregon, seems to bear out the fact that Lillard is not guilty of the charges that had banned him from the Coast. Because of the fact that the amateur standing of Lillard was not questioned while he played in that part of the country from where "Czar" Butler is supposed to have received his information.

The reports stated that Lillard would be reinstated there as soon as his case was cleared up on the coast. This was taken as a break for Oregon's stand by athletic officials here, who said that it is shown that those who knew him were unaware of his alleged playing under an assumed name and would abide by anything done out here.

Lillard had not planned on returning to Minnesota, so the new edict has no effect upon his plans. He will stay on the Oregon campus and continue his studies as he intended to do before anything came up.

To keep your mind young

UNIQUE—a galaxy of the world's best names in literature, science, the arts, and humor, daily on a special page of their own in the Examiner. Essays, critiques, book reviews, poems, frank discussion of problems—often controversial, never less than interesting—bound by no rules other than the obligation that each writer shall be true to himself or herself in the expression of views. The names you see listed here are an earnest of the editor's intent. This is only a partial roster—others, equally important, will appear from day to day. To intelligent people, to teachers and students, this page will be a vital element of their daily living program.

the world's most brilliant writers vie with each other for your interest on this new daily page . . . . .

No magazine could, in the span of a month's publication, give you the equal of this page's content in a similar period. The quality of the writing—the freedom from restraint—the variety of each day's selection make the March of Events Page of the morning Examiner an unusual contribution to the culture and entertainment of this community. Many California writers will be represented there regularly.

Charles Hanson Towne

A graceful writer who, in addition to his essays, short stories and book reviews, has published three notable books of poetry—his contributions to this page are among the best writing of his career.

Aldous Huxley . . . Deems Taylor

This young intellectual radical has many important novels to his credit, as well as essays which have been provocative of much controversy.

Former editor of "Musical America," composer of two operas that have been produced at the Metropolitan in New York, he is one of the accepted critics of music in America.

Rebecca West . . . Anthony Gibbs

Leading woman novelist of England, her articles have been influential in many social and economic campaigns of interest to women.

Son of Sir Philip Gibbs, war correspondent and novelist, this young writer has three books to his credit—he has come to America to interpret life here in the light of his English education.

Bertrand Russell . . . Idwal Jones

No writer on philosophic subjects occupies a more important position than this member of the British nobility. His style is remarkable for its clarity—he writes for the lay mind to understand.

Former dramatic and literary editor of The Examiner, who has led an adventurous life, produced and translated many plays, written two important novels—writes regularly for us.

Gertrude Atherton

An author who needs no introduction; a patriotic Californian, unorthodox in her views, she writes freely on such subjects as engage her mind. Her contributions to this page reflect a wide variety of her interest—the editor does not know what the subject of any article covers until it appears at his desk.

Charles Caldwell Dobie

One of San Francisco's most attractive personalities, this novelist and journalist has for years enjoyed an ever widening audience, and his appearance here is a pleasant offering to Examiner readers.

Guglielmo Ferrero

This Italian historian enjoys the ability to interpret modern life in the light of his well-founded knowledge of manners and customs of ancient days—his style is so engaging as to be persuasive—his conclusions are, at least, original.

Bruno Lessing . . . Jacob Wasserman

Creator of the famous "Lapidowitz" stories of the New York ghetto, he is also a story teller of more than ordinary ability. Living abroad, he writes of day to day happenings on the continent—sometimes seriously, sometimes in a lighter vein.

The author of "The World's Illusion" and other novels ranking high in the list of this generation's literary achievements, is but one of the writers of Europe who will have freedom of expression through the March of Events page of the daily Examiner.

contemporary verse

Clinton Scollard, Mary Carolyn Davies, Charlotte Becker, Berion Braley, Margaret E. Sangster, Wilfred J. Funk, Margaret Widdemer and other favorite singers will be on this page with verse light and serious.

the new school of humor

That ingenious satire introduced first through the New Yorker finds a welcome place daily on this page. The leaders of this new group are all on their mettle to give it their best.

books in review

A revival of that method of reviewing which results actually in original essays—frank criticism of fiction, biography, books on all serious subjects by people with knowledge of the matters in discussion—real attempt to discover the virtues of writers not yet among "best sellers"—an absence of awe for "great names"—characterize the treatment of latest volumes day by day on this page.
