Husky-Webfoot Record All Even; Frosh-Rook Game Is Set for Friday

SEATTLE business men, 90 strong, invaded the city of Portland early Monday morning to start what gives all of the promise of being one of the most hectic "rally" weeks, preceding the annual Husky-Webfoot classic, in many a year. The Puget Sound sports boosters fairly snapped their fingers in the faces of the Rose City grid fans, and "double dared" them to be in Seattle next Saturday afternoon to see Prink Callison match wits and men with Jimmy Phelan . . . and they meant it, too.

The Seattleites think they have a great team this year, and are ready to tell the bloom'ing world that they can mop up the earth with Oregon's crippled duck, or any other young upstart on the Pacific coast . . . "If you don't believe us," they say, "come up sometime and watch us do it."

Oregon's fans will have to be "shown," however. For the past five years no Husky has carried a ball across the Oregon goal line, and thousands of Oregon boosters can already be heard shouting that this will be the sixth scoreless year for the northerners.

Since Washington and Oregon opened hostilities on the gridiron way back at the beginning of the century . . . things have stacked up just even. Each school has won eleven times, and four tilts have ended in a tie. In the 26 games played, Oregon holds the edge with an average of 10.5 points per game to 8.7 for the Huskies . . . Oh, look for yourself, here are the scores:

Year	Wash.	Ore.
1900	0	43
1903	6	5
1904	0	18
1905	12	18
1906	6	16
1907	0	6
1908	15	0
1909	20	6
1911	29	3
1912	30	14
1913	10	7
1914	10	0
1916	0	0
1919	13	24
1920	0	17
1922	3	3
1923	24	7
1924	3	7
1925	15	14
1926	24	9
1927	7	0
1928	0	27
1929	0	14
1930	0	7

Each school, in the above list, seemed to top the other for several years in a row until its grip was broken and then the other got the habit of winning. Will Saturday's game mean just another in the chain of Webfoot victories, or will Mr. Phelan "gently but firmly" insist upon a change in the regime?

While the more fortunate of Oregon's 2000 students are elbowing their way from one car to another in the special to Seattle Friday night, a rare grid dish will be served to those who couldn't raise the necessary shekels, and are therefore doomed to stay at home. Slat's Gill, whose name is by no means new to Oregon fans, will bring his rook pigskinners to Hayward field that night, where they meet the frosh eleven under the lights.

Huskies to Be Favorites in Grid Classic

Injuries Weaken Ducks For Crucial Tilt

Northerners Out to Break Webfoot Jinx; May Open Up With Aerial Attack

"Heaven Help the Foes of Washington."

This is the far flung cry which echoes down from the Puget Sound country to the Willamette valley, warning "Prink" Callison and his injured Webfeet to watch out for the Huskies when the two teams meet in their annual battle at Seattle this coming Saturday.

For five consecutive years now the Oregon teams have kept the Huskies from crossing the Webfoot goal line. During these five years the Oregonians have won four times, last year's game having ended in a scoreless tie. It is expected that Jimmy Phelan's men will put on a spectacular passing attack in order to pierce the Webfoot defense.

Huskies Favorites
 Until this past week-end when Oregon got a bad scare from Columbia university the Ducks were favorites, but a lot can happen over a week-end and Jimmy Phelan's Huskies will enter the game favorites to win. It is rumored that the betting odds up in Seattle favor the lakeside university gridgers by 12 points, and that there also is plenty of two for one money on Washington.

After the Columbia tussle Oregon's injury list reached a new high for all time. "Biff" Nilsson, one of Oregon's best bets for all-coast honors, is definitely out due to a torn cartilage in his knee, Leighton Gee, elusive half, is laid up with three injured vertebrae, and although he will be able to play his condition will be none to well. Butch Morse, star end, is in the infirmary with the "flu," and Mark Temple, co-captain, is still limping from the leg injury sustained in the Gonzaga game. It looks as though "Hard Luck" Callison will have to depend lots on his reserve material to show against the Huskies.

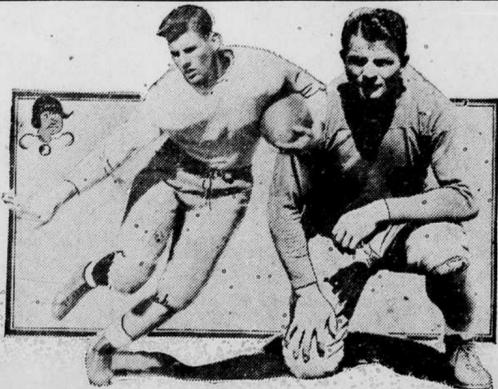

Seattle Backs Good
 The Washington backfield will probably be composed of Matt Muczynski, who has taken over the signal calling job, at quarterback; Ole Hansen, the "dark horse" of the Seattle outfit, at one half; Art Ahonen, the most talented back on the squad at the other half; and "Socco" Sulkosky at full. Jay Hornbeak, who has been moved down to second string signal barker, will probably see plenty of action.

Probably the greatest duel for honors on the field will be between "Socco" Sulkosky, whom the Seattle papers are already booming for all-American honors, and "Mighty Mike" Mikulak, Oregon's choice for all-American, who will be playing his last game against the Huskies. Both of these boys mean business and should put on a great show.

Most of the yearlings coached by Billy Reinhart and Irv Schulz are on crutches, but despite this the Duckling mentors are looking for a victory . . . and, by the way, so is our friend Slat's.

Lighting Improved
 Electricians were at work Monday in the office of Dean James H. Gilbert of the school of social science, installing new, modern lighting to replace the old system with which the room was equipped.

A Pair of Invalids

Just a couple of the boys who are beginning to make Prink Callison think that he will have to take a few cuts to Seattle with him this Saturday. With the ball is Leighton Gee, regular right half, who suffered a misplaced vertebrae in Saturday's game with Columbia. The other gridster is Bree Cuppoletti, stocky guard, who is just recovering from a sprained ankle. Both will undoubtedly see action against Washington Saturday.

Burr Will Coach All Varsity Spike Artists This Fall

Colonel Bill Hayward Has Plenty To Do Keeping Gridmen In Shape

Opening the fall track season today Sherwood Burr, varsity track captain, will meet all cinder artists on Hayward field at 4 p. m.

As Colonel Bill Hayward, head track coach, has his hands more than full keeping the football players in shape, Burr will take over the coaching for the fall term. Sherwood will be assisted by Bob Hunter, two-year letterman in the distances, who will have charge of the distance men and the cross-country aspirants.

Cross-country is being brought back this year after an absence of several years from the Oregon track meets. It will be included as a regular part of the track team this year.

It is necessary for all those interested in track and hopeful of making the varsity or frosh teams next spring to turn out for this early practice. All experienced tracksters know the value of pre-season training. It enables a person to find himself and start getting in shape for the hard work ahead.

Varsity track lettermen are urged to show up. All men will suit up at the igloo, and should be on the field on time.

Dr. DeBusk Gives Lectures
 Monday, October 16, Dr. B. W. DeBusk, of the school of education, will lecture to the Washington Education association on "Reading of the College Student." That night he will talk on "Reading Defects of Upper-Grade Children."

Frosh Mentors Select Gridsters For Rook Battle

Reinhart and Schulz Optimistic as First Game of Season Approaches

Bill Reinhart is "dubious" and Irv Schulz is "non-committal," but it is reported from reliable sources that the yearling mentors have decided upon the opening frosh grid lineup for the game against the Oregon State rooks Friday night at Hayward field.

The linemen who will open the frosh season are: Alan Wilson of Spokane, left end; Pat Fury, Sandpoint, Idaho, at left tackle; Dale Hardesty, Wendling, at left guard; John Farrar, San Francisco, at center; Morris Burchard, Tillamook, at right guard; and Del Bjork, Astoria, right tackle.

In the backfield will be: Elton Owen, Eugene, quarterback; Elmore Borden of Olympia, Wash., or Bill Nye of Harrisburg, Pa., at right halfback; Phil Penn of Portland or Vernon Sprague of Eugene at left halfback; and Dick Bishop of Eugene at fullback.

In spite of the injuries, Schulz and Reinhart are reported to be viewing the situation optimistically, and promise the rooks a rough reception Friday night.

Dill Pickle Club Meets

Ingram's California Bears Dark Horse of Conference

(Editor's Note: This is the eighth and last of a series of articles written for the Emerald by Jack Miller, concerning the grid prospects of members of the Pacific Coast conference this year.)

By JACK MILLER

At last the year has come when Bill "The Great" Ingram has promised the ever faithful University of California alumni that he will present a team that the "grads" will be well proud of. Yes, this is 1933, the third year that the ex-sailor has been head man at the Berkeley school, having succeeded "Nibs" Price in 1931. Will the promise he made in 1931 be fulfilled?

With the already strong showings of Southern California and Stanford, the Bears' main source of competition for the coast crown, it appears highly improbable that Ingram will please the alumni, as defeats to either of these teams, regardless of how many other games William the Great may win for the Bears, ruins the chances for a pleasing season. Last Saturday Ingram's proteges surprised the gridiron world and with a last minute rally nosed out "Slip" Madigan's "Galloping Gaels" 14 to 13, after the Moraga Marauders piled up a 13-point lead in the first quarter.

Just two weeks ago on the very same field the Golden Bears tried to ride the Santa Clara Bronco, but proved too worthless rodeo men and tasted defeat to the tune of 7 to 0.

Summing up the individual members of the squad, Captain Johnny Ransome leads the tackle list, but failed to start against the Irish. In his place was Lutz, of whom little is known, but who seemed to hold his own against the Moragans. At the other tackle post was Bob Carlton, 200-pounder who hails from Long Beach.

Two more unknowns, Swinney and Boone, started in the guard positions against St. Mary's. The ousted men are Art Carlson and Howard Morris, both two-year veterans.

Howard "Red" Christie, 200-pound junior, who played regular last year as a sophomore, is doing well at the pivot post. When the going gets tough Ingram can send in Russ Calkins, who saw some action last year as Christie's understudy.

Big Boy

Here is one of the giants who is partially the cause of the cry in the South that St. Mary's has a "ten ton" team. He is Carl Jorgensen, two-year letterman at guard, who is one of the bulwarks of the Gael defense. He tips the scales above the 200-pound mark.

Seven Theater Passes Given to Emerald Staff

Seven members of the Oregon Daily Emerald staff were yesterday awarded passes to the McDonald and Colonial theaters for outstanding work on the campus daily during the past week.

Rose Himelstein turned in the most stories during the week and was closely followed by Newton Stearns. Dorothy Dill wrote the most headlines for the second consecutive week. She was followed by George Bikman and Mildred Blackburne, who tied for second position among the copyreaders. Henriette Horak won an award for handing in the most tips, or suggestions for possible stories. Bob Avison did efficient work on the sports staff.
