

Nobody's Business

By BRUCE HAMBY

DYED-IN-THE-WOOL football fans who must have their football every week, don't have to look far for entertainment. Corvallis will be the scene of two mighty interesting games this week-end. Friday night the Oregon frosh and Oregon State rooks meet in the first of the annual "little civil war" series. The following afternoon at Bell field the Oregon State varsity faces Washington State in a tilt that may have a great deal of bearing on the coast conference race.

To those who have seen previous frosh-rook encounters, there is no need to describe the fight and excitement which accompanies every one of the yearling battles. No matter how greatly one eleven may outclass the other, few people care to make predictions on the outcome. Last year Oregon's babes won twice, 25 to 13 and 43 to 20. Both games couldn't have been equalled for excitement by any team on the coast.

The second game of the series last year, played at Corvallis, had more thrills than any movie scenario writer could ever think of. It even outshone last Saturday's U. C. L. A.-Oregon game. Norman Franklin, Beaver halfback this year, gave the rooks a great lead in the first quarter by running back two successive kickoffs 95 and 85 yards for touchdowns. The frosh came back after the third kickoff and with Pepelnjak and Kostka carrying the ball, scored in three plays from their own two-yard line.

Saturday's game between the Beavers and Cougars should be one of the thrillers of the year. True enough, Babe Hollingberry's squad has a far more impressive record for the year, but the Beavers are quite a bit under rated. Their showing against U. S. C. last week proved that. And the O. S. C.-W. S. C. games are always thrillers.

Both teams have players who are sure to be close at hand when the all-coast elevens are named. Hal Moe, the Beavers' great blocking half, is without a doubt one of the best backs on the coast. Vic Curtin, center; Norman Franklin, halfback; and Johnny Biancone, quarterback, would fit in on any man's ball club.

The Corvallis game will give Oregon fans their only opportunity to see George Theodoratus, the 240-pound fullback of the Cougars, in action. Along with him on the Hollingberry sidishow are George Sander, the sharp-shooting passer, and Ollie Arbelvide, quarter and safety man.

Thank you, Mr. Aaron Frank. And thank you, Mr. Phil Jackson. Thanks to you kind gentlemen, Oregon is in the water-wagon conference now. Or at least we will be after November 5.

In case you haven't heard, Mr. Frank and Mr. Jackson have presented both the Oregon and Oregon State football elevens with brand new custom-built water carts. They will be formally dedicated before the start of the Webfoot-Beaver game at Corvallis in just two weeks.

For the benefit of those who were so unfortunate as to be absent from last Saturday's game at Portland and have never seen a water-cart it might be explained that they are sort of a travelling bar, mounted upon a rubber-wheeled tea cart. The Bruins had one, painted a dazzling blue, and made plenty of use of it. They are equipped with seven or eight hoses with nozzles, which squirt charged water down the throat or over the face of the exhausted player. Pop Warner claims to be the originator of the carts . . . or wagons.

With basketball under way, Keck McKean, the collegiate manager of Bill Reinhart's squad, is bemoaning the fact that no one has thought of giving one to the hoop team. Sophomore managers are scarce as hen's teeth, Keck says, and a cart would be a great help. Might be a good idea at that.

"Would you care for a nice hot toddy, Capt. Roberts?"

Frosh, Rooks Open Annual 'Civil War' Tonight at Corvallis

Yearling Game Starts At 7:30 On Bell Field

OSC Babes Given Odds for First of Encounters

Toughly Leemans, Webfoot Back, Still on Bench With Badly Injured Ankle

By NED SIMPSON
Blood and dust will fly at Corvallis tonight as the Oregon frosh and the Oregon State rooks meet in the first of the annual "little civil war" series. The game starts at 7:30 at Bell field.

With their first big game only 12 hours away, the Duckling gridmen rested today after a light workout last night on Hayward field. The only dark cloud on the horizon was the re-injury of Toughly Leemans, backfield ace. Leemans was kept out of the Chemawa game by an injured ankle and the sore member was hurt again this week.

Rooks Are Best Bet?
The frosh will enter tonight's contest slightly the underdogs. The fact that Verne Eller's rooks are said to be stronger than usual, added to the fact that they ran up a bigger score against Chemawa than did the frosh, is the basis for this assumption.

Information from Corvallis indicates that the rook line is better than usual, with their backfield not as strong as last year's squad. Also, the rooks will be out to avenge the two defeats of last year's team at the hands of the championship freshman eleven. Scores in those games were 25 to 13, and 43 to 20, but no such parade of touchdowns is expected tonight.

Lots of Customers
A large crowd is expected to witness the encounter, for rook-frosh rivalry is always keen and never fails to arouse considerable interest. The game is a rerun of the O. S. C.-Washington State affair that takes place tomorrow afternoon.

Irv Schulz, frosh mentor, is planning on using virtually the same starting lineup that began the game last Friday. The only change that may be made is in the pivot position with Reed possibly getting the call over Withrow. The squad will leave for Corvallis this afternoon, traveling by bus.

Morse Speaks to Pre-Law Majors
"The relation of pre-legal training to professional work," was the topic Dean Wayne L. Morse delivered to the pre-law smoker last night at the Craftsman club.

Dean Morse introduced the members of the faculty to enable students to become acquainted with the professors. As features on the entertainment program several skits were presented.

Preston Gunther, president of the student body, spoke on "The close relation between the students and faculty, and the unity that exists in the law school."

Chemists To Meet At OSC Saturday
A large dinner at the Oregon State commons, followed by the reading of a scientific paper, will be held tomorrow night for the members of the Oregon section of the American Chemical Society.

This organization includes not only chemistry professors and graduate students at all Oregon colleges, but also representatives from the industries.

Those from the University of Oregon who plan to attend the meeting at Corvallis are Dr. F. L. Shinn, Professor W. V. Norris, Professor O. F. Stafford, and several graduate students.

The first baseball game played under electric lights was between Fort Wayne, Ind., and Quincy, Ill., teams in 1883.

CAMPUS LEADERS CITE MERITS OF CANDIDATES

Robert T. Oliver in his presentation of the Democratic platform, strongly condemned the present and past policies of the Hoover administration. Oliver declared, "Hoover has government funds placed with the home loan associations in the belief that some will trickle down to the poor. He talks of 'rugged individualism.' What he means is 'ragged individualism.'"

Speaking last upon the program and for the platform of Herbert Hoover, Republican candidate for president, Arthur Potwin defended the Hoover administration.

"This is no time to divide" was Potwin's statement, "but rather to combine. We are passing through a bleak period caused by the Great war. There has been European upheaval, and the most widespread condition of unemployment in the world has ever experienced. In this chaos, Hoover has done all that he could. He has enlarged the credit system; when banks all over the country closed their doors, he appeared with the reconstruction finance program. The Democrats would build a house but the Republican representative has laid the foundation; building up credit and faith in government."

Twenty-Seven Make Trip To Moscow

Large Crowd Sees Squad Leave; Bill and Mik Are Left Behind

Bound for the great open spaces of Idaho, 27 Webfoot football players, accompanied by coaches and trainers, left Eugene yesterday afternoon for Moscow. Saturday afternoon they face the Vandals in the Idaho homecoming game.

Mingling with the large crowd at the depot to cheer the players were Capt. Bill Morgan and Mike Mikulak. Both players are still so disabled that Coach Callison decided to leave them behind. Both plan to help scout future Oregon opponents over the week-end.

Work All the Time
A short workout was held just before the team departed. Drill on pass defense was the final bit of work passed out by Callison. Thought of two fatal passes last week has made the Oregon men determined not to let many more slip over the heads of the Webfoot secondary.

The 27 making the trip to Idaho include Bernie Hughes, center; Chuck Swanson and Jim Gemlo, centers; Gardner Frye, Howard Clark, Roy Gagnon, Clarence Codding, Ted Giesecke, and Bree Cuppoletti, guards; Irwin Nilsson, Oliver Pope, Alex Eagle and Chuck Bishop, tackles; Red Bailey, Chuck Wishard, Bud Pozzo and Butch Morse, ends.

W. S. C. to be Hosts
Backfield men taken on the trip were Bill Bowerman and Ralph Terjeson, quarters; Mark Temple, Leighton Gee, Stan Kostka, Earl Parker, George Pepelnjak and Bob Parke, halfbacks; and Howard Bobbitt, the fullback.

Besides Callison, Johnny Kitzmiller, assistant coach; Bill Hayward, trainer, and Ted Robb, student manager, accompanied the team.

The players will arrive in Pullman, Washington, this morning and will work out on the Washington State college field in the afternoon. They will drive the nine miles to Moscow just before game time tomorrow.

On the.... Sidelines

By BRIAN BELL

COACH HOWARD HARDING
JONES suddenly has found his staff of assistant football coaches at the University of Southern California increased ten fold.

Every day now the head man, who is seeking ways and means of sending the "Men of Troy" to another national championship, goes into a huddle with his correspondence coaches—via the mail-carrier and the athletic department stenographer—who propose to simplify his task with their unsolicited sagacity.

Take the example of one of those who does not, using the words of the letter, "attempt to dictate." By the time the writer got through he had shaken the Jones system to its foundations, moved the linemen into the backfield and vice versa.

"It seems to me," the writer advised, "that Bob Erskine (a tackle) because of his great strength and experience as a basketball center would be ideal as a football center to plug and open holes and to pass."

"That Curtis Youel (center) on account of his kicking and throwing ability and practice as a baseball catcher would be a great fullback and steady the backfield."

Going into detail, the corresponding coach suggests that the passer can wait a few seconds while "both ends run up the field a little way from the center of the line, each ready for a pass, then if the defense does not follow, the ball can be thrown over their heads, high up and far enough so that either end will have time to get under it."
