Novels by Nancy A. Ross Accepted by Publishers

Journalism Graduate To Have Book Appear This Month

The list of alumni who have succeeded in placing their literary efforts on the market was augmented when word was received that two manuscripts of Nancy Wilson Ross, graduate in the school of journalism with a B.A. degree in 1924, have been accepted for publication by the Liveright publishers.

Mrs. Ross sent in her novels in July before she and her husband sailed for Germany, where Mr. Ross is studying architecture at Deffan, the center of all of Germany's modern and ultra-modern architecture.

One of Mrs. Ross's novels, "Friday to Monday," is to be published this month, and the other some time during the coming spring. She has contracted with the Liveright publishers to write three more books for them, and, according to a letter received by Mrs. Eric W. Allen, she is not only studying German, while living in Germany, but also working on the manuscripts.

Mrs. Ross, formerly Nancy Wilson, was an active member of Pot and Quill, local creative writing honorary, while she was on the campus. She also is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, women's national journalism honorary, and was a member of the social sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma. Her home before her marriage was at Olympia, Washington.

FOUR IN INFIRMARY
Rainy weather seems to agree with Oregon students if the number confined in the infirmary is any indication. There are only four students there at present, and none of these were new this weekend. The students are: Carl Webb, Benton Newman, Robert Tugman, and Clara Maertens.

H. Noble Explains Why U.S. Interests Parallel Chinese

China as 'Unit' in Favor of American Commercial Enterprises

Japan and the United States have each a distinct interest in Manchuria. The Japanese have gone to that Chinese territory for security; the American government, although not desiring the territory, wants the trade with that part of China. Dr. Harold J. Noble, of the history department said last night in a lecture in the Music auditorium given under the auspices of the International House.

Professor Noble explained that Japan's action in Manchuria is based on a desire for security. "The Japanese people," he said, "are confronted with an economic problem—how to take care of her 62,000,000 people, a population which is steadily increasing. She has resorted to two things, namely, to force her citizens to migrate to other lands, and industrialization. In the latter course, the Nipponese government has succeeded."

Doctor Noble pointed out how Japan has become one of the greatest industrial nations of the world. "As such," he said, "the Japanese need raw materials, iron, fuel, and foodstuffs. They can get these from Manchuria handily and cheaply, and they are of the better kind than what could be secured from elsewhere. So Japan wants security of these, and as conditions in Manchuria have made her feel that extension of her political boundary is necessary, there went and still goes the Japanese army."

As an explanation of the American interest in Manchuria, as shown by the note sent by the United States government to Japan invoking the nine-power treaty and other treaties guaranteeing Chinese sovereignty and territorial integrity, Professor Noble stated: "American trade in China will profit more if that country remains as a unit than if portions of it are absorbed by any other power, especially when that nation is a commercial rival. For this reason the American stand coincides with the Chinese self-interest."

Colleges' Part in Promoting Peace Is Essay Subject

History Society Sponsoring Competition Among U. S. Schools

On the subject of "How Can the Colleges Promote World Peace?" the New History society is sponsoring a prize competition on world peace, which is open to undergraduates and students from all the colleges and universities of the United States.

Purpose of the contest is self-explanatory in the title of the subject, and "Realizing the hunger of humanity for peace; knowing of the waste of capital, resources, genius and life on war and preparations for war; and looking to the younger generation in the colleges and universities to develop international fellowship by means of which the future Society of Nations may work peacefully for the advancement of all the people," is the lengthy reason for the promotion of this nation-wide contest.

Three hundred dollars is the award for first judged prize in the contest, winners of which will be announced May 23, 1932. Second prize is $200, and third $100.

Judges Named
Submission of manuscripts is set from January 5 until midnight, April 5. Papers are not to contain more than 1200 words, and to be of original content, not having been read before any societies or published in any newspapers, magazines or books.

The papers will be judged according to the vision of the writers and the feasibility of the plans. They will be judged by a committee composed of: Devere Allen, associate editor of the Nation; Dr. John Dewey, Columbia university; William Floyd, editor of the Arbitrator; James G. McDonald, chairman of Foreign Policy association; Kirby Page, editor of World Tomorrow; Tucker P. Smith, secretary of the committee on Militarism in Education; and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Free Synagogue.

All manuscripts should be addressed to the New History Society, World Peace Committee, 132 East 65th Street, New York, N. Y.

I LIKED THEM FROM THE FIRST

The first Chesterfield I smoked won me over. Two things make Chesterfield different. They're milder. They taste better. That's why more and more smokers are turning to Chesterfield every day.

No purer, better-tasting cigarette can be made. Only mild, ripe, sweet-tasting tobaccos are used. And the purest cigarette paper. You'll find every Chesterfield smooth and cool—every Chesterfield good. They're made to be good! They Satisfy!
