

Rivals Show Equal Power In Past Years

Oregon State Has Edge In Scoring

Webfeet Lead in Victories And Losses From Early Games

If pre-game records have anything to do with the outcome of the Oregon-Oregon State tilt this afternoon, the game should end in a closely fought tie. If ever these two old rivals met upon more equal terms with one another than they do this season, no records can be found of such a condition. Both teams have gone through a stiff schedule, making brilliant showings against some of the strongest teams of the nation. Each has improved noticeably with each game played.

Oregon Wins More

In the win column, the Oregon team holds the advantage in that it has won five of the six games played while the Orangemen have four victories to three defeats. Both teams were beaten by top-heavy scores by the U. S. C. Trojans, and both scored easy victories over Willamette and Oregon Normal. O. S. C. received her two other defeats at the hands of Stanford and Washington State. In both cases the Beavers forced their opponents to the final gun. Last week O. S. C. shut out Montana 19-0 for their first conference win.

Each team, to date, has won one inter-sectional game.

Oregon State defeated the strong Colorado eleven, while Oregon upset the great Violet horde of New York University, 14-6. The victory of the Webfeet is probably the more impressive of the two as the N. Y. U. team was hailed as a probable national champion and had not been defeated up to the time of the Oregon game. In another game Dr. Spears' men fought North Dakota to a scoreless tie.

Beaver Scores Impressive

In comparative scores, however, the team from Corvallis stands out. O. S. C. trounced Willamette by the almost unbelievable score of 76-0, while the Oregon team won from the same team 20-0. Oregon State also made a slightly better showing against U. S. C. than the Webfeet did, but both scores were decisively against the northern teams.

Oregon now stands near the top of the conference ladder, while the Orangemen are close to the bottom. The outcome of this game will, however, virtually determine the success of the two teams for the season as the students of both schools base all of their conclusions upon this one game.

An article, "Building an Education Program for Oregon," by Professor F. L. Stetson of the education department, has been published in the November issue of the Commonwealth Review. This program is the result of three years of research study by Professor Stetson for a better educational plan for Oregon schools.

THE Alumni convention and business meeting will be combined into one affair at Guild theater at 10 o'clock tomorrow, according to an announcement made last night by Jeannette Calkins, alumni secretary.

Several reservations for the Alumni luncheon, which is to be held at the men's dorm Saturday at 12:00, are still available, she revealed. Decorating for this affair is being done by students who are sons and daughters of the alums.

tion, will hold formal pledging rites. The luncheon will end at 1:30.

Special Trains Due

At 1 o'clock special trains will arrive from Corvallis and Portland, and will disgorge their horde of football-mad enthusiasts who, escorted by the University band, will march to the game. At 1:30, with the shrill blast of the referee's whistle, athletic hostilities will be renewed with O. S. C. where they left off last November.

The alumni reception, under the direction of Mary Lou Muncey, will be held in alumni hall of the Gerlinger building from 8 o'clock until 10. Alums, townspeople and students are urged to attend by Miss Calkins.

At 9 o'clock everyone will flock to the Homecoming dance at M. Arthur court, Bob Holmes, chairman of the dance, has announced. The decoration motif will consist of an autumn scene with trees, rocks, leaves and, in short, everything included in an autumn landscape except the rain and mud. The week-end will be terminated by an organ recital at the Music auditorium by John Stark Evans, Sunday evening at 5 o'clock.

Australian College Asks Debate With Oregon Men

Foreign University Plans Tour Similar To Webfoots'

A request was received by John L. Casteel, head of the speech department, from the University of Western Australia at Perth for the University of Oregon to meet their team, West Australia "Far East and America Debate Tour," in Eugene sometime in 1932.

The Australian university is sending a three-man team on a forensic tour during the period from November, 1932, to November, 1933. They will meet universities in Singapore, China, Japan, the United States, Canada, New Zealand, and Australia.

This tour will officially represent the University of Western Australia and will be of the nature of a good will mission. Starting with Singapore in November, 1932, the team will travel through China and Japan, then to Vancouver and through the United States to Canada. From San Francisco they will go to Hawaii and New Zealand and back to Australia. The tour will cover approximately twelve months.

In addition to debates the team will deliver lectures under the auspices of various organizations in cities included in their schedule. No decision has been made by Oregon as to whether or not they will meet the team.

Business Administration Group Pledges Six Girls

Six women students have been elected to pledgeship by Phi Chi Theta, national women's business administration honorary, it was announced by Alice Redetzke, president of the organization.

The newly elected pledges are Mary Ellen Bradford, Marguerite Tarbell, Gladys Calkins, Celestine Balsiger, Dorothy Hall, and Dorothy MacMillan.

Co-op Workers Bewildered By Mania For Slide Rules

Wonders never cease, and a new wonder was perpetrated by a Japanese student who meandered into the Co-op one day in quest of a slide rule. He was hungry for knowledge—perhaps hungry for nourishment—as he worked for his education, but he insisted on having the best, the most elaborate and expensive instruments obtainable that would enhance his knowledge of pre-medics.

The Japanese boy scanned the rules that were in stock, from the cheapest at 25 cents to the most costly at $10, but found none as elaborate or as expensive as he desired. He then consulted the catalogue, and, after much viewing of rules, chose a log-log duplex, 20 inches long, encased in leather, with a price tag on it glaring $26. The desired rule was ordered, and when it arrived the Japanese boy purchased the rule and went on his way rejoicing.

Tempus fugit—as it has a habit of doing—and the Japanese boy returned to the book shop and told Mr. McClain he wanted another rule similar to the one he had previously purchased.

When interrogated why he wanted another slide rule when he had just bought one, the Japanese boy replied: "I have received a letter from my brother in Japan who is confined to bed with typhoid fever. I wanted to give him a gift, so I sent him my slide rule because he is interested in mathematics." Another rule, like the first, was purchased, and again he went merrily on his way. His occupation was soon discovered. He was kitchen boy in a private home and drew a very meager income.

Hopes for Beaver Victory Grow Bright as Rain Falls; O.S.C. Has Weight Advantage

Inspired Orange Team in Fine Condition for Tilt As Time for Starting Gun Nears

By ESTILL PHIPPS Hopes for Oregon State to win today's football classic with Oregon brightened to a considerable extent with the eleventh hour arrival of Mr. Paul J. Schissler's right hand man, one Jupiter Plusius, who blew into Eugene Thursday night with the bottom out of his battered rain can.

With prospects for a slow, muddy field as the setting for the "grudge battle," the heavy Beaver team will be at its greatest advantage. Word comes from Corvallis that Schissler will capitalize on the edict of the weather man by starting his "powerhouse" backfield as the Biancone, Moe, Joslin and Little quartet is termed.

The veteran Orange line, which will average close to 190 pounds, will have a decided edge over the Webfoots' forward wall as far as poundage is concerned, while the backfields should weigh about the same.

The big question as far as the Oregon State faction is concerned is whether or not the potentially powerful Schissler-coached outfit can "click" in the manner of which it is capable. So far this year the Beavers have not functioned as was expected at the beginning of the season, and it remains to be seen if the "hopped up" effect that is forever present at the Homecoming clashes between the two schools can make the Orange combination work with machine-like precision.

Schissler is regarding lightly the reports from the Oregon camp which have come forth to the effect that the Oregon team will be weakened by the absence of Nilsson and Hughes from the line, and has put his charges through intensive drill all week in preparation for the toughest game of the Oregon State schedule.

As the Orangemen tapered off in a light workout yesterday, Schissler said, "The team is at the peak of condition. Everyone is ready to go, and, win or lose, we have no alibis to offer."

While no official statement has been made regarding the Oregon State line-up, it is almost certain that Keith Davis and Vic Curtin will open at the wing posts. Davis has had one year's experience in varsity competition and weighs 184 pounds, while Curtin scales 178 and is playing his first year in fast company.

Curly Miller, 191, and Bill Byington, 179, are slated to fill the tackle positions. Byington is playing his third year for the Orange, while Miller is a one-stripe letterman.

At guards will be the 228-pound giant, Gil Bergerson, on the left side with Jack Cox, 185, as his running mate. Both are seeing their last service in Oregon State uniforms.

Buck Hammer, the sensational captain of the Beavers, will start his final game in his old job at center. Hammer is a great performer on both offense and defense, and is Oregon State's outstanding candidate for mythical honors. He tips the beam at an even 200 pounds.

In the backfield will be Biancone, the great running quarterback. He weighs only 155 pounds, but is a master at running back kicks and is a deceptive ball-carrier.

Harold Joslin, 186, and Hal Moe, 183, will hold down the halfback assignments. Moe saw plenty of action last season as a regular. Joslin was one of the Rook stars last year.

Frank Little, the 200-pound driving fullback, completes the famous "powerhouse" backfield. Little is a one-stripe winner.

France's Prosperity Result Of Shrewdness and Caution

Because of the shrewdness of the French people, France is today practically better off than any other country in the world, according to Dr. J. R. Wetherbee, a local practicing physician, who recently returned from an extended trip to Vienna, Paris, and other cities of Europe.

The Frenchmen, Dr. Wetherbee said, have never learned to buy what they cannot afford and "call the rest prosperity," nor have they been tempted by installment buying "to swim beyond their financial depth."

While in France, the former head of the department of physical education of the University had the opportunity to observe how the French people live. Like others who have commented on the comparative prosperity in that country, he explained that the Frenchman is content to live with simple pleasures. He may build a house on credit, but he isn't likely to mortgage his future for a radio under the delusion that he is thereby raising his standard of living.

"Half of the people of France live on the soil, and this half of the people have remained prosperous when the farmers everywhere else were in distress," Dr. Wetherbee pointed out. "This is principally because the peasant class has been protected rather than exploited, and because France is not dependent to any great extent upon foreign markets to rid her of huge surpluses of foodstuffs."

Dr. Wetherbee is loud in his praise of the Colonial exposition in Paris. He visited the booths of the United States and her possessions and, according to him, the most notable piece of American exhibit is a reproduction of Mt. Vernon. All the colonies of France in Africa and Asia participated. People of different races from these territories journeyed to the French capital to attend the exposition, thinking of themselves not as mere visiting colonials, but as real Frenchmen.

Dr. Wetherbee is very much impressed with the success of France as a colonizer. "France," he said, "is a successful colonizing country because the Frenchmen who went to the colonies tilled the soil and did not go there as colonial officers whose aim is to exploit the natives. Another thing is that the French, unlike other people, have willingly mixed with the colored races. The offspring of these unions, as they grow up, think of themselves as nothing else but Frenchmen. Their loyalty to the French government is unquestionable and the colonies have always contributed valiant men to the French army."
