Lacey, Idaho guard, was outstanding for the winners. Herman, forward, scored 10 points to take high point honors. Little Pete Wicks' spectacular playing seemed to put fire into the Vandal team. During the final minutes of the game Idaho stalled so much that Oregon was forced to foul to get the ball away.

Grid Enthusiasts Given Chance To See Football Epic

Athletic Heads Are Invited To Attend Colonial Presentation

Considerable interest was aroused on the campus yesterday by the announcement that action pictures of the Notre Dame-Southern California football classic would be shown at the Colonial theatre, starting Thursday. The feature will come here direct from Portland, where it played to capacity houses every day.

In addition to the football team, the complete athletic staff of the University has been invited to see the gridiron epic as the guests of the management. This includes Professor H. C. Howe, faculty representative in the Pacific coast conference; Hugh E. Rosson, graduate manager; Ronald H. Robnett and Tom Stoddard, assistant football managers, and Samuel H. Wilderman, director of athletic publicity.

Those who saw the show in Portland report that the intensity of the action aroused even the blasé theatre audiences to cheers. Because the Trojans, as representatives of the far west, conquered, the feature has proved unusually popular on the Pacific coast. If its success continues, it may be followed by a similar full-length feature on the Southern California-Tulane battle in the Rose Bowl, from which the warriors of Troy emerged victorious, 21 to 12.

Pendell Presents First Lecture of Series for Term

Economist Stresses Broad Study of Business In Free Address

A business study must be as broad as business, not clipped off where industry ends, is the thread at the bottom of "Institutionalism, a New Economics," as presented by Elmer Pendell, associate professor of economics, in a lecture last night.

This economic topic was the first of a series of lectures sponsored by the committee on Free Intellectual Activities; five others are to follow this term.

Where the industrial phase of economics ends, there is another phase that also must be considered, in the minds of the new institutionalists. "Conflict of interests" is the new phase, according to Pendell.

Marginal relationships and theories, the unifying element of classical and neo-classical economics, do not satisfy explanations for variances, due to human and welfare pressure, he explained.

Gain without service rendered, and the loss to others in problems such as child labor and timber conservation are "conflicts of interests" unaccounted for in the old economics, the new institutionalists maintain.

The overlapping of social sciences in the study of economic forces "creates a single problem demanding the consideration of all," Pendell stated. "There is a goal of the rational directing of these otherwise blind sociological forces in this new economics, in a welfare sense."

An open forum concluded the lecture last night.

Dual Meet With Salem High Swim Squad Announced

Freshman Natators To Vie On February 6 in Newly Slated Contest

Addition of another dual meet to the schedule of the freshman swimming team was announced by Jack Hewitt, coach of the natators, the newly slated contest making a total of three for the Duckling aquatic team.

This competition will feature the Salem high school swimming aggregation and will be held Saturday, February 6, at the women's pool at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Immediately after the meet is over, the teams will do battle in a water polo game in the men's pool.

Hewitt anticipates a defeat in this meet because the Salem team is considered as being especially strong. It trounced the Eugene high mermen badly last week.

The team is beset with a multitude of woes in the form of various ailments of the members of the yearling squad. Willie Paul, Jack Mulder, Warren Gill, and Jean Privat, on whom Hewitt was depending to capture a lion's share of the counters in the various meets, are all down with various and sundry illnesses and will probably not be able to compete in the Salem high meet.

The swimming coach is trying to line up other meets for his varsity and freshman squads. They both will vie with the Beavers on a home-and-home basis, tangling with the Orangemen on February 13 at Corvallis and on February 27 here.

Elephants Once Roamed Near City, Says Hodge

Valley Had Much More Snow in Ages Past, Geologist Says

"Not many thousand years ago shaggy haired elephants wandered in the snow in the vicinity of Eugene," says Dr. Edwin T. Hodge, professor of economic geology. The geologist informs us that this is known to be true because the teeth and bones which have been picked up in the Willamette valley in the past. "Only the other day some one brought in a tooth found just a few miles south of Eugene," he declared.

According to Dr. Hodge, these elephants had long shaggy hair. This was probably worn to keep off the rain and snow instead of for warmth. At that time there was three or four times as much snow as at the present time, believes Dr. Hodge. However, at the same time with all the increased amount of snow the average temperature was warmer than it is now. This, he explained, is due to the fact that every time the vapor in the air changes to snow crystals the vapor gives up heat. Hence, with quintillions of crystals being formed, the amount of heat given off was quite great and the temperature was warmer after it had begun to snow than before.

Visiting Official To Speak Before YW Cabinet Today

Tonight Marcia Seeber, visiting Y. W. C. A. secretary, will be the guest of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet at a meeting at 7:30 in the bungalow.

Miss Seeber will open the discussion with a description of what happens when one is actually in the Y. W. C. A., locally, nationally, and internationally.

There will also be a continuation of the interpretation from an entirely different viewpoint, as well as discussion of the possibility of a national secretary coming to this campus. Every cabinet member is expected to be present.

Professor Julian S. Huxley, British scientist, fears that birth control, carried to the ultimate degree, will depopulate the world. He sees a need for control of the numbers of human beings in both directions, not only in the direction of too many.

EMERALD of The... AIR

"Scientific Research in the University Laboratories" will be the subject which Jim Brooke will discuss when he speaks during today's Emerald of the Air period over station KORE at 4:15. Research on the University campus has for many years brought to Oregon national and world recognition, this work being continued under numerous grants and also as independent projects. Brooke will discuss in non-technical language this phase of work.

A radio play, directed by Cleta McKennon, will be put on the air during Thursday's Emerald of the Air; and the Oregon Yeomen double quartet will sing Friday.

Phi Delt Tea Hounds Raid Infirmary Drawing Room

One infirmary-detained student will vouch for the place as suitable for social activities, after pressing the infirmary drawing room into service for the serving of tea to the Phi Delt house. This announcement, however, is not a plea for additional patronage, as the infirmary is already nearing capacity.

There were nine students confined Tuesday, and two students, Lionel Lane and Sam Banning, were allowed to leave. The present group is composed of: Louise Webber, Ruth Smith, Jack Mulder, Bob Stevens, Vincent Russell, Courtney Laselle, Paul Sullivan, Lowell Mobley, and Donald Moore.
