Shoulder Arms

WEDNESDAY classes will continue to be liberally sprinkled with khaki. Hopes that underclassmen of future years would not be compelled to don the infamous "monkey suits" were doomed to disappointment Monday when the state board of higher education voted to continue military training on a compulsory basis.

"Public pressure" proved too much for the committee that had previously recommended that military courses be made optional, and the pleas of preachers, pacifists and professors will go unheeded. B. F. Irvine, member of the committee, in announcing the withdrawal of the original resolution, said he was convinced there was a "strong public sentiment for continuation of compulsory military training." At earlier committee meetings the military enthusiasts outweighed the peace-lovers, and from all parts of the states "patriotic" organizations voiced their protests against the proposed change.

The general change of heart was evidenced in F. E. Callister's statement: "I believe that the training contributes to the physical well-being of the young men who receive it, that the military training they receive is of great value to the nation, that the discipline is good for the students themselves, and that such training does not make militarists of anyone taking it." With all of which we are inclined to gently disagree.

But the board agreed to eliminate the granting of degrees in military science. We are at a loss as to how to reconcile this action with the retention of compulsory military training, so we presume it is another example of educational compromise—this time a compromise with principle.

But after all, why worry? Compulsory military training on this campus is not quite as compulsory as its name might indicate. If you haven't a yen for military or prefer using the three hours for something else, just pull a hard luck story and you'll be exempted. And it doesn't require a genius to concoct a hard luck story.

Oh! For a Dark Horse

GET SET, folks. Politics are stirring at last. Yup, Bob Hall, who's been going to run for student body president for so long that the official announcement of his candidacy was scarcely news except for the definite line-up of Messrs. Kinney and Bailey on the ticket, is in the field in full force. Oh, and there are others running on the ticket, too. A couple of attractive co-eds, and an independent man to drag in the dorm vote, will be named soon. So far they've been held off to get a little more publicity.

The political pot is boiling again, but the only thing needed now is a little opposition to make the campaign interesting. Sit in on some political bull-sessions at the Side, talk to the boys "in on the know" along nicotine row—all that is to be heard is the lament: "Let's have some competition to make this election worth-while."

Now, Mr. Hall, we believe that you and the other young men and women on your side of the political fence are worthy aspirants for A. S. U. O. positions. You would make capable student leaders, and have been outstanding in campus activities. But, Mr. Hall and co., we, too, think you should have a little competition to keep this old spring term up to snuff. Just a little good-natured fun all around, and maybe you could win the old election after all.

Oregon Spirit is on the decline, sad-faced observers of campus events say. One thing that would put it on the up-grade again would be a little pepper in this year's election campaign. Our kingdom for a horse, preferably a dark one!

THE Corridor

By V. H. Hall

I hesitate to discuss the subject of Love and Marriage. In fact I flatly refuse. Individuals who demand information on such a question usually look to authorities. I, obviously, am no authority.

Yet, at the request of several persons who have not taken the time to check through volumes of hidden advice, I have selected a few, very few, words of several great masters. These, if they prove sufficiently enlightening, will provide definite and excellent clues to more elaborate advice.

I have given Balzac first place in my list which is necessarily brief because of my limited space. He deserves it, if for no other reason than his limitless flow of words on this subject. He says:

"In married life, the moment when two hearts come to understand each other is sudden as a flash of lightning, and never returns, when once it is passed."

"We do not attach ourselves permanently to any possessions excepting in proportion to the trouble, toil, and longing which they have cost us."

"Man goes from aversion to love; but if he has begun by loving, and afterwards comes to feel aversion, he never returns to love."

"The more a man judges the less he loves."

Now Cervantes is less prolific in his advice and gives us only a hint or two in his "Don Quixote." To quote:

"True love brooks no division, and must needs be voluntary, and not enforced."

"Honor and virtue are the ornaments of the soul, without which the fairest body is not to be esteemed such."

Pascal, who wanders throughout a complete essay on love, says:

"When a man is fastidious in any quality of his mind, he is so in love."

"I am of the opinion of him who said that in love one forgets his fortune, his relatives, and his friends...

"It is not an effect of custom, it is an obligation of nature, that men make the advances to gain the attachment of women."

In John Gay's "Beggars' Opera," Peachum, who is much vexed because of his daughter's desire to wed, says:

"Do you suppose that your mother and I would have lived comfortably so long together if ever we had been married? Baggage!"

Accounting Honorary Fetes New Initiates

Five candidates were honored Sunday evening at a formal initiation banquet at the Eugene hotel by Beta Alpha Psi, national accounting honorary fraternity. President Ernest Alne presided.

The initiates are George Blodgett, John Goplerud, Myrl Lindley, Russell Morgan, and J. Riley Pittinger. Members of the faculty of the school of business administration also attended.

The Yeomen Chanticleers quartet sang during the meal. Dean David E. Faville spoke on business conditions in China and Japan, reinforced with sidelights of personal observations of especial interest to the accountants present.

Other officers of the fraternity are Rolf O. V. Bodding, vice-president, and Addison Smith, secretary-treasurer.

Gerlinger To Be Scene Of Annual Dance Recital

A spring dance recital will be presented April 26 at 8 p. m. in Gerlinger hall under the direction of Marjorie B. Forchmer, assistant professor in women's physical education, accompanied by Edith Grim, junior student in music.

This program, which is an annual affair, will consist of many interpretative dances presented by students including the popular Rebikoff's "Devil Dance" and "Nocturno" by Respighi.

Programs are being sent to members of the faculty and friends of the students who are participating, but anyone who is interested may telephone the office of the women's physical education department, and one will be mailed immediately.

CENT-A-MILE EXCURSION

Excursion fares of approximately one cent a mile will be available between all points in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, and some Montana and British Columbia cities, beginning April 28, according to an announcement issued by the Spokane, Portland and Seattle railway company.

Tickets will be on sale from April 28 to May 1, with a return limit set at May 10. Details and train schedules can be obtained by calling F. S. Appelmann, local agent, phone 140.

FIRST OF JEWETT SPEECH CONTESTS TO BE APRIL 28

If there are 10 or less contestants in this contest there will be two prizes of $25 and $15. If there are 15 contestants a third prize of $10 will be added, and over 15 contestants there will be a fourth prize of $5. Date of the advanced contest for men is set at Thursday, April 28.

Those eligible for the advanced contest for women are as follows: (1) all upperclass women excluding those who won first prize in the most advanced Jewett contest of any previous year, (2) women of sophomore rank and members of the varsity debate squad.

The general subject of this contest will be "Woman's Institution." Contestant will choose any phase of the subject, such as, woman's influence or contributions to society, exercise of power, will or whim to attain ends, etc.

Those eligible for the last two contests are: all freshmen and sophomores in the University, not including those in classes eligible for other contests. The subject of the third contest will be "The New American University." Sub-topics will be posted.

The date of this contest will be Wednesday, May 4.

The subject for the contest for underclass women is "Religion, Morals, and Ethics Since the War," and will be conducted as the contest for underclass men. This contest will be held Thursday, May 5.

Prizes in the last three contests are the same as in the first. Additional information may be secured from the speech division offices.

A Decade Ago

April 20, 1922

Dean John Straub likes shooting, but thinks the guns on the "A" range must be warped.

Students not members of the Eugene country club will have to do their golfing on week days henceforth Saturday and Sunday crowds have been forcing members off the links.

The seats of the bleachers being built to accommodate 1200 of the spectators at the Junior week-end canoe fete are to be made of planed lumber and will be as free from pitch as possible.

Adoption of a six-day schedule, no final examinations, and elimination of one week of Christmas vacation and all of the spring recess are suggested by Dean John Straub in his plan to add eight weeks to the summer vacation, giving self-supporting students more time to earn their expenses and making it possible to add a fourth term so ambitious students could go through the University in three years.

Forty-two new individual study tables for the library are under construction in the University carpenter shop.

A new system of computing house grades has been adopted. Formerly, the total averages of the members of the organization were divided by the number in the house. Now each house will be considered as an individual, with hours of each grade counting instead of the average grade.

The school of business administration has established a reading room for commerce majors in the Commerce building. The room has no connection with the library.

Webster Ruble, business manager of the Emerald, was elected president of the campus Y. M. C. A. in the annual elections yesterday.

AUTO TIRE TREAD BRINGS FIRST BAUM CASE CLUE

(Continued from Page One) the University student received no evident injuries. Back injuries and possible broken bones were feared. More photographs will be taken this morning.

Mrs. Sol Baum, mother of the injured co-ed, and Ted Baum, her brother, drove down from Portland yesterday on receiving word of the accident. Miss Baum is expected to be able to leave the hospital in a week.

The ... LITERARY SIGNPOST

Edited By Roy Sheedy

"I TAKE THEE..." Strange Avenue. By Ethel Kelley. Farrar & Rinehart.

Enid, whom most men had loved for her soul rather than for her physical self, was married to John, an average man, inclined to poor health, but a good lawyer and husband. Alice, strikingly beautiful, vain and selfish, with good intentions but weak character, was wedded to Giles, a poetically inclined young man who was deeply in love with his wife but found himself unable to keep her amused. Enid and Giles, however, were mutually attracted toward each other, while Alice, although in love with Giles, felt affection toward Dick and Halifax, two extremely wealthy young men, and Giles also has become interested in Valeria...

one of whom is in love with two or more others at the same time. The story is well told. The characterizations are admirably drawn, particularly those of the women. The dialogue is sprightly in its sophisticated chaffiness and adds much to the book. When it suits her purpose the author slips into the stream of - unconsciousness method of describing her characters' thought and feeling, especially in the case of gentle and sensitive Enid. The novel is ultra-modern in its theme and construction and makes one hope that Miss Kelley will continue to forsake lighter writing for such significant work as this.

"Sanctuary," William Faulkner's widely discussed story is now appearing in a popular priced Modern Library edition... John Galsworthy is just completing a new novel, following "Mail in Waiting." It is expected to appear in the fall... "Only Yesterday" has been a best-seller in Portland for better than two months—and deserves it.

Mez Has Book Reviews Accepted by Journals

Dr. John R. Mez, professor of economics and political science, has just been notified that five book reviews which he has written have been accepted by the American Economic Review, the official journal of the American Economic Association. The reviews are all of books concerning economics and international relations. He has also had two other book reviews accepted by the American Political Science Review.

HAZAM WILL TEACH HERE

Dr. John G. Hazam, until last year assistant professor of history, is returning to the campus for the summer sessions. He will teach courses in history of the middle ages, history of early England, and history of the Muslim world, according to Dr. R. C. Clark, head of the history department.
