All girls planning to attend the Leap Year hop are requested to make table reservations as soon as possible with the house representatives.

The dance, which will begin at 9 o'clock at Coconut Grove, is a strictly informal affair with the women playing escorts to the men. Individual House Concession Heads Chosen for Fete

Igloo Will Become Second Jantzen Beach, Says Ann Baum

Representatives of living organizations to handle booths in the all-campus carnival were chosen last night by Muriel Kolster and Myrtle McDaniels as the first step in preparing for the big fun fest scheduled for April 9.

The carnival, which is backed by the Associated Women students, is modeled after those given each year upon several of the California camps with great success. The Igloo will be converted into a second "Jantzen Beach," declared Ann Baum, president of the A. W. S., in describing the plans for the event.

Jitney Dances Planned
The edge of the big hall will be lined with booths, selling prizes, telling fortunes, selling food, and every other conceivable feature that is found at a carnival. The center of the floor will be cleared and devoted to jitney dances. Everything will be available upon the presentation of tickets purchased at five cents each from ticket booths. It will be a no-date affair.

Twenty-eight living organizations have been selected to handle the selling at the booths. These groups were chosen because they would not be participating in the canoe fete at the end of spring term and will have the opportunity in this way to work in a campus affair.

Each organization will be responsible for the decoration and sale at their booths, however materials and construction will be furnished them. Prizes will be offered for originality in decoration of booths and for those which sell the most chances.

Budgets Due Monday
Each living organization is required to submit an idea of budget for an approximate amount for operation to Myrtle McDaniels by Monday. Representatives who did not attend the meeting last night are requested to get in touch with her or Muriel Kolster (Continued on Page Two)

Sweeney, Kanzler Are Outstanding In Student Recital

Expression in the violin playing of Peggy Sweeney and individuality in the piano playing of Jane Kanzler were the main features of the student recital given last night at the Music auditorium.

Miss Sweeney's expressive ability was shown clearly in the first number of the program, the Allegro Risoluto from Schutt's Suite for Violin and Piano. Edna Whitmer accompanied her.

Miss Kanzler played the Hess arrangement of the Bach chorale, "Jesus, Joy of Man's Desiring," with finesse, ease, and independence of fingers. Her other two numbers of this group were the "Contra Dance," by Beethoven.

The Dvorak-Kreisler "Slavonic Dance No. 2," played by Miss Sweeney, was written in part for two strings. Remy overtone work was shown in Clever's "Hymn to the Sun," which followed. The group was concluded with the Corelli-Kreisler "Sarabande and Allegretto" which worked up to a fast climax.

Miss Kanzler next played Chopin's "Nocturne in E-major," and "Polonaise in E-flat minor." Miss Sweeney's concluding number was the first movement from Wieniawski's "Concerto in D-minor."

Miss Kanzler's final group consisted of a quiet and extremely melodic "Cradle Song" by Brahms and arranged by Gainger, and Brahms' "Rhapsody in G-minor."

Palmer Speaks To YMCA Group On New Religion

Meeting Is Last of Series Of Study Gatherings This Term

That religion for the new age will not be wholly different from the religion of the past, but will deepen and enrich the values of that religion, was the theme of the talk on "Religion for the New Civilization," given by Rev. Clay E. Palmer last night in the Y. M. C. A. hut.

"We are much farther ahead in the material world than in the spiritual world," he said. "We haven't the moral and spiritual vision to handle the material world that we have in our hands."

Rev. Palmer listed a number of religious values that should be emphasized in the new religion. He did not mean that these qualities were not present in that religion of the past, but that they (Continued on Page Two)

Best of Men Find Courage in Bottles Charley Decides

Do a Good Turn Daily

Anything can happen in Chicago. And when a reformer enters the picture, something's bound to happen.

An old man was staggering along a 17-year-old Boy Scout on his way to church crossed the street to help him. The elderly gentleman pulled a gun from his pocket in approved Chicago fashion and started firing.

Brought to trial, the "gentleman" proved to be the superintendent of the Englewood Law and Order League. He says he was "looking for kidnapers" and had a few drinks in the interim; he agrees he must have been intoxicated.

Anyone in Chicago probably needs a stimulant at times; especially when "hunting kidnapers"—but I always thought reformers had too damn much pep as they are.

Disbarringly,
WEBFOOT CHARLEY.

By THORNTON SHAW

The adoption of a radically new plan of enforcing campus traditions and the naming of Kenneth McKean as basketball manager for the coming season were highlights of the A. S. U. O. executive council meeting yesterday afternoon.

The new plan provides for a court of five members, whose duty shall be to try and mete out punishment to accused violators, and a senior traditions committee of ten members, whose duty shall be to mete out punishment and carry out the orders of the court.

Court To Hold Sessions
Under the new plan the court will hold open sessions each week in one of the campus buildings for the trial and punishment of offenders. The men's gymnasium has been chosen as the tentative meeting place.

The plan was formulated by the student relations committee after a careful study of plans in effect at other schools on the coast.

Letters were written several weeks ago to the University of Idaho, University of California, University of Southern California, Stanford university and Oregon State college in making the study.

Three Objections Made
In opening the discussion on the new plan Brian Mimmough, president of the A. S. U. O. and chairman of the council, cited three objections that had been raised to the old plan of library steps enforcement:

1. That the punishment is given in public.
2. That it was handled by the Order of the O, and in many cases (Continued on Page Four)

Ray Foss Sent to Florence As Precautionary Measure

University Physician Makes Move To Forestall Smallpox Spread

In order to avoid a possible spreading of contagion, Ray Foss, recently stricken with smallpox, was returned to his home in Florence yesterday by Dr. Fred N. Miller, director of the University health service.

It is thought that Foss contracted the disease while on a recent trip to his home. Mrs. Foss is now confined with smallpox and the family is quarantined. Dispensary attendants report that most of the students who had been in contact with Foss have checked in as requested.

This is the first contagious disease reported on the campus this year and health officials are doing their best to prevent its spread.

Liberal Religion Institute To Be Held Next Monday

Next week from March 6 to 13, an institute of liberal religion will be held at the Liberal Community church, 11th avenue and Ferry street. The meetings will be held every evening at 7:30 except Saturday.

"The institute will not be in the nature of a revival, nor will it be a sectarian attempt to turn people from one church to another," Ernest M. Whitesmith, minister of the church, said.

The Reverend Dr. Horace Westwood of Boston will give the talks each evening. Anyone interested is invited to attend.
