

Volleyballists Begin Action On Yesterday

Six Contests Start First Day's Activities

Sigma Chi, Yeomen, Fiji, SPT, Beta and Alpha Upsilon Win

TODAY'S VOLLEYBALL SCHEDULE 4 P. M. Phi Delt vs. Alpha hall. La Casa Filipina vs. Zeta hall. 4:40 P. M. International vs. ATO. Friendly hall vs. Sigma Nu. 5:20 P. M. Phi Psi vs. Kappa Sig. SAE vs. Theta Chi.

The intramural volleyball tournament got under way yesterday, with six teams chalking up victories as a result of the activities of the day.

Sigma Chi, the Yeomen, Fiji, Beta, SPT, and Alpha Upsilon were the victorious aggregations. The caliber of play was better than most of the fans had expected to be shown on the first day.

The Sigma Chi aggregation defeated Sherry Ross hall without much difficulty, 15-3, 15-6. The Yeomen, one of the favorites to cop the title, ran into an unexpectedly stiff resistance which the Omega hall team put up, only to lose out by a score of 15-12, 15-8.

The Beta squad, showing the best quality of play during the day, conquered a disorganized Delt six to emerge victorious, 15-3, 15-10. Phi Gamma Delta trimmed the SPT volleyballists in an uninteresting contest, 15-11, 15-3.

Sigma Pi Tau, after receiving a bad scare from Phi Sig in the first set, ran out the second in easy style for a 16-14, 15-5 victory. The Alpha Upsilon ball-hawks showed their talons to Pi Kap by recording a conquest by a count of 15-3, 15-9.

'Book Value' Has Big Possibilities For Dumb Frosh

PROMINENT among "boners" committed by students in examinations, is the one gleaned by R. W. Breshers, instructor in business administration, from the test papers in constructive accounting.

The question: What is meant by the book value of a share of stock?

The right answer: Book value is the claim a share of stock has against the assets of a business. What the fall guy wrote: Book value is exactly what one makes of it. A person could read something very hurriedly and not get anything out of it while other persons could do the same and get something out of it. One can read so slowly that his mind is some place else and therefore he would get no value from the book.

Maybe he was in the wrong class.

Yeomen and Sherry Ross Win Contests

Victors in Semi-Finals Of Donut Handball Phi Sigs and SPT Victims

In Tournament Frays Yesterday

TODAY'S HANDBALL SCHEDULE 4 P. M. Gamma hall vs. Beta 5 P. M.

The Yeomen and Sherry Ross hall handball squads continued their winning tactics yesterday in the intramural handball tourney to attain a place in the semi-finals of the rivalry. The Yeomen beat the Phi Sigs in two out of three matches, and the hall aggregation presented a similar dose to the Sigma Pi Tau handballists.

The winner of today's match between the Yeomen and the Phi Delt will make certain of a position in the finals of the tournament.

In the Yeomen-Phi Sig matches, Sol Schneider, Yeomen artist, outplayed Sheldon Laurance to record a victory by a count of 21-8, 21-7. Karl Landstrom, Phi Sig star, chalked up the sole victory for his squad when he trounced George Stager, who is without the use of one hand due to an injury, to the tune of a tally of 21-6, 21-4. The unbeatable Yeomen duo, Al Schneider and Paul Hughes nonchalantly disposed of Frank Harrow and Clarence Nicholas, 21-1, 21-4.

In the Sherry Ross-Sigma Pi Tau tilts, Al Richen, demon, re-haired player of the hall squad, took a hard-fought match from Phil Cogswell, 21-9, 9-21, 21-17. Faulkner Short, SPT ace, succeeded in winning a lone victory for his team by overcoming Tom Thompson by a score of 21-9, 22-20. The Sherry Ross doubles pair, Bill Klingner and Jim Dezendorf, won from Louis Pista and Otto Frohn-meyer, 21-18, 21-11.

Six New Men Wearing Journalism Honorary Pin

Sigma Delta Chi Initiates Group At Delta Honorary

Six men were initiated into Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity, at the men's lounge of Gerlinger hall Sunday morning at 9:30. The new members of the organization are Sterling Green, Oscar Munger, Jay Sehorn, Ed Goodnough, Jack Bel-linger, and Jack Bauer.

A breakfast at the Anchorage followed the initiation ceremonies. Speakers at this affair were Henry N. Fowler, associate editor of the Bend Bulletin, and Hal E. Hoss, secretary of state. Mr. Fowler was editor of the Emerald in 1913-14.

Oregon Issues Last Exhortation To House Officials

TODAY at 12:40 on the east side of Condon hall, fraternity house managers and members of the interfraternity council will be given a last opportunity to have pictures taken for the Oregonian.

Twice before this, efforts been made to have these pictures taken, but in spite of announcements in the Emerald and telephone calls to each fraternity only a few were present at the announced time and place.

The photographer refuses to make any more trips to the campus; consequently it is imperative that every fraternity house manager and every member of the interfraternity council be on hand today at noon.

GLEEMEN'S CONCERT IS ENJOYED BY MANY

written for Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C-sharp Minor," lost nothing in the impressiveness it has as a piano solo. As with the piano, it is one of those numbers which can be a bit ludicrous if not interpreted faultlessly. The Gleemen were faultless.

Hal Young drew on his operatic arsenal for the first two solos, "Le Reve," from Massenet's "Manon," and an aria from Puccini's "La Boheme" were splendid medium for his clear rich tenor, which combines a rare quality of vibrant warmth and depth with extreme range.

Earl Pallett's basso-profundo is impressive under any circumstances, but when juxtaposed with Hal Young's tenor it was overpowering. John Stark Evans' adaptation of "Ol' Black Joe" seemed made for him, and 2000 pairs of hands would not be denied an encore.

To those who have followed George Bishop's progress during the past two years, his performance as the baritone soloist in "Ol' Man River" was a triumph. Faultlessly supported by the chorus in Evans' adaptation of the southern song, he showed vocal power and maturity beyond his years. Bishop faced stiff competition in the solo field Sunday, and was not found wanting.

In his second group Hal Young presented three songs of similar type, but he gave each an interpretation that set it apart. Bracco's "Serenata" he sang with power and feeling that would surely have delighted Caruso, who wrote the lyric. Clay's ever-popular "Songs of Araby" he sang with a wistful beauty that held the crowd hushed, and climaxed the group with Lehmann's "Ah, Moon of My Delight." In all three songs he showed himself to be a master of modulation and delicate phrasing. The emotional qualities of his interpretation he never allowed to lapse into mere sentimentality.

Young's two encores were "Tallyho" and Kremer's "Last Hour." Power and martial vigor marked the last group by the chorus. The 75 voices gave the war-time march ballad, "The Americans Come" a treatment capable of sending a patriotic thrill through even a war-debt maniac. Schumann's score for Heinrich's Heine's "Two Grenadiers" was given with full dramatic power. Between the two was sandwiched Reichardt's "When the Roses Bloom," in which perfect vocal blending heightened the work's delicate effects in tone and expression.

John Stark Evans arranged the beautiful "Serenade" from Romberg's "Student Prince" for Hal Young with chorus accompaniment. It was an effective close to a successful program, and no one left his seat until it had been repeated.

Evans' direction was impressive. One never forgot his presence and his unifying, controlling power, but he made no attempt to dominate the picture.

New Shelf at Library Will Exhibit Printing Samples

A shelf is being set aside at the library on which will be exhibited examples of fine printing published by many internationally known presses. Thirteen or more presses are represented, and some of the finest works to come from these are being shown. Among these are works from the Chiswick Press, William Morris and the Kelmscott Press, Elbert Hubbard and the Roycroft press, Updyke and the Merrymount, John Henry Nash press, and the Nonesuch press.

Another exhibit that is open to students who have enough interest to ask about it is a collection of autographed books. Such famous names as John Masefield, George K. Chesterton, A. A. Milne, Walter De La Mare, Joseph Conrad, Christopher Morley, and Sara Teasdale are to be found inscribed in books by those authors.

Shack Shysters Brave Floods in Giant Holocaust

THE campus saying, "Got your boots on?" proved applicable in the journalism shack yesterday.

With heavy rains blocking drain pipes, excess water backed up in the pipes to cause a miniature flood in the main hall of the shack. Students coming to afternoon classes were forced to step carefully and swish their way slowly down the hall. This "flood" was the second this term in the shack.

Y Ping-Pong Tournament Postponed For One Week

Tables Remodeled To Conform to International Rules

The all-campus ping-pong tournament sponsored by the University Y. M. C. A. has been postponed one week, Don Eva, chairman, announced yesterday.

Two tables have been remodeled according to the international ping-pong rules. They conform to these rules in size, height, and color. Nets were placed last night and men may practice on them this week in preparation for the contest for the Co-op silver trophy.

The entrance fee of 25 cents has been abolished by the committee, and the Y. M. C. A. will meet the cost of repairing the tables. Registration will be open until the latter part of this week, when drawings will be made. First round matches will start early next week, Eva said.

Twenty men have signed up so far. The last names added to the list are Bob Street, Emilio Ocampo, Sheldon Lawrence, and Pedro Zaragosa.

Eugene Eagle Scout Club To Join Alpha Phi Omega

The local Eagle Scout club, which was organized last year among the University students and Eugene scouts of this rank, will affiliate with Alpha Phi Omega, national honorary scouting fraternity, it was announced by H. B. Sallee, district scout executive. National headquarters of the fraternity are in Kansas City. Full details of the affiliation were received last week from the headquarters by the local scout office.

The purposes of the honorary are:

- 1. To aid freshmen in the university who have been scouts to take their proper place on the campus.
2. To aid the local council in troop leadership.
3. To help in building a program of the national fraternity.

Emery Hyde Makes Stop In Shanghai on Voyage

A report has been received by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Hyde that their son, Emery Hyde, former drum major of University band and sophomore in business administration, has landed in Shanghai, China, January 17, aboard the steamship Oregon.

Hyde dropped school at the close of the fall term to make the Oriental trip. He spent 28 days en route to China and his next stop will be Russia.

Bond's Class To Inspect S. P. Railroad Yards Today

In conjunction with the investigation of modern methods in machinery, the class in manufacturing under Jesse H. Bond, professor in business administration will visit the Southern Pacific railroad yards this afternoon.

The class will devote particular attention to the machine shops and the process of creosoting and preserving railroads.

This visit is the first in a series of trips to Lane county's manufacturing centers as proposed by Professor Bond.

LIBE BOOKS REBOUND

A number of bound magazines and several books whose covers were in need of repair were returned to the University library from the bindery yesterday. Among the magazines were, "Theater Arts Monthly" for 1931, "Theater" for 1930, and first four months of 1931, and "Asia" for 1931.

KUNZ BACK FROM EAST

Dr. H. A. Kunz, assistant professor of chemistry, returned Sunday from Leavenworth, Kansas, where he was called by the death of his father. Dr. Kunz was gone about ten days.

Coed Calls Bluff of Phoney Campus Magazine Salesmen

"Want to help a poor boy through college, lady? Buy a magazine subscription!" (And it's a good racket, only you don't want to try it on a college campus.)

Three "gentlemen from Texas" discovered that to their dismay this afternoon when they attempted to work the Oregon campus for a good thing and were themselves taken for a ride by suspicious students.

Arrayed alike, according to the latest approved style in college togs as set forth by the trench-coated cartoons in "College Humor," these three boys "on the know" set to work accosting the fair co-ed as she journeyed back and forth between classes. "Subscribe to the sweetest magazine in the world," they pleaded, "only four dollars! It'll mean a scholarship to us."

The gag worked for a while... My how the money rolled in. Then a wise co-ed came along.

She surveyed the soliciting crew coolly. "So you're from Texas. That's the land of the Lone Star, isn't it?" she asked. "Sure, and we're mighty anxious to be seeing the Lone Star again, so won't you subscribe to a magazine and help us along?"

"Well, since you're so anxious, maybe I will," said the co-ed. "Wait here a minute."

Disappearing into the Administration building, she telephoned the police. "Three men out here are just craving to see a lone star," she told the chief, "so won't you put on your badge and give them a break?"

"Sure, we'll have 'em come right down to the Star-gazers Resort!" Once confronted with the sign of the Lone Star the "Texas Rangers" showed no desire to linger in the vicinity, and didn't argue when the chief admonished them to move on—as far away as possible.
