

Dinners Provide Many Queries on Etiquette at Table

Sponsors of Question Box Report Good Business For Past Week

Fraternity and sorority exchange dinners, now in full swing, evidently are fertile fields for etiquette questions. During the past week the majority of queries slipped into the College Side question box have been concerned with table etiquette.

Phi Theta Upsilon and Skull and Daggers, sponsoring the question box in connection with the "Oregon Courtesy Book," select these as samples:

1. On which side of the boy should the girl sit when she is a guest at his house for dinner?
2. With which hand should you pick up the fork?
3. With which hand should you receive and pass dishes at the table?
4. Is it proper to tip your soup bowl?
5. Is it all right to ridicule a fellow at the table when there are guests?
6. Is it correct to phone invitations to campus teas?

Smith To Broadcast Talk Over Radio Station KORE

Warren D. Smith, professor of geology, will give two talks over radio station KORE Monday and Tuesday nights at 6:30, in connection with Sir Hubert Wilkins' visit and lecture at the Igloo on February 3.

On Monday night Professor Smith will speak on the polar expedition in general. On Tuesday night his talk will be on Sir Hubert Wilkins' work in the exploration field.

FRENCH COMEDY WILL BE SCREENED TODAY

(Continued from Page One) be produced since the advent of the talkies. So far, it has always been a rather serious handicap to attend a showing of foreign language film without understanding at least some of it, even though the action might be simple and easy to follow.

ADAMS AWAY ON TRIP Max Adams, University pastor, and Mrs. Adams enjoyed the only two good sunny days, Sunday and Monday, that Newport has had for the last six weeks.

TALKIE TOPICS

Rex—"Ex Bad Boy," with Robert Armstrong. Showing today and Friday.

Colonial—"The Great Lover" and "Everything's Rosie." Showing till Thursday.

Hellig—"High Pressure," starring William Powell. Showing till Friday.

McDonald—"Around the World in Eighty Minutes," with Douglas Fairbanks. Showing for the last time today.

By RALPH MASON Hellig

It is a new William Powell that is appearing at the Hellig in "High Pressure," showing for the last time today. If not new, he is at least changed; instead of the usual very slow moving man, he seems to have been bitten by the High Pressure bug, and how things do fly! As a promoter of a synthetic rubber scheme Powell has little time to devote to Evelyn Brent, who has been left in the lurch on many previous occasions. He does, however, manage to get a kiss in now and then.

One is reminded of Mahatma Gandhi when Powell sits cross-legged in his P. J.'s on a training table, and again of one of Amos and Andy's "pep" talks when he addresses a salesman's meeting.

The action takes place in one of those spiffy ultra-modern business offices with futuristic furniture and gorgeous secretaries.

By ROY SHEEDY McDonald

Mr. Douglas Fairbanks sped around the world about a year ago, stopping only occasionally to go hunting, play golf, or meet some Oriental potentate. He took with him a Hollywood director, Victor Fleming, and two cameramen so that by pointing a camera at the most interesting things they saw, a movie has been born, "Around the World in 80 Minutes." Thus Mr. Fairbanks not only saw the world, but reaps a small fortune to boot.

The picture offers some entertaining and (dreaded word) educational values. Many of the shots, practically all of which were taken in Asia, are exceedingly interesting. Doug provides a running chatter of explanation, interspersing frequent none too clever wisecracks. And of course he is the center of everything, leaping from place to place, shooting leopards, holding putts and so on. A good portion of the picture was taken in Hollywood, and it takes a sharp eye to tell which is Shanghai and which Los Angeles.
