Nobody's Business

By BRUCE HAMBY
 WHEN the University of Southern California Trojans defeated California last Friday night they clinched their right to the southern division basketball crown. The Bears defeated them the following night in the first loss suffered by Sam Barry's quintet this season, but the victory meant little.

Jack Robertson Only two games remain on the schedule of each team. Should California win both and the Trojans drop two, the Los Angeles and Berkeley schools would end in a tie for the title.

Each of the four members of the southern conference play 12 games, four with each opponent. At present the Trojans have won nine and lost one. The Bears have been victorious in seven and have lost three. The Trojans meet Oregon's coast cellar rivals, U. C. L. A., next Saturday and should win easily. The Bears take on Stanford, now in third place. While a tie is a possibility, it is not a probability.

In winning the southern championship the Trojans have sewn up every sports title on the coast this year. At present, notes Gordon Arter, sports editor of the Daily Californian, Southern California athletes hold championships in football, baseball, track, as well as practically all minor sports.

Writing before the California-U. S. C. series, Arter says: "If California lets Barry's sun-kissed Trojans come north and clinch the basketball title, the rest of the Pacific coast colleges may just as well fold up their athletic equipment and put it in the moth-proof cedar chest. Winning the hoop championship would mean the U. S. C.'s claim to supremacy in every field would be unchallenged."

Oregon's best performer in Saturday night's disappointing loss to the Oregon Aggies was Jack Robertson, the lively forward. A better ball-hawker than he has been all season, Robertson made more definite contributions to the Webfoot attack than any of his teammates. His defensive work also showed considerable improvement and he displayed greater activity than usual. Considering the proportion of his shots that produced scores, one wonders why his colleagues didn't permit him to attempt field goals more frequently.

Poor timing of plays was a thorn in Oregon's side. The Webfoots had the manipulations and formations to defeat the Aggies, but they didn't operate them properly. Kermit Stevens and Gib Olinger were decidedly below their usual par and Cap Roberts had a difficult time keeping up with Turkey Lewis. Bill Berg, although no point-producer himself, slipped some neat passes to Cap under the basket, his deft tosses accounting for three field goals.

It looks about all over in the north, unless Oregon can arouse itself sufficiently to take the Washington still has the ever-dominant Idaho Vandals to oppose, and then must face Oregon twice. The Huskies must undergo all this activity without Johnny Fuller, the dashing forward, so there's no telling what will happen. It seems likely that the Aggies will be the chosen people to oppose the U. S. C. Trojans, and, as aforementioned, it looks as if the Tro-

MOSCOW, Feb. 20—(Special)—An inspired team of Idaho Vandals dampened the University of Washington's championship aspirations here last night when they quelled the Huskies 45 to 33. Idaho led 21 to 19 at half time.

Playing without the services of gigantic Howard Grenier, stellar pivot man, Rich Fox's boys tore into the Seattle five early in the second period and piled up a lead which grew steadily until the final gun.

Edgar Lacy, lanky guard for the victors, was the outstanding man on the court.

The Huskies, minus high scoring Johnny Fuller, did not play up to the form they displayed in their first two games against the Vandals. In these tilts, played early in the season at Seattle, Washington built up overwhelming scores, but with Johnny on the sidelines things were different.

and entitle the owner to see, all athletic games, except in the case of a championship playoff, to all music concerts, the Emerald, and other associated student body privileges. The original bearer signs his name on the ticket and is to be used by himself. Each card states in bold type "This ticket is not transferable and is subject to forfeiture if presented for admission by other than the original owner."

Student Rates Held Low

The graduate manager stated that non-students pay four times more than the students to see any athletic contest or activity put on by the associated students.

Rosson also said that the student body organization is a business proposition and if the students would allow everyone to have the same privilege would only be hurting themselves.

When asked to make a statement on the situation, Dickson stated that he has been hired to look at the tickets and if ownership is challenged the bearer has to prove that he owns the card, if this cannot be done, it is collected.

Among those who lost their cards were the skippers of the Emerald sports staff, Bruce Hamby, sports editor, and Malcolm Bauer, assistant. It is reported that Stan Kostka also went down the pike.

Jans are apt to do some terrible things to the Aggies.

A dispatch from Seattle says Mr. James M. Phelan, the well-known football coach, is on hand and ready to go with a three-year contract, specifying $12,000 per annum, tucked away in his safe-deposit vault. The Puget sound metropolis expects big things from the team that held Troy to a 9-6 score last autumn and it appears as though their expectations may come true. Reports say the backfield will include four veterans, to wit, and viz., Art Ahonen, 171, at quarterback; Mathew Muczynski, 189, at right half; Byrl Bufkin, 181, at left half; and Paul Sulkosky, 190, at fullback.

That's quite a backfield. There are some young gentlemen in our midst who can tell you that.

Among the visitors at the Oregon-O. S. C. game was L. H. Gregory, sports editor of the Morning Oregonian. He hopes the Aggies win the title and meet U. S. C. next month.

'A Big Man From the South'

Maybe not actually from the south, but Barney Oldfield would certainly like nothing better than to go south to Daytona beach and drive Sir Malcolm Campbell's "Blue Bird" in an assault on the land speed record. Here's America's original daredevil as he looks today at the age of 56, still with that same big cigar in his mouth.

Women's Sports

By ROBERTA MOODY

Kappa Kappa Gamma will meet the Thetas in a swimming meet scheduled for 4 o'clock today in the women's pool. Chi Omega will play against Hendricks hall. The games will be held simultaneously.

These two meets will complete the games of the swimming league. Finals will be held the latter part of the week.

Everyone is welcome to participate in the open hour for swimming at 5 o'clock in the women's pool.

The Phi Pi hoopers will face Susan Campbell hall in a basketball game today at 4 in Gerlinger hall. At 5 Gamma Phi Beta will compete against the Delta Gammas.

These two games will end the interhouse basketball competition. Friday at 5 the winners of these two games will play for the championship.

REDUCTION IN STUDENT LIVING OFFERED IN PLAN

more economical boarding, also. Kitchen facilities sufficient to care for a large number of students are available in Mary Spiller hall, now unoccupied. Several years ago, when the new men's dormitory was built, ranges, sinks and other equipment were taken from the kitchen of Friendly hall. These ranges are still stored on the campus. There are also several ranges in town that may be obtained without charge, it is understood.

Membership Selective

A possible objection might be that such an undertaking would be in competition with the dormitory facilities maintained by the University. This could be met with the answer that the students admitted to the cooperative would be those who could not afford the charges made by the dormitories.

The membership of the groups would be highly selective, under the plan as reported from the Midwest. The financial necessity for participation by the student would be carefully investigated. Recommendations from the head of department or major professor probably would be required. In any event, the approval of the dean of men or women and possibly the cants for membership in the groups would be given considerable weight.

Buying of provisions for both the men's and women's groups on a wholesale basis would make possible the obtaining of a somewhat better figure than would be possible on a smaller scale. It is possible that refrigeration facilities in the men's dormitory could be arranged.

During the war, when prices were high, through the purchase of staple foodstuffs, the army and navy were able to feed their men on approximately 34 cents a day. It is true that the government obtained contract prices, but these were far from being the lowest available and with the high general level of the times, would be offset by the low scale of the present day.

With a selected membership, the problems of administration in the groups could undoubtedly be disposed of by delegating this function to students of proved ability. For this work they would receive some allowance to be determined by the group prior to appointment of the manager.

MANCHUKUO OFFICIALS DO NOT CONDEMN U. S.

Another letter received by Dr. Noble is one from Hsieh Chieh-shih, foreign minister of Manchukuo, dated January 24. The sender, a native Manchurian, concerns the attitude taken by the league. He said: "For more than a year arbitration attempts from the outside have proved futile; the League of Nations, innocently or otherwise, has prolonged the agonies of Asia."

Referring to China, he continues: "Accordingly, it is urgently necessary that the officials and people of the Chinese republic realize that complete reliance upon the league or any third party for a favorable settlement of the pending problems is ineffectual and even dangerous."

Webfoots Fail To Halt O.S.C. In Slow Game

Lewis, Roberts Are on Even Terms in Battle

Beavers Get Big Lead and Won't Let Go; Last Five Minutes Are Scoreless

By BILL EBERHART
 Oregon's basketball team failed Saturday night in its attempt to impede Oregon State's march toward the Northwest conference championship title, when the Beavers ended the game on top, 29 to 18.

Playing to a near-capacity crowd of between five and six thousand spectators, the largest assembled in McArthur court since the Dempsey fight two summers ago, the 10 men on the floor apparently had a little stage-fright and it was nearly 10 minutes before either team snared a field goal. Following an Oregon substitution, Berg for Stahl, Skeet O'Connell broke the ice with a soaring long shot.

Centers Fight It Out

The contest was for the most part a battle of centers. Roberts got in some good licks before the evening was over, but the bigger Lewis ultimately got the upper hand. Cap got Oregon's first goal from the floor, but O'Connell matched it with another long one to make the score 9 to 3. Lewis got a long shot and Cap followed for the Webfoots with a nice one back over his head. Then Big Ed garnered another, then Cap, then Lewis again, followed by a conversion on Cap's personal, ending the half, 16 to 7 for Oregon State.

The ensuing five minutes was packed with action and another bucket by Lewis completed the scoring for Oregon State. With more than five minutes to go, Robertson made Oregon's last point, a nice one from mid-court.

Webfoots Cautious

The balance of the game was a dreary performance. When Oregon State had the ball, they stalled. When the Webfoots had the ball, they played a futile passing game. Even though the Beavers had an 11-point lead and only a few minutes to go, the Oregon players were unwilling to cut loose and take a few chances.

Ed Lewis, leading conference scorer, and Cap Roberts were the stars of the game as far as points were concerned. Lewis counted for 14 points, making good four free throws out of as many tries. Cap Roberts led the rest of the players with 9 and Robertson and O'Connell followed with 7 apiece.

Phi Psi Defaults To Delt Swatters

Action in the intramural ping pong war slowed down last night to a marked degree, with only one game being scheduled between Phi Psi and Delta Tau Delta. The Deltas took the decision by default. No games are scheduled for tonight, but the finals are scheduled for 4:30 p. m. Thursday.

candles, spotlights became moonlight, people we had known all year became romantic. Balderston's wit and fancy flashed before us. It was good. There was something unique in Guild theatre; not the stagey and familiar illusion of reality, but a delightful illusion of unreality, more. A sense that it wasn't real, that it couldn't last, but that it was delightfully, incredibly harmonious.

That is the esprit of Berkeley Square, the thing that has made the play click from Broadway, New York, to Broadway, Portland. There is about the whole thing something so unreal, so magical.

Sixteen Entered In Independent Hoop Tourney

Sixteen basketball teams from Oregon and Washington are in Eugene to compete for the state independent hoop title in a three day tournament starting Friday.

The tourney, sponsored by the Eugene junior chamber of commerce, has attracted attention throughout the Northwest, but only the 16 teams presenting the best season records received an invitation to the meet.

Two of the strongest contenders for the title, DeNeffe's of Eugene, and the Benton Athletics of Corvallis, are scheduled to meet in the opening tilt at 10 a. m. Friday.

Frosh Look Good In Victory Over Corvallis Babes

Rogers' Five Gets 39 to 23 Win To End four-game Series In Deadlock

Red Rogers' frosh basketball team played real ball Saturday night and sent the rooks back to Corvallis smarting under a 39 to 23 beating. This evened the four-game series between the two teams, the rooks having won at Corvallis Friday night, 32 to 31.

In the last game of the season for both teams the rooks were completely outclassed. Enjoying a fortunate reversal of form over the night before, the frosh started out with the opening whistle and piled up a lead of 17 to 3 after fifteen minutes of play. The half ended just after Makela and Blacker shoved the rook score up to seven.

After making the first rook basket of the game, Palmberg came back after the half-time rest and banged the basket for the first three baskets of the second half, which closed up the gap until the frosh possessed a mere four-point lead. With this in mind, they tightened their defense and put more fire into their offense until they had doubled the score on the rooks after six minutes of torrid activity. Blacker was put out of the game on fouls and for the rest of the game the scoring was frequent for both teams, but the frosh getting two to the rooks' one.
