Social Events Lag

As Examinations Near

"Closed Week-end," with its ominous hints of late term papers, final examinations and much burning of the midnight mazda, brings to a sudden close the rapid succession of society events that have made the winter term the most active socially of the year.

With only one event, the Gamma Alpha Chi fashion dance, left on the term's schedule, attention is directed to the first affair of spring quarter, the all-campus carnival backed by the Associated Women students, on April 9.

The Igloo will be transformed into a veritable carnival ground, with booths operated by 28 living organizations. The center of the floor will be used for a jitney dance.

Muriel Kolster and Myrtle McDaniels will be in charge.

Fashion Ball to be Big

Social Affair of Week-end

Early indications that the Gamma Alpha Chi fashion dance, leap year ball being presented tonight by the women's advertising honorary, would be one of the most notable affairs of the term were borne out when it was announced yesterday that every ticket had been sold.

The dance will be informal, with women acting as escorts for the men. It will take place at Coconut Grove, starting at 9 o'clock.

The fashion show will be the highlight of the evening, with prominent campus men and women showing latest spring styles provided by Eugene merchants.

The dance will be the only major event of the week-end, no other affairs having been scheduled, in compliance with the University's regular closed week-end rulings.

that the state board's operating budget has been slashed several hundred thousand dollars in the past year. Governor Meier last year vetoed $500,000 of the legislature's $1,181,000 appropriation and the remainder was soon tied up by a referendum measure. A sharp decrease in tax returns and student fees has further reduced the board's funds.

Assessed valuation of property are due to drop, tax experts point out, with the decline of market values of real estate. This will mean a reduced yield from the millage levy.

Economy, therefore, must be the watchword of the board. This had led observers to expect drastic changes in curricula when the board convenes Monday. Following the suggestions of the federal survey on higher education made last year, the question of elimination of course duplication has received a prominent place in the discussions.

LANDSCAPING PLANNED

Informal shrubs are being planted along the back side of old buildings scattered along the railroad tracks to hide them from view and give tourists a better opinion of the campus, according to George York, superintendent of buildings and grounds.

NEVADA DEBATORS WIN TILT WITH CO-ED TEAM

kind that Nevada advertised. It fell short, they maintained, of the standard which they believed was necessary for justified separation. The negative contended that the divorce laws of the state of Nevada were the best possible under existing economic and social conditions.

A new angle on the question which the negative advanced was, that laws for separation could not be condemned because they did not solve the problems of misfit unions. A successful remedy for such instances could deal only with the marriage laws and not the divorce codes.

Keaton at McDonald

If you have been having trouble with that danged cigarette lighter, perhaps Buster Keaton can give you a few tips in the "Passionate Plumber," take one small blowtorch, one large cold chisel—aw' you'd better see for yourself, it's too funny. The whole show is like that, jes' squirrely.

Imagine Keaton as a plumber, in a French girl's bathroom and you have an idea of the possibilities. Jimmy Durante, of the oversized proboscis, also comes in for some hearty laughs from time to time. Irene Purcell, and Polly Moran both receive the attentions of these two characters—the attentions by the way are unusual and varied as the case demands.

It is impossible to say that "The Passionate Plumber," has a legitimate plot, but a few incidents might be stated. Keaton wrecks a car and has to sign his love away to pay for it. He literally becomes an orthodox gigolo, one who makes love to women so that other men will love them better. A duel between Keaton and a jealous suitor proves to be hilariously funny, also another ridiculous note is struck when Buster is seen straining on the leash with a six-inch dog at the other end.

A Newsreel of actual scenes in Shanghai with Japanese soldiers guarding the streets, and shots of the burning buildings and exploding bombs, make an interesting addition to the bill. A detective feature with some very puzzling situations and developments is also shown.

Warner Oland, one of the most versatile character actors of stage and screen, plays the part of a Chinese war lord in Marlene Dietrich's latest starring picture, "Shanghai Express," which is the feature coming to the McDonald Sunday for three days.

Garbo at Colonial

"Mata Hari," starring Greta Garbo and Ramon Novarro is showing at the Colonial for the last time today. "Mata Hari," is a picturesque film depicting incidents in the life of Mata Hari, famous spy who used her charms to lure men to her and to wrest their secrets from them.

"Smart Money," featuring Edward G. Robinson and James Cagney is a tale of a young man who has two ambitions, one to become the king of big city gamblers, and secondly, to be a prince among the ladies. The latter (and rightly, too) must be blondes, but after seeing some of the things they do to him, one wonders why he doesn't give them the big go-by.

As a special feature of its Anniversary Week, which the Colonial is celebrating starting Sunday, birthday gifts, souvenirs and prizes will be presented patrons attending all performances next week. "The White Devil," recent Faculty club film will be given a repeat showing on Sunday at 6 o'clock and again on Monday at 9 o'clock.

All students whose birthdays occur during the week will be admitted as guests of the Colonial, in honor of its Anniversary week.

Vaudeville at State

Four acts of unit vaudeville are presented on the State program in connection with the showing of the current feature, "Rampant Age," for the last time today.

Ivy Walkem, besides giving several novel tap dancing exhibitions is mistress of ceremonies for the vaudeville acts.

Baxter at Rex

Warner Baxter, and Edmund Lowe are featured in "The Cisco Kid," which is showing at the Rex for today only.

"Street Scene," the film adaptation of the Elmer Rice prize play, which King Vidor directed for Samuel Goldwyn, is the first picture in the history of the movies in which only a single setting is used. The picture comes to the Rex Sunday for a two-day run. The complete action of the play, as written by Mr. Rice, occurs in a New York street and in the production of the picture the cameras never once left the block.
