Two volleyball matches, one a complete rout and the other a thriller, featured play yesterday in the intramural tournament. The Yeomen and Gamma hall participated in the landslide contest, which the independent squad took by the amazing score of 15-1, 15-2. The hard-fought fray found the Pi Kap and Zeta hall volleyballists battling mightily and the score bobbing back and forth, with the Pi Kaps lasting long enough to barely eke out a conquest over the hall aggregation, 15-9, 10-15, 15-13.

The Phi Delt, Betas, Fijis, and Sherry Ross hall sixes were the other teams to dent the win column, in a wide variety of types of playing. Some of the games were loosely played, while others were interesting battles.

Phi Delta Theta gave the Sigma hall jumpers a lesson on how to play the game of volleyball in an indifferent manner but sufficiently good to enable a team to take a victory, by a score of 15-2, 15-4. The Betas were without opponents when the Sigma Alpha Mu six failed to put in an appearance, with the result that the mill racers were presented with an easy conquest.

SMITH GIVES TRACES OF PSYCHOLOGICAL WORKS

"The advantages of the psychological novel over the screen? It can appeal to senses other than the eye, and it can give more sustained treatment than the screen. We can also re-read the record at leisure and can take it in more connectedly, building up as we go an organic mass of experience very different from the succession of fleeting images on the screen."

After giving a brief review of the background of the psychological novel in the works of the earliest writers, Mr. Smith gave brief accounts of the works of the important psychological novelists, summing up the methods of integrating character and plot as follows:
"Stendhal added a supplementary or supporting action, an analytic account of the inward; this he ran parallel with the outer action, orchestrating it and reinforcing it. This may be called the 'parallel solution.'

"Dostoevsky, Couperus, and Schnitzler move the action bodily into the mind, narrating the inward drama with the same clarity and intensity as the objective novelist had retained purely external action. They translate action to the mental plane.
"James introduced, and Proust adopted, a central character, a kind of lighthouse character, who was at once the point of origin of the novel, and a kind of mirror in which all the action was reflected. The mind of the central character becomes the theatre of action; the 'bloes' or 'scenes' of his memory become the 'tuff' of the novel.
"Joyce and his followers have turned the mind inside out; using the stream of consciousness, they show the inward objectively or dramatically. This is almost exactly opposite from the two latter groups, where the action is shifted within the mind. Here the mind is treated as caught in action; thought and feeling are made as public as a moving picture."

The lists of psychological novels furnished by the Co-op were misplaced, so could not be distributed last night. They were found late last night and may be obtained by calling at the Co-op, according to Dr. C. V. Boyer, head of the English department, who introduced Mr. Smith.

Sherry Ross vs. Yeomen. Championship match.
The Sherry Ross hall handball team captured a place in the finals of the tournament yesterday by beating the Beta squad, two matches to none. They will play the Yeomen today for the title of intramural handball champion.

Tom Thompson, Sherry Ross stalwart, defeated Bill Barendrick in one of the singles matches, but had to fight hard to pull a victory out of the fire when the Beta player almost took the second set. The score was 21-4, 22-20. The dorm doubles duo, Jim Dezenoff and Bill Klinger, added another win to their long string of con-juncts by overcoming the Beta tandem team, Orv Bailey and Ken Scates, by a tally of 21-13, 21-16.

The other singles match was discontinued after the results of the match became known. The contestants, Al Richen of the hall and Dave Epps, were deadlocked with one set apiece, but they decided to stop their battle. The Sherry Ross handballist had taken the opening set, 21-4, but Epps retaliated by winning the second by a score of 21-5.

HALL SAYS COLLEGE COSTS NOT TOO HIGH

their students to institutions of higher education than Oregon. Yet, in direct contradiction to these figures is the fact that Oregon was 22nd in the percentage of wealth expended on institutions of higher education.

University Supports Enterprises
"The University of Oregon is supporting such worthwhile enterprises as the Doernbecher hospital in Portland. Do we want these to be discontinued? Certainly nobody who has seen Dr. Dillehant working to mend the bones of countless crippled waifs could be a party to a movement to halt such work as that.

"We realize that in these hard times we are expected to make economies, and we are making every effort to put them into effect, but we must be given a reasonable allotment with which to run our institutions. At present the University of Oregon, with its elaborate program of research and other experiments, is given less money per student than many high schools. Such a situation should be remedied. I cannot believe that the people of Oregon want their children to suffer because of the lack of proper education facilities."

Callison's Squad To Play Practice Tilts This Week

Freshmen To Scrimmage in Preparation for Rook Game, Feb. 5

With no scheduled games until February 5, "Prink" Callison has been arranging practice tilts to test the mettle of his freshman hoop squad. Today at 4 o'clock the yearlings will clash with the St. Mary's prep five in an unofficial contest at McArthur court. The game will be in the form of a scrimmage, aimed to give the players of both teams practice in competition.

Other contests of this nature are tentative for practice sessions during the remainder of the week, but no definite arrangements have been made.

On the night of February 5, the frosh will meet the O. S. C. rooks on the home floor in the initial game of the season between the two ancient rivals. The tilt will be the first of a four game series between the freshmen of the University and the State College for hoop honors this year.

The rooks, after taking two trouncings from the frosh in football last fall, are determined to halt the winning streak of the Oregon freshmen.
Sylvan Campf, captain and stellar forward on the frosh squad, severely injured his hand in chemical laboratory Tuesday and may be out of the starting line-up for some time. Ralph Terjeson, guard, has been shifted to forward to fill in the vacancy, and Bill Berg is playing in Terjeson's former position. The loss of Campf will handicap the frosh considerably. He was a good floor general and leads the squad in point scoring.
