

Nobody's Business

By BRUCE HAMBY

AUTHORITIES at the University of Kansas recently gave Bill Hargiss, football mentor, the bounce because of unsatisfactory conditions on the squad. But Arch Ward, sardonic sports editor of the Chicago Tribune, evidently thinks otherwise.

Mr. Ward writes thus about the nasty attack on Hargiss:

"The University of Kansas has ousted Bill Hargiss, because of unsatisfactory conditions on the squad. The unsatisfactory conditions developed after Kansas lost to Oklahoma, 21 to 6.

"Of course I do not believe for an instant that the disappointing showing of the Jayhawkers against one of their leading Big Six rivals had anything to do with the dismissal of Hargiss, because I have read repeatedly that the universities expected coaches to model the lives of young men and that victory after all was unimportant.

"So it must be that the Kansas academic leaders felt that Hargiss was not doing a good job of modeling.

"No doubt there will be some who will entertain the degrading thought that Hargiss was removed for failing to obtain results as measured by victory and defeat. But this is un-American and, of course, will be ridiculed by the right-thinking element."

Mr. Ward goes on to comment that you can't escape the idea that a coach's life is no bed of roses. "Suggestion that he is entitled to more salary than the average instructor invariably brings forth a fierce yelping from educational circles, but have you ever heard of a professor being fired because his boys were out-smarted by a group from a neighboring school in the season's big cerebral test?"

"No professor at Kansas had to send his charges into a stadium before 35,000 persons to demonstrate their knowledge of the underlying causes for the fall of the Roman republic, or to explain why do, dare, dedi, datum takes the date."

Leo Calland, head man at the Moscow grid field, must take great delight in having large numbers of quarterbacks about him. On the Vandal traveling squad are listed four. Evidently Leo likes to have one handy at the end of a game for general hawling-out purposes and with four figures he can't miss finding one.

Heading the parade is Willis Smith, Idaho's "one-man offense," has proven to be the outstanding ball carrier on the Vandal squad this year. Against Montana last week he scored two touchdowns single-handed and ripped through the Grizzly line at leisure. He is playing his second year on Calland's eleven.

Besides Smith there is Cy Geraughty, star of last year's frosh team; George Wilson, two-year veteran and 1930 champion long-distance scorer; and Genio Plastino, a young reserve from the home of the world's largest pulp mill, Camas, Washington.

Genio is the lightest man on the Vandal squad. His weight, as recorded on the official Idaho roster, is 132 pounds. Wilson is the heavyweight of the four, weighing 155. Geraughty and Smith are listed at 153 and 150 respectively.

Jephtha Rixey, Cincinnati Reds' hurler, has been in the major leagues 20 years and has never been in a minor league.

The 40-yard breaststroke race proved to be all Blankenberg's who won from Kirby of the Yeomen. Whittaker, Yeomen, was third.

Blankenberg, second man swimming in the 120 yard relay, got such a big lead over his opponent that his team won this event with apparent ease.

In the 60-yard individual medley Blankenberg sewed up the victory for the Fijis winning from Sears, Yeomen.

Trojan Rooters Ready To Invade Indian Stronghold

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 19.—Palo Alto becomes the football mecca for thousands of University of Southern California students, alumni and followers this weekend as they prepare to back their Trojans against the Indians of Stanford in the Redskins' stadium Saturday. Special trains, boats and planes and hundreds of automobile parties will carry S. C. fans north for the game that may prove to be the Pacific coast football titanic of the season and the deciding battle for the conference championship.

The trek northward will start Thursday night when approximately 36 members of the Trojan varsity squad and the S. C. coaching staff will leave for the game. The Southern California squad will leave the train at San Jose Friday morning and will spend that day resting in the seclusion of the Castlewood Country club. The Trojans will remain at Castlewood until shortly before noon Saturday, when they will be taken by bus to the Stanford stadium.

Beaver Gridmen Drill for Cougar Passing Attack

Washington State To Bring Powerful Team to Corvallis

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, Oct. 18.—Oregon state football team is spending most of its time in final practice sessions before the Washington state game here Saturday in perfecting a pass defense capable of stopping the touted Cougar aerial game. Washington state has a well balanced team with a strong running attack and a flashy passing game.

George Sander, Cougar halfback, has been rated as the best passer and punter on the coast this year. Sander will team with Ollie Arbelbide at the halfback posts and with George Theodoratus, 240 pound fullback, will carry the brunt of the Cougar attack. Theodoratus has made quite a reputation for himself this year as a line plunger. Arbelbide plays half on offense and safety on defense. He broke loose in the California game last week-end and ran back a punt 45-yards for the only Washington state touchdown, clinching the game for the Cougars, 7 to 2.

Line play will probably decide the winner as both teams have good fast backfields. The Washington state line has shown to the best advantage so far this season, holding the University of California attack for four straight downs within the four-yard marker. Dopesters are figuring the Cougars to win by one touchdown due to early season showing of both teams.

The Orangemen are expected to be at their peak for the clash because of a two weeks rest, while the Cougars may hit a slight slump after their hard tussle with California last Saturday. The Beavers will be out to stop Washington State from scoring its fifth straight victory, the Orangemen's last win being in 1927 on Bell field here.

Curly Miller, two-year letterman, will captain the Beavers.

More Scrimmage Order of Schulz For Frosh Squad

Fashion note—yearling gridmen this week will scrimmage, scrimmage, and then scrimmage some more.

To suggest to some galloping guard or elephantine end on the frosh squad that this proposed program is any variation from the usual would be to court disaster, but nevertheless the promise of more and better scrimmages was Coach Schulz's ultimatum to his proteges last night.

The Ducklings worked out on Hayward field in the absence of the varsity, who were practicing on the turf just east of the Igloo, and after a "mild" sort of cross-country workout, they buckled down to serious business and proceeded to tear imaginary rock linemen and backs to pieces.

Tonight will see the last hard workout before the first "little big" game, which is scheduled for tomorrow night over on the rooks' home field.

Dibrell Williams, then a first-year shortstop for the Philadelphia Athletics, set a strikeout record for American league players when he whiffed nine times in the 1921 world's series.

Ducks Frame Of Mind Right For Idaho Tilt

Vandals Are Real Threat to Callison's Men

Twenty-Seven Webfoots To Leave For Moscow Today; Squad Is Crippled

Last Saturday's bewildering defeat has given the Oregon Webfoots a different slant on football which Prink Callison prays they will keep through the remainder of the season. That slant is that any team in the conference, or out of it, is a threat until the timer fires the final shot.

The University of Idaho has not been a great threat to the Webfoots for some years, but the players are not taking next Saturday's encounter lightly.

Two distinct events are responsible for Oregon's fear of the Vandals. First is U. C. L. A.'s sensational 11th hour victory in Portland last week, and the second is the fact that the same Bruin team was able to beat Idaho only 6 to 0.

Nix on the Passes Because two long passes that floated over the heads of Oregon's secondary in the dusk decided the Bruin battle, the Webfoots drilled more than an hour on pass defense today. If the Vandals should overcome Oregon Saturday, Prink Callison is determined they will not do so via the aerial route.

That the lads aren't discouraged in the slightest because of the U. C. L. A. episode was evidenced from the lively, hustling manner in which they went through their paces today. Big Stan Kostka was back at right half and he stepped stylishly as he pounded the second-string line.

Morgan, Mikulak Off Squad Captain Bill Morgan and Mike Mikulak still are crippled so badly that they won't even make the trip to Moscow. Mikulak will accompany Gene Shields when the latter scouts the game between O. S. C. and W. S. C., and Morgan either will go with Jack O'Brien to the Stanford-U. S. C. classic or will accompany Mikulak and Shields to Corvallis.

The Oregon team, 27 strong, will leave here at 4:30 tomorrow. Coaches Callison and Kitzmiller, Colonel Bill Hayward and Manager Robb will go along. The squad will stop at the Washington hotel in Pullman, driving to Moscow the morning of the game.

Mrs. Stanley Hack, wife of the Cubs' third baseman and the former Dorothy Weisel of San Francisco, defeated the No. 1 ranking player at one of Chicago's leading tennis clubs, where she is a member.

The University of Iowa's backfield, hit by ineligibility of two 1932 regulars, will be three-quarters sophomores this fall, according to early indications.

ONE hundred to four hundred pounds is the weight range of the Hamburg high school football squad, Hamburg, Arkansas.

Elton Bryant, 19, tips the beam at an even 400. He is six feet four and has a waist measuring 60 inches. His one ambition is to make the first string and Elmer Smith, coach, says that he has a chance to achieve his ambition. He has a drive and speed unusual for a boy his size.

Joe Gleason, backfield star, is on the other end of the scale. He weighs a fraction over 100 but his spirit and drive have won him a place on the first eleven.

The Kentucky Wildcats expect to bring another giant into the athletic world when basketball season opens this winter. He is Brad Lair, candidate for center position on the basketball squad. He stands six feet ten and one-half inches tall and has had several years competition before entering college.

Albert Lowery is not on the football team at the University of Michigan but he was still carried from the field of battle during the Nebraska game. He was exhorting the grandstand in the capacity of cheer leader when he took a tumble and twisted his knee so badly that he could not walk.

Who says that the Minnesota athletic teams are a bunch of Swedes? This year there is only one Swede playing on the first string football eleven.

They are not present in Luckies... the mildest cigarette you ever smoked

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.
