

State Higher Education Schools Planning Summer Sessions

U Of O Offers Wide Variety For Students

Oregon State, State Normal Schools To Have Courses

Term Starts June 19 and Closes July 28; Post Sessions To Be Held in August

Summer sessions of the Oregon State System of Higher Education will be held as usual this year, it was announced yesterday by Alfred Powers, director. Work will be offered by the University of Oregon at Eugene and Portland, by Oregon State college in Corvallis, Oregon Normal school at Monmouth, Eastern Oregon Normal school at LaGrande, and Southern Oregon Normal school at Ashland.

All sessions will open June 19 and close July 28. At Eugene a post session of one month will be added, while at each of the normal schools an additional term of five weeks will be held. The athletic coaching school will be held at Corvallis from June 19 to July 1, and will be open to students enrolled in work at Eugene and Monmouth as well as Corvallis.

A wide variety of subjects will be offered, with emphasis at each institution on the major work regularly given there. Regular staff members from the Oregon institutions have been named for many of the teaching posts, and these will be aided by a number of outstanding faculty men from other institutions.

Clark Will Direct
Dr. Dan E. Clark, assistant director of the extension division and professor of history, will have charge of the Eugene session, and will also offer a course in American history. Dr. M. Elwood Smith will direct activities at Corvallis and will teach a course on "Great Books." President J. A. Churchill will head work at Monmouth. President H. E. Inlow will direct work at LaGrande, and President Walter Redford will head the session at Ashland.

Courses in Eugene will include art, business administration, drama, economics, education, English, German, history, home economics, journalism, law library methods, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, Romance languages and sociology.

Many Courses Offered
Corvallis courses will be given in bacteriology, botany, business administration, secretarial training, chemistry, drama, economics, education, English, entomology, geology, history, home economics, industrial arts, industrial education, journalism, mathematics, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, public speaking, Romance languages, sociology, and student nursing.

Portland courses will include anthropology, art, bacteriology, biology, botany, economics, education, English, home economics, German, history, journalism mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, political science, psychology, public speaking, Romance languages, sociology, and student nursing.

Work at the three normal schools will include courses in education and subjects regularly included in their curricula. Students may earn a maximum of nine hours in the six weeks term at any of the institutions. Six hours may be obtained in the post session at Eugene, thus making possible to earn 15 hours, the equivalent of a full term during the summer. Work in the post session at Eugene will supplement that given at Eugene, Corvallis and Portland, for the student who wishes to continue.

Copies of announcements and any other information may be obtained from the office of the director, 814 Oregon building, Portland. Bulletins may also be obtained on the campus at the offices of the various schools, the registrar's office and the summer session office.

Warrington To Commute
E. W. Warrington, professor of religion at Oregon State college, will work a "double shift" during the summer sessions. He will offer courses in character education both at Eugene and Corvallis and will "commute" daily.

Radio Speech Course Given
"Mike Wright" will be a thing of the past for summer session students who enroll in a new special course at Oregon State college. The course is known as "Radio Speech" and the radio station KOAC will be used as a laboratory.

Dr. Smith Speaks to Miners
Dr. Warren D. Smith lectured to over 500 people in the Portland hotel last Saturday at the mining congress meeting on the subject of "Geology Applied to Mining."

Requirements for Summer Session Are Announced

ADMISSION to the summer sessions is open to all those able to do the work. The cultural or practical opportunities afforded by the summer sessions are available to qualified adults who may not be interested in earning academic credit. Students working for degrees must be regularly matriculated in the university, college or one of the normal schools, or in some other institution of higher education to which they wish their credits transferred.

Students on probation at any institution of higher education may not enroll in the summer session with or without credit. Visiting students from other institutions must present evidence of good standing but need not file transcripts if credits are to be transferred.

Summer Session Courses To Offer Extended Period

Continuation of Several Regular Subjects Will Be Given For Four Weeks

For the benefit of those in summer session in Eugene, at the State College at Corvallis, at any of the normal schools or at Portland, a post session of four weeks from July 31 to August 25 will be offered in Eugene, it is announced. Courses in continuation of many of those given during the regular six weeks will be included, and special attention will be given to the needs of graduate and advanced undergraduate students.

Courses will be given in economics, education, English, history, law, physics, psychology, and sociology. The teaching staff will include Dr. Delbert R. French, assistant professor of mathematics; Dr. James R. Jewell, dean and director of education; Carl L. Huffaker, professor of education; Carl W. Salsner, professor of education; Ernest W. Warrington, professor of religion; J. T. Hamilton, graduate assistant in education; E. C. A. Lesch, assistant professor of English; Robert D. Horn, assistant professor of English; Dr. Dan E. Clark, professor of history; Dr. John T. Ganoe, associate professor of history; Charles G. Howard, professor of law; Dr. Will V. Norris, associate professor of physics; Dr. H. R. Crossland, associate professor of psychology, and Dr. P. A. Parsons, head of the department of sociology.

A maximum of six hours may be carried, thus making it possible for students to earn 15 hours during the summer with nine hours earned in regular summer session. A fee of $10 per student will be charged, and students in law will pay $10 additional.

Varied Physical Education School Courses Offered

Hoyman, Knollin, Boushey, Royer, Thomson, and Duncan Will Teach

Physical education in the Eugene summer session is expected to prove unusually interesting this year. While a well rounded curriculum will be offered, swimming is expected to attract not only those interested in physical education, but many others as well.

Arrangements are being made for a regular course in life-saving, which lead to the life-saving certificate. It is also planned to give work that will lead to examiner's certificate in this work. Swimming, diving and life-saving for men will be under the direction of Howard S. Hoyman, instructor in physical education, and for women Miss Margaret M. Duncan, instructor in physical education, will direct the work.

Others will be on the physical education staff include E. R. Knollin, associate professor of physical education; Miss Harriet W. Thomson, professor of physical education; Earl E. Boushey, instructor in physical education; and E. Gall Royer, graduate assistant.

Courses to be offered include activities for teachers of physical education, teacher's corrective problems, technique of teaching physical education, health education, folk and clog dancing, playground and community recreation, tennis, activities for high school, and organization and administration of physical education and intramural sports.

Jewell Will Teach at Two Schools
Dr. J. R. Jewell, dean of the school of education, both at Eugene and Corvallis, will neglect neither campus during the summer sessions. He will teach courses daily at both places.

Wide Opportunities To Be Offered in Summer School

Summer session on the Eugene campus of the University of Oregon will not only offer students ample facilities for continuing regular studies, but will present an opportunity for study in a wide variety of courses that can be obtained at no other time. Regular courses will be given in art, business administration, drama, economics, education, English, German, history, home economics, journalism, law, library methods, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, Romance languages and sociology.

Of special interest will be courses in art for teachers in public schools, the clinic for atypical children, and courses in library methods. For the fourth successive year, the Carnegie corporation of New York has selected the University as its western headquarters, and has appropriated $8,500 for the work here. This provides for several scholarships and for an adequate teaching staff. The courses are especially valuable for art teachers in colleges, normal schools and public schools. The only other place in the United States that such work is offered is Harvard university, which is the eastern center for the corporation.

School Nationally Known

The clinic for atypical children, which has won national attention and which draws pupils from all parts of the country, will again be under the direction of Miss Grace Fernald, associate professor of psychology, University of California at Los Angeles. Not only does this clinic greatly aid atypical children, but it gives teachers the opportunity to study and learn methods used in this advanced type of teaching.

Work in library methods will be given by Miss Marion Horton, assistant in the city school library, Los Angeles, and by regular staff members of the University and college libraries. Courses of special interest will be on school library administration, books for high school libraries, children's literature, and technical courses in cataloging and other work.

Noted Scientist Coming
Eugen Gustav Steinhof, director of the National School of Decorative Art, Vienna, will again be on the faculty of the school of fine arts, and will give courses in psychology of art teaching. His work last summer here attracted wide attention and a large enrollment is predicted for his classes this year. Another noted visiting professor will be Andrew Vincent, professor of painting and drawing, who will come here from the Chicago Art Institute. He was formerly a staff member of the University, where his work was well known. Work in the school will be directed by W. R. B. Wilcox, professor of architecture, who will also conduct the seminar in art and life. Nowland B. Zane, associate professor of design, and Miss Victoria Avakian, assistant professor in applied design, will offer courses.

The staff of the school of education will include several outstanding educators from other institutions, in addition to Miss Fernald and members of the University faculty. Miss Lillian Raynor of the Los Angeles public schools will assist in remedial teaching courses, and Miss Eleanor Iorns, advisor of girls at Queen Anne high school in Seattle, will offer courses on the work of deans and advisors.

Dean Jewell To Teach

Dr. J. R. Jewell, dean of the school of education, will offer courses in the history of education and on adolescence on the Eugene campus. Dr. Nelson L. Boushey, professor of education, will teach courses on remedial techniques and school administration and organization. F. L. Stetson, professor of education, will teach school administration and supervision. Dr. B. W. DeBusk, professor of education, will offer courses on mental tests and technique of diagnosis and on the psychology of childhood. Others who will be on this staff include Ernest W. Warrington, of Oregon State college, who will offer a course in character education; Mrs. Margaret B. Goodall, instructor in education; J. T. Hamilton, graduate assistant in education; and Joseph Holaday, instructor in education.

The staff of the school of business will include H. V. Hoyt, dean and director of business administration; John M. Rae, associate professor of business administration; and Wilbur P. Riddelsbarger, assistant professor of business administration. Courses will be offered in elements of finance, elements of marketing, business policies, credits and collections, and advanced students may take research work and work on thesis.

Drama Work Scheduled

Two courses, in theater workshop and in play production, will be offered in drama by Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt, assistant professor of English and director of dramatics.

Dr. James H. Gilbert, dean of the college of social science and professor of economics, will offer a course of particular interest, banking and economic crisis, in the field of economics. Dr. Donald M. Erb, professor of economics, will offer two courses to be designated as principles of economics and railway economics. Dr. Delbert R. French, assistant professor of economics, will teach principles of money credit and economic history of the United States.

English courses will cover a wide variety of subjects. The staff will be headed by Dr. C. V. Boyer, dean of the college of arts and letters, and will include S. Stephenson Smith, associate professor of English; E. C. A. Lesch, assistant professor of English; Pat V. Morrisette, assistant professor of English; George Williamson, assistant professor of English; and L. K. Shumaker, supervisor of the English bureau. Courses will include English survey, survey of American literature, Shakespeare, contemporary poets, Byron, twentieth century drama, English drama, Johnson, seventeenth century literature, nineteenth century prose, and Chaucer.

New York Expert on Staff
In Germanic languages and literature, Dr. Joseph von Bradish, professor of German in the City college, New York, will offer work in elementary German and rapid reading, German drama, and will conduct a seminar.

On the faculty for the history department will be Dr. Dan E. Clark, director of the Eugene sessions and professor of history; Andrew Fish, associate professor of history, and Dr. John T. Ganoe, associate professor of history. Courses will include modern Europe, English history, history of the United States, Europe since 1918, history of the American West, and two courses of special interest known as "Great Historians" and "The United States in Progressive Era."

Allen To Teach Journalism

Both Eric W. Allen, dean of the school of journalism, and George S. Turnbull, professor of journalism, will teach this summer. Dean Allen will offer a course in general journalism and editorial planning, and Professor Turnbull will offer a course of special interest to teachers, teaching of journalism.

In the school of law, Wayne L. Morse, dean, and Orlando J. Hollis, professor of law, will teach courses. Morse will offer courses in criminal procedure and water rights, and Hollis will teach bankruptcy and mortgages.

Many Courses in Music

Courses in music will range from instruction in various instruments to courses in public school music. The regular faculty of the school will be drawn on for the teaching staff. Included on the faculty will be Dr. J. J. Landsbury, dean; Anne Landsbury Beck, professor of music; Howard Halbert, instructor in violin; Arthur Boardman, head of the department of voice; John Stark Evans, professor of music; Louis P. Artau, assistant professor of music; George Hopkins, head of department of piano; Madame Rose McGrew, professor of voice; Jane Thacher, professor of music; Roy G. Bryson, instructor of voice; and John Stehn, professor in wind instruments.

Mrs. Beck will offer three courses in music, elementary harmony, public school music, and public school music for junior and senior high schools. General courses will include intermediate harmony, elementary formal analysis, orchestral organization, accompanying keyboard harmony and modulation, music of the ancients, classical period, romantic period, band organization ensemble, organ literature, free composition, voice, conducting, strict counterpoint, harmonic counterpoint, vocal pedagogy, piano pedagogy, and formal analysis.

Philosophy To Be Offered

Dr. George Rebec, dean of the graduate school and Prince L. Campbell professor of philosophy, will offer a course in actual contemporary life philosophies and will conduct graduate and undergraduate seminars in philosophy.

A wide program, covering many phases of physical education, will be offered under the direction of staff members of the school. Those who will teach include Ernesto R. Knollin, associate professor of physical education; Harriet W. Thomson, professor of physical education; Earl E. Boushey, instructor in physical education; Margaret M. Duncan, instructor in physical education for women; Howard S. Hoyman, instructor in physical education; and E. Gall Royer, graduate assistant in physical education.

Courses offered in physical education include swimming, physical activities for teachers of physical education, teacher's corrective problems, health education, folk and clog dancing, playground and community recreation, organization and administration of physical education, and of intramural sports, and others.

World Problems To Be Studied

Dr. Will V. Norris, associate professor of physics, will teach courses in general physics. Three courses on political science, American national governments, world politics and political problems will be taught by Dr. Waldo Schumacher, professor of political science.

Beginning and advanced courses in psychology will be taught by Dr. Howard R. Taylor, professor of psychology, and Dr. Harold R. Crossland, associate professor of psychology. In Romance languages, Dr. Leavitt O. Wright will teach Spanish and Spanish literature and Christina A. Crane, instructor in Romance languages, will teach French.

Courses in sociology will include principles of sociology, criminology, general anthropology, and social research. Dr. L. S. Cressman, professor of sociology, and Dr. Samuel H. Jameson, associate professor of sociology, will be on the staff.

School Of Fine Arts Honored By Carnegie

Foundation Awards Grant Of $6500 To U. of O.

Sum Provides Scholarships for Art Teachers; Expenses and Materials Provided

For the fourth consecutive year the University of Oregon school of fine arts has been selected by the Carnegie corporation of New York as the western center for art education. A grant of $6500 has been made by the foundation for the support of this work on the campus. This sum will provide for a number of scholarships for teachers of art, whose expenses and costs of materials will be paid by the foundation.

The work will be offered in cooperation with the education committee of the American Institute of Architects, and is primarily to stimulate the appreciation of art and to remedy the prevalent lack of adequately prepared teachers in this field. Many of the courses to be offered have been chosen to meet the needs of teachers of art in the colleges, normal schools and public schools and public schools, as well as those interested in the technique of drawing, painting and design.

The expanded program made possible under the Carnegie grant will also serve students who intend to enter the university to study architecture, painting, sculpture, design and normal art, and will be valuable to regular students who wish to remain over for work.

The regular faculty of the school will be augmented by the addition of Eugen Gustav Steinhof, director of the National School of Decorative Art, Vienna, and Andrew Vincent, of the Chicago Art Institute. The work of Mr. Steinhof last summer attracted wide attention and a large enrollment in his classes is anticipated. Others who will be on the staff are W. R. B. Wilcox, professor of architecture; Nowland B. Zane, associate professor of design, and Miss Victoria Avakian, assistant professor of applied design.

Courses to be taught will include applied design, painting, drawing, composition, assigned readings, appreciative experiences and teaching problems, art appreciation class equipment, art and life and architectural design.

Athletic Coaches' School Featured At OSC Sessions

Lon Stiner, Amory Gill To Offer Courses for Football and Hoop Mentors

A school for athletic coaches, which will serve all institutions of higher education, will be held on the campus of the Oregon State college June 19 to July 1. Students in attendance at Eugene and Monmouth may go to Corvallis for this special work. The school will alternate between the university and college, and next summer will be held in Eugene.

Football theory and practice will be given under the direction of Alonzo Stiner, head football coach and track coach at Oregon State. Basketball theory and practice and baseball will be given by A. T. Gill, basketball and baseball coach, whose Orange basketball team this winter won the Pacific coast conference championship.

Stiner will also give a course in track coaching. Work in the coaching school will be under the direction of Carl A. Lodell, director of athletics at the college.

Students desiring to enroll only in the coaching school may do so for a fee of $5. Regularly enrolled students in the Corvallis, Eugene or Monmouth schools may enroll in the coaching classes for $5.

education and of intramural sports, and others.

World Problems To Be Studied
Dr. Will V. Norris, associate professor of physics, will teach courses in general physics. Three courses on political science, American national governments, world politics and political problems will be taught by Dr. Waldo Schumacher, professor of political science.

Beginning and advanced courses in psychology will be taught by Dr. Howard R. Taylor, professor of psychology, and Dr. Harold R. Crossland, associate professor of psychology. In Romance languages, Dr. Leavitt O. Wright will teach Spanish and Spanish literature and Christina A. Crane, instructor in Romance languages, will teach French.

Courses in sociology will include principles of sociology, criminology, general anthropology, and social research. Dr. L. S. Cressman, professor of sociology, and Dr. Samuel H. Jameson, associate professor of sociology, will be on the staff.

To Take Office Today

Front row: Helen Burns, senior woman; Nancy Suomela, student body secretary. Back row: Dick Near, senior man; Neal Bush, vice-president of the student body; and Thomas Tongue, student body president.

Summer Platoon School To Be Held For Entire Period

Demonstration Attracts National Interest; Whitney Will Direct Project

The fifth summer platoon demonstration school will be held in Portland during the summer session of the University there, and will extend over the full six weeks period. Interest in the project has increased every year, and the work has attracted national attention.

The platoon demonstration work will be under the direction of E. H. Whitney, assistant superintendent of Portland public schools; C. R. Holloway, also an assistant superintendent in Portland public schools; Grace Bridges, director of auditorium, Portland public schools, and several others highly qualified for this type of education.

Classes will include "Correlation of Subject Matter in Platoon Schools," by Mr. Whitney; "Auditorium Technique in Platoon Schools," by Miss Bridges; "Administration of Platoon Schools," by Mr. Holloway; "Extra Class Activities," by Miss Bridges, and "Observation in Platoon Demonstration School" by Mr. Whitney, Miss Bridges and the staff.

The classes will be held in Lincoln high school, and the demonstrations will be held in the Shattuck elementary school building a few blocks away.

The demonstration staff of

Library Course To Be Offered at Summer School

Expert instruction in library work that will be of value to students, to teachers and others interested will be available on the campus of the University this summer. Miss Marion Horton, assistant, city school library of Los Angeles, and a recognized authority in this field, will offer two courses, on books for high school libraries and school library administration.

The technical side of library work will be given adequate attention. Miss E. Lenore Casford, periodical librarian for the University, will give a course in elementary reference work, and in children's literature. Mrs. Marie Hull Jackson, continuation cataloguer of Oregon State college, will teach a course in cataloging and one in classification and subject headings.

The course will be of special value to teachers and prospective teachers who may find positions in schools that do not employ full time or part time librarians, it is pointed out. The University library will serve as a laboratory for much of the work.

teachers will be drawn from those giving conspicuously successful service in the Portland schools, and this staff will be supplemented by specialists from the summer session faculty of the University.

Clinic for Atypical Children To Be Feature of Summer

The clinic for atypical children, now an outstanding feature of the summer session of the school of education, will be held again this year as a feature of an unusually complete curricula for teachers and others interested in education.

Mrs. Grace Fernald, associate of psychology of the University of California at Los Angeles, will again have charge of this work. She will be assisted by Dr. B. W. DeBusk, who has won wide recognition for his work in this field, and by Miss Lillian Rayner, of the Los Angeles public schools.

Courses to be offered will give those enrolled ample opportunity to observe methods used in this advanced educational work. The laboratory for the courses is the clinic, which is made up of children who come from all parts of the United States to take advantage of the opportunity offered. They are classified usually as "non-speakers" and "non-readers," and Miss Fernald aids them by use of the kinaesthetic method.

Instead of using the usual visual or auditory method, the work is given to the child through his muscles. While most children learn readily through the visual or auditory path, some perfectly normal children have these paths blocked, and simply cannot acquire knowledge in that way, no matter how long it is pounded into them.

The method Dr. Fernald originated several years ago, and has been working on ever since, is really very simple. The child, young or old, is given to an individual teacher who finds out something in which he is interested. Then some work connected with this interest is written on the paper in plain large writing. The child traces the word carefully with his finger until he thinks he can write it without the help of the written word. At the same time he says the word. Sometimes, in the very beginning, this process must be repeated from 50 to 100 times before success comes.

Program For School Varied To Fit Needs

Staff Members Are Named For Work

Educators From Other Schools Will Be Added; Professors Are Listed

A varied program, to fit the needs of regular students who reside in Portland, teachers who may wish to take their summer work there, and others who may wish cultural or scientific courses, has been arranged for the Portland summer session of the University of Oregon.

Staff members from other institutions in the state system of higher education have been named to take charge of much of the work, and to this staff will be added a number of outstanding educators from other institutions throughout the country.

Of special interest to educators will be the platoon demonstration school, which will be under the direction of E. H. Whitney, assistant superintendent of the Portland public schools. A course that is expected to attract a large registration is "Life and Thought of Primitive Man" to be given by Dr. Alexander Goldenweiser, visiting professor of thought and culture. Dr. Goldenweiser is regarded as one of the foremost authorities on anthropology, in the United States.

From Chicago will come Bernard Hinshaw, noted artist, who will give courses in "Experiencing Pictures," in advanced drawing and composition, modeling and casting and in landscape sketching, drawing and painting.

Teacher From Hawaii
Students in history may take work from Donald W. Rowland, professor of history from the University of Hawaii, whose course in "United States in the Pacific" is expected to be of special interest. He will also give a course on the history of the United States.

Practical journalistic instruction will be given by Wallace Wharton, of the editorial staff of the Oregon, who will teach a course in journalistic writing.

Dr. Olof Larsell, professor of anatomy in the school of medicine, will teach biology, and will be assisted by Dr. Albert R. Sweetser, professor of plant biology; Miss Ethel I. Sanborn, assistant professor of plant biology, and Ralph Highmiller, assistant in biology in the Portland center.

Morris Has Courses
Dr. Victor P. Morris, professor of economics, whose classes in Portland during the past year have attracted large attendance, will offer three courses, in principles of economics, money and banking and economic crises and international economic policies.

In sociology Dr. Charles N. Reynolds, associate professor of sociology, Stanford university, will again be a member of the Portland staff, and will offer courses in educational sociology, elements of sociology and contemporary social trends.

Short story writers and others interested in English will find a well-rounded curriculum in this field. English composition, vocabulary building, short story writing, Shakespeare and survey of American literature are included in the offerings.

Other courses of interest will be those in Germanic languages and literature, mathematics, music, philosophy, physical education, political science, psychology, public speaking and health education.

All classes will meet in the Lincoln high school in Portland, a center that has been found convenient in the past, since it is centrally located and has adequate class and laboratory facilities.

Dormitories Will Be Open During Summer Session

Excellent living accommodations will be available for students at each of the summer sessions this year, it is stated by Alfred Powers, director. At Eugene and Corvallis students if they desire will be housed in the dormitories, where board and room will be offered for $6.75 per week, or $7.75 if the student wishes a room alone.

At Eugene the new men's dormitory, an ideal home for students, will be utilized. All students who desire may take their meals in the spacious dining hall, whether or not they reside in the dormitory.

The up-to-date dormitories at Corvallis will also be open for students, at the same rates that will be charged at Eugene.

For those who desire more privacy, an approved list of private homes where rooms or board and rooms may be obtained will be found at each institution.

SUMMER SESSIONS, OREGON STATE SYSTEM OF HIGHER EDUCATION

WHERE
University of Oregon at Eugene and Portland.
Oregon State College at Corvallis.
Oregon Normal School at Corvallis.
Eastern Oregon Normal School at LaGrande.
Southern Oregon Normal School at Ashland.

WHEN
Regular six-week sessions, all institutions, June 19 to July 28.
Post session, Eugene, July 30 to August 25.
Second session, all normal schools, July 30 to September 1.
Coaching school, Corvallis, June 19 to July 1.

FEES
Regular summer sessions, University of Oregon and Oregon State College, $20.
Two sessions at normal schools, $17; one session, $13.
Coaching school, $5.
Law school, $30 first session, $20 post session.
Post session, Eugene, $10.
No out-of-state fees will be charged summer session students.